ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 20th December; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 18th December; and from Bengal to the 17th December.

AT the Council held at Calcutta, December 19th, the Hon. Sir David Barbour moved for leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Indian Merchant Shipping Act. The Bill, he said, had for its object the assimilation of the Indian to the English law in regard to the maximum load line; and under it the maximum load line will be fixed as nearly as may be in accordance with the English Act of 1890, and the instructions of the Board of Trade issued under that Act. When the Bill has been passed it will be lawful to declare by an order in Council that any load line fixed under the Indian law shall have the same effect as if fixed under the English Act. Mr. Barbour also introduced a Bill to amend the Registration of Ships Act. The object of this Bill was also to assimilate the Indian to the English law. It was desirable, he said, on general grounds that the rules for the ascertainment of register tonnage should, as far as practicable, be the same in India and the United Kingdom.

THE VICEROY has consented to certain officers of the Khyber Rifles being taken to Calcutta with the object of seeing the wonders of the capital of India. They will be shown the fort, arsenal, and all the chief places of interest. They will also visit the shipping, and probably the factories at Dum-Dum.

PRINCIPAL WORDSWORTH, of the Elphinstone College, has been entertained at a number of farewell parties during the past week prior to his departure for Europe.

ON Thursday evening the honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred upon him at a Special Convocation of the Bombay University.

MR. JUSTICE BIRDWOOD will succeed Dr. Wordsworth as Vice-Chancellor of the University of Bombay.

A SHOCKING catastrophe has occurred in Bombay. A large house in Bengalpoora fell, burying beneath its ruins over eighty people, killing twenty-nine persons, and seriously injuring many others.

A MOST daring act of Ghazeesm has just occurred in the very heart of the 12th Bengal Cavalry lines at Apozai. While the cavalry sowars were loading up prior to starting to garrison the new outpost of Nooaba and Gul Kach, a Ghazi, with drawn sword and shouting, dashed in among them, and wounded three men. Before any further harm could be done he was knocked down with a tent pole, and in a few minutes after his head was battered in with swords and stones.

THE HON. MR. GARSTIN is to continue to act as Governor of Madras till Lord Wenlock's arrival. Mr. Stokes, on return in a fortnight, reverts to his pucka appointment as Senior Member of Council with his junior in Council over him.

THE Local Governments have been asked for their opinions on the report of the recent Factory Commission, which has also been sent direct to the millowners' associations and to large employers of labour at the manufacturing centres for an expression of their views.

A FURTHER reduction of the military garrison in Burma will probably take place in the course of this cold weather, two Madras Infantry regiments being withdrawn. This, however, is contingent on the new Burma infantry battalions being raised to their full strength within the next few months. The Bengal Infantry regiment next on the roster for service in Upper Burma is the 7th.

THE Government of India have sanctioned the formation of a mounted police force for service at Bulkar, on the Somali coast, to consist of one jemadar and twenty-five sowars. The force will be armed with the Snider rifle.

THE Leprosy Commission, consisting of Dr. B. N. Rake, Dr. G. A. Buckmaster, and Mr. A. A. Kanthack, members deputed from England, and Surgeon-Majors Thomson and Barclay, the members deputed by the Indian Government, arrived in Madras on Dec. 11th from Hyderabad.

THEY left there for Trichinopoly, Madura, Tanjore, and other places in the south, and will return on Dec. 23rd.

AT the voting for the retiring members of the Council of the Governor-General of the French possessions in India there was a good deal of excitement, and near Pondicherry rioting and fighting occurred during the day. One man died from injuries received.

ACCORDING to news received from Rangoon the Chins have again been giving trouble near Chaung Kwa, having destroyed some bridges and carried off a quantity of telegraph wire.

COLONEL HUGHES has been appointed pucka Commissary-General, Bombay Army.

A SOMEWHAT serious break is reported on the Harnai section of the North-Western Railway, the river having undermined the line.

SIR ANDREW SCOBLE intends resigning early in April after the Calcutta session has been wound up, and Mr. Alexander Miller therefore will take over the appointment at Simla.

SIR GEORGE GREAVES, the Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army, has been on a tour of inspection in Kattywar and Cutch during the past week.

A TELEGRAPH OFFICE was opened at Fort Aijal on Dec. 10th, so that free communication can now be kept up between Assam and the most advanced post in the Northern Lushai Country.

A CAMP of Exercise has been held at Ahmedabad in connection with the 1st Battalion of the B.B. and C.I. Volunteers, and has proved a great success.

SURGEON-MAJOR COMMIN, the Protector of Emigrants in Calcutta, will probably be sent to the West Indies to report on coolie emigration to that part of the world.

MR. MALCOLM LAW, M.P., has arrived in Madras. After visiting the gold fields he will make an extended tour in India.

THE Chinese Amban remains at Lhassa, his presence in India not being necessary on the Commission which is to be formed under the stipulations of the treaty.

MR. PAUL has arrived in Calcutta from Darjeeling, and Mr. Hart is expected shortly. They meet in connection with the commission which has to be appointed under the Sikkim-Tibet treaty for furthering the communication and trade between the two countries.

MR. W. M. MACDONALD, a partner in the firm of Messrs. Benn, Ashley and Co., which recently suspended payment, has filed a petition in the Insolvent Debtors' Court, praying for the benefit of the Insolvency Act.

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE has arrived in Calcutta from Rangoon.

Digitized by Google

VOLUNTEER THOMAS, of the South Indian Railway Volunteers, has won the Madras Presidency Medal for this season.

MR. GANTZ has resigned his connection with the Madras Congress Committee.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY, the retiring Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, having made over charge of that office to Sir Charles Elliot, left for Europe by the mail steamer.

THERE is a rumour that the Hyderabad-Deccan Company have found some diamonds at last, and meditate creating a subsidiary company.

A TELEGRAM from Assam announces that Lienpunga, the notorious Lushai chief, surrendered unconditionally to the British Political Officer on the 9th December. Although he does not seem to have been so directly concerned in the recent outrages as Lalrhima, Kalkom, and other chiefs who are now in custody, Lienpunga has been mixed up in all the disturbances that have troubled the frontier of recent years, and his surrender coming after that of the others will be the deathblow of the National party in the North Lushai country.

NOT much has been done so far to carry out the recommendations of the Public Service Commission, sanctioned by the Secretary of State, as the changes proposed must necessarily be slowly introduced; but it may be noted that in the Gazette of India officers are now described as belonging to the "Indian" Civil Service, and not to Bengal, Madras, or Bombay. The coming year should witness the formal separation of the Services into Imperial and Provincial.

CONCURRENTLY with Mr. Mackenzie's assumption of the Chief Commissionership of Burma, several changes are taking place in the chief posts in the Commission. Mr. E. S. Symes, Commissioner of the Southern Division, has been appointed to fill the new Chief Secretaryship to the Local Government recently sanctioned by the Secretary of State. He will probably be succeeded by Mr. F. S. Copleston, Deputy-Commissioner of Myingyan. Mr. DeCourcey Ireland, Commissioner of Arracan, will retire shortly, and will be succeeded by Major Parrott. Mr. Thirkell White, recently gazetted to the old Chief Secretaryship, remains in his present post till he goes on furlough early next year.

BOMBAY MEDICAL RETIRING FUND.—The following is the allotments of annuities for 1891:—Deputy Surgeon-General C. J. Sylvester, M.D., £252; Surgeon-Major A. W. G. Adey, £210; Deputy Surgeon-General W. P. Partridge, £210,* Deputy Surgeon-General C. Joynt, M.D., £168,* Deputy Surgeon-General J. Cruickshank, M.D., £168,* and Deputy Surgeon-General C. K. Colston, £168.* (* Lapsed to Government, these officers having received a refund of their subcription.)

INDIAN TEA MARKET MEMORANDA.—Messrs. George White and Co. report that the market for Indian teas has been closed since the 18th ult, but reopened to-day with sales comprising 8,500 packages, which met with a good reception and brisk competition. Demand was chiefly concentrated on Souchongs and Pekoe Souchongs, and they may be quoted a halfpenny per lb. dearer, whilst other descriptions were in most cases firmer. During December 101,800 packages were offered at public auction, against 102,000 packages in the same month 1889. The quantity of this season's crop sold to the 31st ult. was about 53¼ million lbs., as compared with 50½ to same date last year.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—These shares yesterday were a little dull. Champion Reef declined 1-16, and Balaghat-Mysore 6d. Mysore Shares were last quoted 5 15-16 to 6 1-16, Nundydrog 1 11-16 to 1 13-16, Indian Consolidated New Company (9s. paid), 4s. 6d. to 5s., Balaghat-Mysore (New) 8s. to 8s. 6d., Champion Reef 1 1-16 to 1 3-16, Ooregum Ordinary 2⅛ to 2⅜, ditto Preference 2½ to 2⅝, Devala-Moyar 1s. to 1s. 6d., Nine Reefs New (fully paid) 2s. 3d. to 2s. 9d., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 5s. to 5s. 6d., Mysore Wynaad (18s. 6d. paid) 2s. 6d. to 3s., South-East Mysore 9d. to 2s., Indian Glenrock New 3s. 3d. to 3s. 6d., Gold Fields of Mysore 13s. to 14s., New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 2s., and Mysore West (17s 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d.

NOTES.

THERE is little to record of absorbing interest in the news just received from India, either by wire or mail. If the Anglo-Indian Press is correct, the National Congress scheme is now a dead failure, in spite of certain English M.P.'s and faddists to keep it alive. When it comes to Mr. Caine having to "send round the hat" for subscriptions to the Congress Press organ here things must be "poor indeed."

PROFESSOR WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Principal of the Elphinstone College, Bombay, must be counted as one of those men who may be called happy before they die. He leaves the seat of learning as an LL.D., a title conferred upon him in a blaze of literary fireworks, let off by Lord Harris, who, it seems, can quote poetry and Latin as well as play cricket. We had thought that his lordship came into the world chiefly to do the latter, and that he did it; but it appears that he loves the reading of books, "so long as their meaning is not distrained for the purposes of argument." This is good and—safe.

IMITATION is the sincerest flattery, and the English jerry-builder has his follower in Bombay. Through his methods an awful catastrophe has occurred there in the collapse of a five-story house in the Native town, by which "accident" thirty lives have been lost and fifty-two persons injured. But, as here, nobody will be hanged for this.

THE arrangements made for the interchange of parcels between Ceylon and India by value payable post have been at length concluded, and the system will be inaugurated from this month. Parcels will be exchanged between Ceylon and India by ordinary parcel post by the British India steamers, and no doubt advantage will be taken of the new system very largely.

GENERAL GILLESPIE'S sudden death was, says a Poona correspondent, a great shock to his numerous friends and admirers in this station. Though a hard master to please, and a man who made many enemies, he always worked himself harder than he did anyone else—which is saying a good deal—and possessed in a remarkable degree the power of attaching to himself the somewhat limited number of people to whom he took a fancy. That the country has been deprived of one of its most zealous and able soldiers no one can deny, and the number of officers who hastened from other, and many of them far distant, stations is in itself sufficient evidence of the estimation in which he was held in the Bombay Presidency.

THE prospect of the introduction into India of grain elevators for the cleaning of wheat is becoming more and more remote. Mr. Ozanne, the Director of the Bombay Department of Agriculture, is the latest authority who has thrown cold water on the proposal. The elevators, he says, "will not easily succeed, for there is an absence as yet of a real demand for pure wheat. As long as the manipulation of the comparatively pure sample sold by the producer can be turned to profit by the middleman, and as long as the cultivator cannot get a higher price for cleaner wheat, the scope of elevators does not appear large." It is strange in this matter of wheat-cleaning how all other countries find improvement so easy while India finds it so difficult.

THE Pioneer is down on the Babu:—Cato Major, it says, preached to the ancient Romans de stercorando, and if some natives of India would come forward with a similar evangel to the ryots, the cause of agriculture in this country might benefit materially. Babu Chunder Mukerjee would probably do a great deal more good by lecturing to his fellow countrymen on the use and abuse of manure than by declaiming on the principles of liberty or designing patterns for ideal constitutions on Congress note-paper.

THE Indian Mirror takes unkindly the observations in the Anglo-Indian Press that the Bengali cannot make out the meaning of the visit of the Czarewitch. It is amusing, it says, to see the manner in which Anglo-Indian newspapers have begun to discuss the all-absorbing question of the moment—not the National Congress—but the coming visit of the heir to the throne of all the Russias. These Anglo-Indian writers are not at all afraid of any evil consequences arising out of the visit to their vineyard of their hereditary and traditional enemy. Indeed, why should they be afraid? They rather welcome the visit, so they say, and they laugh at the Amrita Bazar Patrika for imagining, in common with other Bengalis, that the Czarewitch's visit to this country, means danger to the Indian Empire. No; these valiant Anglo-Indians are not the least bit afraid. The fear and the foreboding belong only to the pigeon-livered Bengali. Then, what do these frontier defences mean? What is the meaning of the annual expenditure of countless sums of money in war preparations against the Cossacks? And why is the daily reviling of the Muscovite allowed in the Anglo-Indian newspapers? Why, indeed? Ask the skull of poor Yorick, the King's Jester.

IT tries to explain this reference to Yorick:—Well, it would seem that everything connected with the Czarewitch's visit to India is one long jest. The visit itself is a jest. Lord Salisbury's welcome of the visit was a grim jest, indeed. The assumed indifference of the Government and the Anglo-Indians is yet another jest. But the best jest of all, at the expense of these same Anglo-Indians, is to be found in the columns of the London Spectator, and we proceed to extract it for the special benefit of the Bombay Gazette, that has chaffed the Patrika and the Bengalis for their fears. The Spectator begins its article on the subject of the Czarewitch's visit to India thus:—"Rather hard on the chickens, to be compelled to welcome the fox in their own farmyard, and to be exceedingly grateful for the honour done to them by the visit."

THE report of Mr. Bayley, on the last cold season's Shan Hill's Survey, has been issued. After an examination of various suggested routes, he selects that from Mandalay along the caravan route through Thibaw and Lashio to the Kunlon ferry on the River Salween. No part of the Shan States can be called easy for railway work, but the prospects of local traffic are quite as good as they were in any part of Burma, where railways have been successful, and decidedly better than in the upper half of the sanctioned line to Mogoung. A heavy capital expenditure will be necessary, but the report thinks that the suggested railway would pay its expenses in a few years, and in time return a handsome dividend. At present a hundred thousand bullocks are engaged in the caravan trade, and increased traffic might be expected from three sources. The first would be the Taungbaing tea trade, between Thibaw and Mandalay; the second, a mineral traffic from the coal mines at Lashio; the third, a China trade. No opinion can be expressed on the last till the country has been explored, but it is almost certain.

WRITING of the Calcutta Gold Mining Shares, the Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer says:—The market continues very sick; the tendency is towards lower prices, and it is almost impossible to sell large lines of shares at any price. There can be no real improvement in prices until some of the companies at present at work in Chota Nagpore are able to report that they have found gold in paying quantities, and of that there is little chance, at any rate for some months to come, if at all. A meeting of the Dhadka Company is to be held on Tuesday next, and Mr. Vansittart will probably again try and persuade his shareholders to give the agency to Messrs. Heilgers and Co., on their own terms; if the shareholders agree to such a spendthrift arrangement they deserve to lose the remainder of their money. Dhadkas have already dropped from Rs. 5 to 14 annas, so they have not got very much further to fall. During the week but little business has passed in gold mining scrip; Sonapets are quoted at about 1 5 16; Western Patkooms at 8 to 9 annas; Dumras have still further fallen to 10½ to 11 annas; Sonakhans to 8 annas; Pat-Pats to 14 annas, and Jut-puts to 5½ annas. It is rumoured that an enterprising local grocer is endeavouring to arrange to give away a gold share with every pound of tea he sells; this will doubtless help the market much more than Messrs. Kilburn and Co.'s recent circular.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 4.

The Anglo-Indian Press has taken little notice of the recent meeting of the National Congress. The Times of India describes it as a complete fiasco, adding that the Parsees, like the Mahommedans, again held aloof, and even the Bengali Baboos were too lukewarm to fill the seats at their disposal. Most of the other papers express similar views. On the other hand, the section of the Native Press which supports the movement pronounces the sixth Congress a magnificent success. The Indian Mirror sums up its most remarkable features thus:—

First, the presence on the platform of Mr. Schwann, M.P. for North Manchester; second, the election as delegates of two Englishmen, Mr. Caine and Mr. Yule; third, the fact that a Native lady delegate spoke for the first time; fourth, the resolution to hold the meeting of 1892 in London. The Mirror considers this resolution the most important that has hitherto been passed by the Congress, and believes that its assembling in England will convert the entire English nation to its views, and secure the speedy attainment of all its aims.

The social conference, which met in the Congress pavilion, also fell rather flat. It passed the sensible resolution that efforts should be made to check child marriage by encouraging the growth of a healthy public sentiment, but it threw no light on the reasons why the great mass of the Native population are so strongly opposed to the reform of a different description which is too often confounded with the marriage question—namely, the raising of the age of consent in marriage, as defined in the penal code. Probably, however, this dislike of the reform, which is especially strong in Bengal, is founded partly on the fear of having their homes exposed to police interference, and partly on the vague suspicion that it is aiming a covert blow at the Hindoo religion. It is understood that the Government has received a large number of petitions praying it not to move in the matter. It is to be hoped that if the Government determines to legislate it will carefully guard against misconception of its motives.

The committee appointed some months ago to consider the reform of the Bengal police began taking evidence on Friday. Several public associations were invited to send members to state their views. The representatives of the Eurasian Association, who were examined yesterday, expressed their opinion that the subordinate magistracy and the upper grades of police should be more largely recruited from Europeans and Eurasians.

Calcutta University has for the first time exercised its new privilege of submitting two names for appointment as Fellows. The elections excited much interest among the graduates. Several candidates were put forward, of whom two were chosen by ballot.

Active preparations are proceeding for the Black Mountain and Miranzai expeditions. The former will probably have some fighting, while the latter is not expected to meet with much opposition; but the Government has wisely organised both expeditions on a scale sufficient to crush any possible resistance.

The Ameer is still at Cabul, in spite of the doctor's advice that he should spend the winter in a milder climate.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 5.

The Mahomedan Observer states that a society in Hyderabad is about to despatch three missionaries to preach Islam in England. The Observer remarks that the money would be better spent in establishing a religious tract society to aid the efforts of the band of English Mahomedans already existing in Liverpool.

Sir Madhava Rao is recovering from his attack of paralysis. Dr. Vœlcker having completed his tour in India, is now in Calcutta engaged in writing a report on the Indian agricultural system.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE KHAKI CRAZE.

(Pioneer.)

Of all the bold commanders who adorn our Hist'ry's page,
The one that took my fancy most was Colonel Lefton Gage;
A Bayard as to chivalry, a martinet by whim,
He was literally worshipp'd by the soldiers under him.

Of antiquated tactics, as a propagandist staunch,
He deprecated rifle-fire, and swore by l'arme banche.
Well—he went on leave to Simla once for twelve or thirteen days,
And came back badly bitten by the khaki colour craze.

He heard a party lecture in the Institution there
(To an audience of young ladies with a parson in the chair),
Who said the hail of modern fire no army might abide,
So the only thing in future for the English was to hide.

"Now khaki is a colour," said the lecturer with glee,
"That, taking it all round, is very difficult to see;
So let us don it freely in the next great war we wage."
"Dear me, I never thought of that," said Colonel Lefton Gage.

He came back to his regiment, and then began with zeal
To dress them, till in khaki they were clad from head to heel.
He did away with sword and lance, and bade them trust their guns,
And as remounts refused to look at anything but duns.

The other horses that remained, the bays and browns and blacks,
He devised a khaki petticoat to cover up their backs;
And, not content with that, he then proceeded to invent,
For encamping in the open field, a khaki service tent.

The khaki tent completed, then said Lefton Gage, "Ah!
The foeman will be puzzled to discover where we are!
He'll never find us now, Begad! the lecturer was right,
The rôle for British cavalry's remaining out of sight."

Now Lefton's brother, Righten Gage, he also had command.
Of a regiment of lancers, perhaps the finest in the land;
He heard of Lefton's goings on with scorning and amaze,
And cursed along the folly of the khaki colour craze.

His notions about cavalry were singularly just;
He would never let them parry when they possibly could thrust.
He taught them that a lancer is of fighting men the flower,
And he fixed the pace for charming at a thousand miles an hour.

That a squadron of his regiment should never be dismayed.
Was his code, before an enemy of less than a brigade.
He disapproved of serre-files, and thought it only right
That the rear rank in an action should be foremost in the fight.

He dressed his men in scarlet; not unfrequently he said,
Because the sight of scarlet fills our enemies with dread.
And when the mounted soldier is engaging, hand to hand,
The use of trying to hide him he could never understand.

Then when the Indian summer sun is blazing in its height,
What clothing could be cooler or more suitable than white?
The khaki tents he laughed at and contemptuously "poohed,"
Which Lefton Gage considered was insufferably rude.

The looked-for war broke out, and to oppose its foremost brunt,
The brother's gallant regiments were ordered to the front;
But either with the other one disclaiming to consult,
Each followed his own theory, and this was the result.

Colonel Lefton took advantage of the features of the field,
And kept his men behind them most ingeniously concealed;
But the enemy with telescopes discovered his deceit,
And slated him with shrapnell till they forced him to retreat.

From principle—for fear, of course, was never in his mind—
He took another station, half-a-dozen miles behind,
And there, in friendly shelter, he dismounted them and fired,
Till his ammunition failed him, when he cautiously retired.

Now Righten, on the other hand, adhering to his form,
Let loose his scarlet squadrons on the foemen like a storm.
He charged them in the front and flank; he charged them in the rear,
And routed them completely with a ringing British cheer.

The war was quickly over, for the foe had left the place,
And the C.-in-C. commented on the merits of the case;
He summoned both the brothers, and received them in his tent,
Where he talked to them for several hours, but this is what he meant:

While loth to seem to quarrel with a gallant soldier's whim,
He thought that Colonel Lefton's troops were little use to him.
He admired the careful way they kept concealed behind a farm,
But they never did the enemy the slightest bit of harm.

Still, judging the manœuvres from a certain point of sight,
Colonel Lefton in his way was theoretically right;
While Righten, who in action had been going very strong,
By existing regulations was indubitably wrong.

To Colonel Righten Gage he then administered rebuke
(They raised him to the Peerage and created him a Duke).
When Lefton for his carefulness, with praises was dismiss'd,
(And now he's on the Half Pay Supernumerary List).

HOME EDUCATION OF INDIAN FEMALES.

(Journal of Education, Madras.)

One of the most discouraging features relating to female education in India is the small proportion of girls pursuing their studies beyond the Upper Primary stage. About two per cent. of the total number of girls under instruction are in the secondary stage, which means that in this vast country only between 6,000 and 7,000 girls receive an education up to the standard represented by the Middle School examination The amount of knowledge which a pupil acquires when in the Upper Primary stage is, as is well known, extremely meagre, and no pupil who stops at this stage can be in any way looked upon as having received a liberal elementary education. But the proportion of girls who reach even this stage is ridiculously low, not amounting to more than eight per cent. It will be seen, therefore, that the majority of girls under instruction leave school just at the time when they begin to be taught the rudiments of knowledge. If the education given in schools is to prove of substantial benefit it must of necessity be supplemented by a liberal training in Indian homes and zenanas. Christian Missions have of course been foremost in pushing on Zenana education in this country. In connection with almost all the leading Missions there has been organised an efficient system of home education, and it is a notable fact that the missionary character of Zenana education seems to arouse little or no opposition. Complete statistics are not available as regards the work of the various Zenana agencies, for the Mission bodies that carry on the work, excepting a few, furnish no returns to the Educational Department, as they receive no aid from Government. Only three societies are in receipt of aid in the Presidency, the Free Church Mission, Madras, the Church of England Zenana Mission under Miss Oxley and the American Mission, Guntur, under Miss Dryden. We are of opinion that the Madras Government should aid Zenana societies more liberally and relax the restrictions as regards levy of fees, curriculum of studies, &c. In Bengal the Mission agencies engaged in Zenana work are in receipt of a monthly grant of not less than Rs. 1,200 a month. It is encouraging to find that the home education of girls is being taken up by secular agencies. The Madras Branch of the National Indian Association has been carrying on this work in the city of Madras for several years past with much success. We are also glad to find that the recently-started branch Associations at Coimbatore and Salem have made Zenana education an important part of their work. We should like to see similar branches opened at Cuddalore, Vellore, Nellore, Palghat, Calicut, and Tellichery and other important towns where Mission agencies are not at work.

AN INDICATION OF POLICY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

If there had been any doubt existing as to the fitness of Sir Charles Elliott for the rule in Bengal, it would have been largely dispelled by his remarks at the St. Andrew's dinner. His Honour was too modest, perhaps, when he said that no such epoch-making speech as that of Lord Dufferin two years ago marks this last banquet; for the very sentence in which that remark occurred, coming from one just taking up the office of ruler in Bengal, meant quite as much as the Parthian shot of our late Viceroy. It is evident, too, that the Congress faction, to whom Sir Charles's words were indirectly addressed, attach due weight to the utterance. "The observations made on the Congress movement by Sir Charles Elliott at the St. Andrew's dinner," writes a native from Calcutta, "have produced a very disheartening effect upon Congress people, who apprehend greater hostility to their agitation during the coming régime than it met with through the speech of Lord Dufferin in the régime which has come to an end." No doubt the utterance last referred to had the effect of a thunderclap which cleared the air, so that a ruler of Bengal might see his duty towards the Congress agitation plainly. But for all the practical effect that has accrued up to date during Sir Steuart Bayley's tenure of office, the speech might never have been delivered. Putting two and two together, however—and, perhaps, making out the sum to be five—the Congress papers will, in Sir Charles Elliott's remarks, see a confirmation of their belief already expressed that Sir Steuart's resignation was caused by the fact that he refused to adopt a firm attitude against agitation. When, however, things had reached such a pitch that the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, presiding at a public meeting to do honour to the grandson of the Queen-Empress could be hooted down by a covertly mischievous faction of Congress students, it was evident that more than enough had been permitted. Sir Charles Elliott has had the courage to endorse Lord Dufferin's pregnant, though almost posthumous sentences, and he has clearly indicated the reliance which he places upon the support and the sympathy of the classes represented by the company at the St. Andrew's dinner. Moreover, Sir Charles Elliott has proved himself to be a strong and able administrator, and his references to the Congress and to the European community, taken in conjunction, justify the hope that, during his tenure of office, there shall be no room for doubt whether the Lieutenant-Governor or Babu S. N. Banerji rules Calcutta, such as might have arisen in the mind of a foreign spectator at the Prince Albert Victor Memorial meeting in Calcutta.

THE PACIFICATION IN BURMA.

(Pioneer.)

"He will hand over to you," said the Bishop of Rangoon at Friday's banquet in referring to Sir Charles Crosthwaite and addressing the new Chief Commissioner; "he will hand over to you a pacified country with the foundation of a sound administration firmly and securely laid." The bishop was speaking on an occasion when a little exaggeration might have been pardoned; but as a matter of fact he only spoke the bare truth. The country is pacified, and the foundations of good administration have been laid. Nobody claims more, and nobody denies that the order established can only be maintained, and the administrative edifice can only be built up and completed, by care, vigilance and assiduity. An opportune commentary on the Bishop of Rangoon's remark may be proved in the Report on violent crime in Burma during the third quarter of the present year, which has just been issued. This quarter never sees the dacoit at its worst, for the floods are over the land and the jungle is impassable or uninhabitable; but we have only to compare it with the corresponding period in previous years to appreciate the progress made. The truth is that nearly every leader of note has either been killed or captured or has surrendered, and their bands have been dispersed. Ya Nyun, about whose trial and sentence so ridiculous a fuss was made, surrendered just at the beginning of the quarter under notice, and his punishment has already had an excellent effect on the peace of the Myingyan District. During the three months also Kyan Wa, long the pest of the Akyab district, was killed, and his gang broken up, and Nga Nau, the most notorious dacoit in the Pyinmena district, was captured. There are still one or two leaders of less note at large, such as Sank Sa on the northern border of the Thayetmyo district; but they are the exceptions which prove the rule of general pacification, and their capture is only a matter of time. One feature in the quarter's record is especially noteworthy, as it affords a most satisfactory indication of the gradual improvement of police organisation. Several dacoit leaders have been arrested far away from the scene of their crimes, such as Lugalo Gyi, a Magwe dacoit, in the Prome district, and Pan Za, an Ava dacoit, in Meiktila—arrests which show that the dacoit is not only beginning to find his own district too hot to hold him, but other districts too wide awake to receive him.

DR. WORDSWORTH.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Dr. Wordsworth could not fail to feel deeply stirred at the enthusiasm with which he was greeted on Thursday afternoon by those amongst whom and in whose service he has spent the best years of a long Indian career. It is difficult to recall a spectacle so affecting in all the annals of our city. The stately hall of the University of Bombay was filled to overflowing by a sympathetic crowd, each and all of whom were connected with him either as students past or present, or by ties of personal friendship and regard. Mr. Justice Birdwood and after him Lord Harris insisted that the Bombay degree of Doctor of Laws is, from its very exclusiveness, an honour to be prized above most distinctions that can be won in India, and that it very fittingly crowned a career so intimately connected with liberal education in this Presidency as that of Dr. Wordsworth—the head of the Deccan College, the head of Elphinstone College, and, of late, the Vice-Chancellor of the University. The degree has only twice been bestowed, and curiously enough it is exactly six years since Lord Ripon stood in the same place as Dr. Wordsworth and received the same honour—but we venture to think with a difference. Lord Ripon's degree was political, the outcome of an unhappy and useless struggle that resulted only in embittered feeling for a time between the different sections of the community; and there were many who disapproved of the introduction of politics into our academical system. The honour done Dr. Wordsworth was spontaneous and unanimous, for, as Lord Harris happily said, the unanimity was only broken by Dr. Wordsworth himself. The proposal to confer this rare degree for a second time had been carried by acclaim in a Senate representing all races and creeds. But at first Dr. Wordsworth, with the modesty and self-abnegation that have characterised him throughout, was anxious to retire from India without any public demonstration of the regard in which he is held by all classes of the community. Lord Ripon, as many of us must remember, took the opportunity of making a formal political address. Dr. Wordsworth, though the temptation must have been great, though his Native friends must have been hungering for his words, and though he must, out of the very fulness of his heart, have longed to thank them for a reception at once unique and sincere, wisely thought that silence was more in harmony with academical usage. Probably many of his Native friends was at first disappointed, but Lord Harris amply made up for Dr. Wordsworth's judicious self-restraint. Nothing could have been more felicitous than his lordship's speech, nothing more grateful to his audience or more pleasing to Dr. Wordsworth himself. Lord Harris, in the nature of things, is an impartial critic and strange to all our old controversies, but keenly alive, all the same, to the literary and social and sympathetic qualities that have made Dr. Wordsworth's name a household word in Western India.

BENGAL.

(Dec. 17.)

IT is notified in the Bengal Government Gazette that the following gentlemen are reappointed Members of the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor for making Laws and Regulations:—The Hon. Sir H. L. Harrison, the Hon. T. T. Allen, the Hon. Dr. Rash Behari Ghose, and the Hon. Shahzada Mahomed Furrokh Shah. Mr. A. H. Wallis is also appointed a Member of the Legislative Council.

AT the approaching Calcutta Diocesan Conference the subject of the extent of local poverty will be discussed, with special reference to the provisions of the existing charities. The Hon. Mr. Beverley and the Rev. Mr. Hyde, it is thought, will be able to throw much light on a phase of Calcutta life, which is as appalling as anything that comes within the scope of General Booth's scheme.

THE Bengal Presidency Rifle Association Meeting commenced at Meerut on Monday. There are approximately 270 competitors for each match of the British army competitions, and over 200 for the Native army competitions, which is a very large increase upon the number of entries last year, making this probably the largest rifle meeting that has ever taken place in India. All the arrangements, such as squadding, &c., connected with the Native troops have been undertaken by Major Hill, commanding the 1st Battalion 2nd Goorkhas.

THEIR EXCELLENCIES LORD AND LADY LANSDOWNE, accompanied by Lady Evelen Fitzmaurice and Lady Beatrice Fitzmaurice, and a large party from Government House, including Lord William Beresford, Military Secretary, Colonel Ardagh, Private Secretary, and the Aides-de Camp to his Excellency the Viceroy, were present at the Garden Party on Friday evening at Belvedere. Opportunity was taken to introduce Sir Charles Elliott, the future Lieutenant-Governor, to the Native nobles and gentlemen present, among whom were H.H. the Maharajah of Doomraon, H.H. the Maharajah of Bettiah, H.H. the young Maharajah of Burdwan, who was accompanied by Lalla Bun Behary Kapoor, Rai Jai Prokash Lall, the Hon. Syed Ameer Hossein, and several others.

ON Saturday afternoon the flagship Boadicea arrived at Calcutta. At 5 P.M. Vice-Admiral the Hon. Sir Edmund Fremantle landed, and was met by Mr. Lister, A.D.C., who accompanied him to Government House, where he will be the guest of the Viceroy. The Boadicea is likely to remain in Calcutta for about ten days. The Admiral's visit is believed to have reference to Zanzibar affairs and the recent Protectorate established there, about which the Admiral will consult with his Excellency the Viceroy. The Boadicea, it will be remembered, was expected in Calcutta last year, but owing to some orders from the Admiralty, she was stopped at Madras, and ordered at once to proceed to Zanzibar. Next March the Boadicea's commission as a flagship on the East Indian Station will expire, and she is to be relieved by a much larger vessel.

MADRAS.

(Dec. 18.)

THE Madras Times hears that a gentleman, who has just arrived from England, has submitted a scheme to the President of the Municipal Commission for lighting the city by electricity and placing electric tramcars in it. He is supposed to be powerfully backed at home, and one of the promoters is already on his way out to this country to negotiate with the authorities concerned.

EIGHT tenders for a debenture loan of Rs. 50,000, to be raised by the Municipal Commissioners for the City of Madras, bearing interest at 5 per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly to debenture holders, and having a currency of fifty years, were opened on Tuesday morning at the Municipal Office. The gross amount of these tenders was Rs. 1,67,000, viz., two at par, one at 101, one at 102, two at 104, one at 105, and one at 105¼. Rs. 3,000 has been allotted to the Monegar Choultry at 105¼, and Rs. 47,000 to Pachaiyppah's Trustees at 105.

THE Civil and Military Gazette regrets to hear of the death of Mr. H. Wadley, Assistant Engineer, Public Works Department, Railway Branch, at sea. He had been suffering from fever in Biluchistan, and obtained two months' leave for a sea voyage from Karachi viâ Bombay, Goa, Colombo, Penang and Singapore, in the P. and O. steamship Thames. Shortly after leaving Penang (on the return) Mr. Wadley died, and was buried at sea. He was twenty-nine years of age, and has left a widow and several children.

THE Madras Government having requested the instructions of the Secretary of State with regard to the question as to whether, under the Government of India Act of William IV., the Hon. Mr. Garstin, C.S.I., is entitled to retain the office of Provisional Governor after the return of the Hon. Mr. Stokes, C.S.I. (who is due there in eight or ten days,) and until the arrival of Lord Wenlock, has been informed that Mr. Garstin is so entitled. Consequently, Mr. Stokes will revert to his pucka appointment of Senior Member of Council, with his junior in Council in temporary authority over him. It is supposed, observes the local Mail, that Lord Cross referred to the Law Officers of the Crown in England the point that was raised in connection with a state of things which the framers of the Act had not contemplated.

DURING the past week, reports the Bangalore Evening Mail several cases of anthrax have appeared in the lines of the 21st Hussars, and four horses have died within a short time of one another. The disease has not been quite stamped out yet at Angram, notwithstanding that special dry forage has been procured for the animals from beyond the Hebbal Ranges, and every precaution has been taken to prevent a spread of the destructive malady.

MONSIEUR NOUET will leave Pondicherry by the Messageries Maritimes steamer Nienmen, at the end of this month, en route, via France, to his new station at Martinique. Monsieur Clement Thomas, the new Governor, is expected to arrive at Pondicherry by the next French mail steamer, due the first week in January.

THE Madras Government has approved the recommendation of the Superintendent of Census Operations to omit the column for religion in the Census Table, as the caste column is sufficient by itself. At the same time Government expresses its desire to have, in addition to Table IX. (education) of the Imperial series, a special provincial table based on the age-periods proposed by this Government for adoption.

FROM the 29th ult. to the 5th inst., three Europeans, one East Indian, eleven Native Christians, 214 Hindus, and 29 Mahomedans died within the municipal limits in Madras, making a total of 258 persons. The average of the corresponding week for the ten previous years was 313. The deaths are thus classified, viz., one from small-pox, two from measles, 59 from fever, 21 from dysentery, 9 from diarrhœa, and 166 from other diseases. The death-rate in the week under notice was 33·6 per 1,000 per annum. The mean of the ten previous years was 40·9 per 1,000 per annum.

THE Flag Staff of Fort St. George was raised on Monday morning, after having been lowered for two months in expectation of the winds and storms of the North-East Monsoon which ought to have, but never did, come to pass. The Monsoon has been an utter failure so far as this part of the Presidency is concerned, writes the Madras Mail, and the high prices for food grain now current in the local bazaars indicate the apprehension of comparative scarcity.

THE Madras Civil Service is losing another "Father," writes a local contemporary; and before the newest batch of competition wallahs has shaken into harness Mr. Whiteside will have gone over to the great army of India's pensioners. He is another instance of the folly of a hard-and-fast age limit, for in spite, or perhaps indeed because, of an exceptionally small share of leave to Europe in his long service, he still enjoys a physique which would permit of his continuing on the active list. But it may not be, and a large circle of friends and acquaintances will soon feel the gap caused in it by the absence of the genial presence of the prince of raconteurs. In his grave phase he will be as much missed as in the gay, for he has long been a wise counsellor in the management of church institutions, and the foliage of Madras will be sensibly diminished by the withdrawal of one of the grandest of grand old gardeners. He is to be accompanied on his return to England by Sir Richard Barlow, who also leaves India for good. Mr. Whiteside is to be entertained by the Acting-Governor at Guindy on Friday evening next.

THE Madras Government has, for some time past, been desirous of placing a professional engineer in charge of the chief civil works in the Ganjam Agency, with the object of improving the existing communications and of opening up the country by new lines of road, but the difficulty in the way of doing so hitherto has been that the Public Works Department was unable to spare an officer for the work. Col. Pennycuick has now, however, informed Government that the services of an Assistant Engineer can be made available from the beginning of next official year, and it is probable, we understand, that an European officer will be selected for this important work. The grant for civil works in the Agency for 1891-92, which will be placed at the disposal of the Public Works Department, has been fixed at Rs. 23,000, and the Government has expressed its readiness to sanction during the course of that year whatever additional grants may be required by the Assistant Engineer and are recommended by the Chief Engineer, Mr. C. E. Johnson, the present agent to the Governor in Ganjam, who is well acquainted with the district and its needs, has been requested to afford every assistance to the special officer on his first arrival, and to furnish copies or originals of such past reports on the Agency, as may be likely to be of use to him.

BOMBAY.

(Dec. 20.)

THE ballotting at the rooms of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce on Wednesday evening for Chairman of the Chamber for the coming year, resulted in the re-election of the Hon. L. R. W. Forrest, of the firm of Messrs. Killick, Nixon and Co.

THE following appointments have been made, with effect from the date of the retirement of Mr. W. Wordsworth, M.A.:—Mr. R. G. Oxenham, M.A., to be Principal, Elphinstone College. Mr. F. G. Selby, M.A., to be Principal, Deccan College.

HIS Excellency the Governor in Council is pleased to appoint Mr. G. W. Vidal, C.S., to act as Chief Secretary to Government, Revenue, Financial, General, and Separate Departments during the absence of Mr. J. Nugent, C.S., or pending further orders.

MR. J. D. REES, who was appointed on the staff of Lord Wenlock, the Governor-designate of Madras, left Bombay for Cairo by the P. and O. mail steamer on Saturday last, where he will await the arrival of Lord Wenlock, whom he meets at Ismailia, from which place Mr. Rees accompanies the Governor's party to Madras.

IT is stated that Mr. Vidal is to act as Chief Secretary to the Government during the three months or thereabouts that Mr. John Nugent will be absent from Bombay in pursuance of his duties as Additional Member of the Supreme Legislative Council.

AMONGST the passengers who arrived here from Europe by Monday's mail steamer were Lady and the Misses West, Sir Donald Wallace, Bishop Thorburn, Sir H. and Lady Tichborne, Lady Harry and Miss Prendergast, Colonel H. G. Jarrett, Mr. Baldwin Latham, and Mr. G. C. Whitworth, Judge and Sessions Judge at Khandeish.

WE are glad to observe, says a Kurrachee paper, that our well-known citizen, Mr. N. N. Pochajee, has suggested the erection of some permanent memorial in memory of the late Mr. McHinch, as also of founding a Scholarship in the Grammar School bearing his name. No better means could be adopted to perpetuate the name of one of the most public-spirited citizens Kurrachee ever was proud of.

H.E. NAWAB SIR KORSHEDJAH BAHADOOR SHAMSIR OOMRAH, K.C.I.E., accompanied by Mr. Shapoorjee Edulje Chinoy, his Zenana, and a few followers, arrived here on Wednesday to take leave of Sir Steuart Bayley, the retiring Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, who goes home by to-day's mail steamer. The Nawab and family are at present staying at the bungalow of the late Nowrojee Davur, at Cumballa Hill.

A SPECIAL meeting of the Bombay Municipal Corporation will be held on Monday, at 3 P.M., to consider a proposal by Dr. Blaney that a deputation of the Corporation should be appointed to wait on his Excellency the Viceroy for the purpose of pointing out the hardship inflicted on the Corporation by the resolution of the Government of India, which restricts the period to forty years of the time which the loan for the Tansa Works should run, and of soliciting that an extension of that period to 100 or 80 years may be granted.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency Season report for the past week:—Rain during the week in all districts of the Deccan and in Shikapore, Hyderabad, Panch Mahals, Belgaum, Kanara, and Kattywar. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops completed in several districts, progressing in others. Standing crops damaged by locusts in one taluka of Kurrachee and by insects in parts of Bijapore; cotton affected by cloudy weather in parts of Broach, diseased in one taluka of Surat and blighted in three talukas of Dharwar; jowari in one taluka of Sholapore damaged by frost; late crops otherwise good except in two talukas of Satara. Fodder scarce in two talukas of Nassik, four of Satara, two of Dharwar, and one of Khandeish, Poona, Ahmednugger, and Baroda. Agricultural stock good, except in one taluka of Kurrachee, Khandeish, and Ahmednugger, and two of Nassik.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDE AND PUNJAB.

(Dec. 18.)

THE stoppage of trains on the North-Western Railway near Rawalpindi by swarms of locusts has already been recorded; but as further evidence of the density of the flight on this occasion it is stated that as they passed over Jhelum it became as dark in the offices as in a thunderstorm, and when they settled on the trees they broke off main branches purely with their weight. Billions were swept into trenches and burnt. Broken branches and others twisted downwards out of shape may be seen by hundreds on the trees.

THE first step has now been taken towards a bifurcation of study in the Intermediate Arts' Examination in connection with the Allahabad University. The proposals of the Faculty of Arts on the subject have yet to be submitted to the Syndicate; but if they are adopted, candidates who enter for the intermediate examination, while they will all be examined in English, mathematics, and logic, will for the rest have two alternative courses open to them. Those who desire to restrict themselves mainly to a literary course may take a second language in addition to English, and either history or trigonometry and conic sections; while those whose bent lies towards science will take trigonometry and conic sections, with elementary physics and chemistry. The proposals may be open to criticism in detail; but some such bifurcation has long been recognised as both desirable and inevitable by all competent observers of the needs and tendencies of modern education.

OBITUARY.

GENERAL JOHN GORDON PETRIE, C.B., of the R. (late Bombay) A., retired, died on the 31st ult., at 9, Cranbury-terrace, Southamption, at the age of sixty-eight. The deceased entered the service in 1841, became lieutenant in 1843, captain in 1853, major in 1858, lieutenant-colonel in 1861, colonel in 1866, major-general in 1877, and lieutenant-general in 1878. General Petrie commanded the Artillery throughout the Abyssinian Campaign from the 1st of January, 1868, and was present at the action of Arogee and capture of Magdala, being mentioned in despatches, and receiving the C.B. and medal.

MAJOR-GENERAL JOHN PENTON.—General Penton died at his residence, Cowbridge, Lostwithiel, on the 24th ult., in the 62nd year of his age. He was born on November 27th, 1829, and entered the Army on June 6th, 1851, as ensign in the 84th Regiment; obtained his lieutenancy on September 13th, 1853, and his company on August 22nd, 1858. On April 5th, 1864, he was promoted major, was transferred to the 91st Highlanders on October 28th, 1864, and to the 89th Foot September 15th, 1869; obtained the brevet rank of lieutenant-colonel on March 28th, 1874, lieutenant-colonel 89th Foot, August 12th, 1876, brevet-colonel March 28th, 1879, and was placed on half-pay August 12th, 1881. He was present with Outram's force at the Alumbagh, at the fall of Lucknow; commanded three companies of the 84th at the storming of the Kaiserbagh; served with Lugard's Column, and was present in the actions of April 17th and 26th, the relief of Azimghur, and the pursuit of Koer Sing (medal with clasp, and a year's service for Lucknow). He commanded a brigade in Afghanistan from March 22nd, 1881, to May 6th, 1881; and on April 1st, 1882, was appointed to the command of the 100th Regimental District at Birr, in which he was brought into close contact with five Irish Militia regiments—the King's County, Queen's County, Royal Meath, Royal Longford, and Westmeath. The late general always held the Militia Force in the highest estimation, took the liveliest interest in the regiments under his command, and his retirement from the service on Oct. 2nd, 1886, was a subject of deep regret to all ranks who had the advantage of being brought into contact with him. He was granted the hon. rank of major-general on his leaving the service.

COLONEL THOMAS SIMPSON, late 52nd Foot, and hon. colonel of the Armagh Militia, died on 30th November last at Ballyards, Armagh, at the age of 80. CAPTAIN ROBERT VILLIERS PHILLPOTTS, R.E., son of the late Gen. A. T. Phillpotts, Col. Commandant, R.A., died at Cairo on the 22nd ult., aged 35. The deceased obtained his lieutenancy in January, 1873; and his Captaincy in January, 1885. He served in the Afghan War of 1878-80, and was present at the attack and capture of Ali Musjid, receiving the medal with clasp. He also served with the Mahsood Wuzeeree Expedition of 1881.

IN a recent sermon on missions the Bishop of Bombay referred to the methods of the Salvation Army in language which has attracted some attention. His lordship first spoke of the feelings of Anglo-Indians as a body with regard to mission work, and expressed what he believed would be the reply of many in the following words: "I know too much about them, about the weakness ot the system and of the workers, about the general inadequacy of the works, about the lives of many of the converts." The Bishop then referred to the necessity for more effort among Christian laymen, if missionary work was to be carried on successfully. The Church of England has certainly not been very conspicuous in encouraging lay effort of an evangelistic kind, mainly perhaps because the want of special training is supposed to open the door to heterodoxy, and also because too much activity is apt to cause a partial clearance in a fold which opens its doors to a great variety of sheep. In England the success of the Salvation Army has led some clergymen to adopt an imitation of the Army's open-air methods, but these endeavours to combine the use of the liturgy with solemn processions, which were too conventional for out-door audiences, the attempt does not appear anywhere to have succeeded. The Bishop of Bombay would apparently unite the decorum of the English Church with the strong faith and fiery zeal of General Booth's followers. He proceeds to say:—"Strip off the husk of extravagance, of jarring deplorable eccentricity. Straighten out the inward twist of which, alas! that extravagance is the symbol; look only at the underlying intensity, at the vivid realisation of the unseen, at the consuming enthusiasm and self-sacrifice, and you will see in a body which is among us the kind of faith of which I speak. When the Church takes that grip of individuals that the Salvation Army takes; when she displays that fiery enthusiasm which turns every convert into a worker; when she ignores, in the fervour of her faith, that distinction between gentle and simple which paralyses her efforts to-day—when she does these things, and not till then, will the reproach that now lies on her Missions be rolled off by the power of her faith." The question is no doubt a very large one, but there can be no reason why the reverence and decorum of the English Church should extinguish faith and zeal, and if the Church discovers the true cause of the want of life in its followers as compared with the Salvation Army, it may treble its usefulness both at home and abroad, without impairing the reverence and refinement which have reached their greatest perfection under the sanction of its teaching.

NATIVE PRESS.

THE INDIAN MERCHANDISE MARKS ACT.—The Rast Goftar says:—The report of the Customs Administrator for the past official year gives some interesting particulars about the working of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act which came into force on April 1st, 1889. It is pleasing to note that, although the Act was looked upon with great apprehension in many quarters as a possible infringement of liberty of trade, its working has created little friction, and its provisions are meeting with general acquiescence from the mercantile world. The Customs authorities appear to be working the Act with tact and judgment, and while they show no undue leniency which, according to Mr. Spence, Commissioner of Customs, is mistaken by Natives for weakness, a very light penalty was, as a general rule, imposed in every case of contravention of the Act. There were in all 880 seizures under the Act, and penalties were imposed in 809 cases. It was only in a very few exceptional cases that a fine of such a large sum of Rs. 500 was imposed. Eight cases of silk rolls of satin imported from Marseilles were found to bear labels in Chinese characters, for which a fine of Rs. 500, together with redemption penalty of an equal amount, was imposed. The total amount of fines and penalties recovered under the Act amounted to Rs. 10,515; that is, an average of about Rs. 13 per each seizure. As the requirements of the Act will come to be better known to the mercantile community, it is believed that offences under the Act will greatly decrease. In fact, its salutary effects are already perceptible.

THE SILVER QUESTION.—The Kaisar-i-Hind remarks:—With silver in the throes of a congested and sensitive market which not even the sturdiest exploiters of the metal are able to control consecutively for two weeks together, with a monetary crisis still prevailing, and with the dislocation of the trade between silver-using aud gold using countries, it is quite in order that the redoubtable Bi-metallic League, of which Mr. H. H. Gibbs, one of the Governors of the Bank of England, is the President, should once more put itself in evidence. So the League has come forward with what may be called its latest manifesto on the present position of the Silver Question. Firstly, it declares that its object seems to be still misunderstood. It has reasonable ground to complain that, in spite of the wisest publicity given to its views, it should be thought that the result aimed at was to raise the price of silver, and consequently the value of the rupee. The misimpression seems to have been strengthened by the effect on the silver market wrought by the recent legislation on silver by the United States. The League is annoyed that so absurd a misimpression should prevail. This argues that either the widest publicity it has given to its views has failed to influence those to whom it has appealed, or that the latter lack that capacity which is needed to comprehend its objects. Be the impression made by the appeal what it may, the League is quite justified in observing that the public assumption is wrong and must be emphatically repudiated.

THE SALT ACT.—The Gujrati remarks:—Two hard cases came up before the High Court recently on a reference by Mr. Woodward, District Magistrate of Kanara, from a decision of the second class magistrate at Ankola, who convicted two Kunbee women of manufacturing salt without a license, under Sec. 17 of Bombay Act 2 of 1890, para A, fine one Rs. 10 and the other Rs. 15, with the alternative of eight and ten days' imprisonment respectively. . . . . The learned Judges pointed out that the new definition of the term "manufacture" was so comprehensive as to convert into crimes some perfectly innocent practices connected with the use of salt for domestic purposes. We hope after this judicial pronouncement such a harassing piece of legislation will not be allowed to disgrace the statute-book. There is no measure which has given rise to such widespread dissatisfaction as the Salt-tax, and no Bill excited so much opposition as the Bombay Salt Act. The Hon. Mr. Becherdass alone raised his voice against its oppressive provisions, but certain johokum and "milk-and-water" Councillors silently looked on, and the Bill passed into law. The two cases that were decided by the High Court clearly show how legislative measures aimed at the use of the very necessaries of life, and passed in the teeth of popular opposition, prove an engine of oppression, pure and simple. We only hope that Lord Harris's Government will at once amend the Act so as not to compel magistrates and High Court Judges to convict innocent men and women against the plainest dictates of common sense, justice, and humanity.

REPORT OF THE FACTORY COMMISSION.—When the Factory Commission, says the Dinbandhu, was appointed to inquire into some of the important questions affecting the mill industry of India, speculation was rife amongst some of our contemporaries as to its real objects and aims, and they even went to the length of doubting its bona fides. They thought that all this force was going to be enacted to satisfy the Indian mill operatives outwardly, but the real object was to sacrifice Indian interest to the good of Lancashire millowners. The report is now out, and no man in his sound senses will venture for a moment to say that the inquiry was slipshod, the opinions of the Commissioners as regards the several queries set to them unfair or biassed in any way, or the recommendations made by them for the benefit of operatives unreasonable. We must say that the Commissioners have acted very fairly and justly between millowners and their operatives, and they have left no room for the former to cavil at their opinion and recommendations. The mill operatives, on the other hand, have good reason to congratulate themselves upon what little they have been able to obtain by their constant agitation and representation of their grievances to Government in a loyal and constitutional manner. Of the several grievances of which mill hands often complain none are worse than working from thirteen or fourteen hours a day without getting even one day's rest in seven days, not receiving payment of their wages till the next month is up, and providing for injured hands, and lastly taking work for twelve or thirteen hours even from children under fourteen years of age. All these points have been very carefully gone into by the Commission, and we have no doubt that the Government of India will take them into their consideration when they legislate for Indian factories. As the report of the Commission is now before Government we trust that no time will be lost in amending the old Act, which properly speaking ought to have been amended in 1885; but we need not regret the time that has been lost, because if the old Act had been amended five years ago all the information which the Commission has now collected would not have been available to Government.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY AND THE NAVAL VOLUNTEERS.

An interesting ceremony took place on Thursday morning on board the training brig Chinsurah, when the Calcutta Naval Volunteers presented their honorary captain, Sir Steuart Bayley, with a handsome album, containing twenty-two photographs of prominent events in the history of the corps. The Volunteers, eighty-two in number, under the command of Captain Petley, fell in on board at seven A.M. They were drawn up in two divisions on the port and starboard sides of the brig, and on a small table covered with a Union Jack was placed the album. Sir Steuart Bayley was received at the Ghat by Captain Petley, and on his reaching the brig the Volunteers presented arms. Sir Steuart Bayley then inspected the corps, and passed over to the launch Leopard, where he was shown the Nordenfeldt quick-firing and other machine guns which form part of the armament of the launch. The mechanism of these guns, and the ease with which they were handled, was explained. The ceremonial part of the proceedings then followed.

Captain Petley said: Sir Steuart Bayley,—About two years ago I told the Naval Artillery Volunteers that if speech making were to form part of my duties I should hesitate to continue as their Commander, and although I was ready to speak up for them whenever opportunity or occasion arose, I felt that what I am called upon to say to-day was a little more difficult, as I am not able to express in adequate terms the unanimous feelings of the men on this occasion. In the first place we have to thank you, Sir Steuart Bayley, for your kindly acceding to our wishes in becoming Honorary Captain, and the fact of your having done so has materially assisted in bringing the corps up to its present state of efficiency and numbers. We have to thank you exceedingly for the kind way in which you have placed Bengal Government boats and vessels at our disposal, and so afforded an opportunity of giving the men practical instruction in their work combined with many a day's enjoyable outing. In taking farewell of you, the men have desired me to ask you to accept this album as a memento of the Naval Volunteers, and it is given to you as a token of their esteem and respect. The pages are not all filled up, but they have left a few blanks to be filled up at future times when they will send you photographic records of their future outings. They also hope that you will not absolutely disconnect yourself with the corps when you leave the country, and they hope you will permit them to elect you as an honorary member of the corps.

In accepting the album Sir Steuart Bayley made a brief reply. He said it was extremely gratifying to him to meet them before leaving India. He need not tell them that he was very much gratified at the kind manner in which he had been received, and at the handsome present that had been made to him, and he should always keep in memory his association with the corps. It was a matter of regret to him that he had been able to do so little to assist them, and what he had been able to do he had done with pleasure in carrying out the operations the corps had undertaken. Nothing conduced more than a day's good outing to drill and discipline, and these reflected great credit on the men and their officers. He had to congratulate the corps on their very successful march to Diamond Harbour. It had been talked of a good deal, and was looked upon as a very creditable performance. He need only add that the request Captain Petley had been good enough to make to him, to continue as an honorary member, was one which he agreed to with great pleasure, as it relieved him to some extent of the grief he felt in severing his connection with the corps. In concluding, Sir Steuart wished the corps and its commander all success and prosperity.

Sir Steuart Bayley then took his departure.—Englishman, December 12th.

SERVICE DINNER TO SIR STEUART BAYLEY.

The Bengal Civil Service entertained their retiring Chief at dinner on Saturday, December 13th. Covers were laid for about 100 at the Town Hall, where the chair was taken at 8 P.M. precisely by the Hon. H. L. Tottenham. Among the distinguished guests were Sir C. Ellott, Sir D. Barbour, the Hon. R. Crosthwaite, Sir A. Scoble, Sir A. Croft, and Messrs. Harvey, Cunningham, Lyall, Hudson, and others. M. Bonsard, of the Hotel de Paris, was the caterer, and provided a most elaborate ménu.

Due honours having been tendered to the toast, proposed by the Chairman, of the Queen-Empress, that of the guest of the guest of the evening was given in a few well-chosen words. Mr. Tottenham alluded to the fact that he had been a coeval of Sir Steuart Bayley's at Haileybury thirty-seven years previously. He gave a brief sketch of the Lieutenant-Governor's official career, and wished him God-speed in the name of all present.

Sir Steuart Bayley replied, thanking the large and representative assembly of his colleagues before him for their good wishes. In spite of the Chairman's youthful appearance, he added, it was nearer forty than thirty-seven years since they had been comrades in the Hertfordshire College, which had played so conspicuous a part in forming the rulers of our Indian Empire. The race was well-nigh extinct, and he would be the last Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal who had received his training there. It would be his proudest boast that he striven to act up to its traditions. He was not aware, until he had resolved to sever his connection with this country, how many and binding were the ties which connected him with India. He had been fortunate beyond the average —fortunate in having enjoyed an extraordinary rapid promotion, fortunate in his domestic relations, fortunate in his friends. A civilian's life nowadays was very different to what it was when he landed in the country thirty-seven years ago. It was compassed about by anxieties, full of those petty annoyances which were really more trying to the temper than real misfortunes. Life in the interior was now one of isolation from wholesome influences. There was the great house difficulty, which pressed for solution. Civil servants were exposed to hostile and sometimes to malignant criticism. That under so many adverse circumstances the tale of work rendered was so full argued well for the sense of duty with which Englishmen were still animated. His hearers must not suppose that those who sat in arm chairs in Calcutta and issued edicts consigning many of them to banishment from civilisation failed to sympathise with their difficulties. On the contrary, he often felt deeply the necessity of inflicting hardship on individuals in the interest of the public service. What measure of success had attended his administration had been, in large measure, due to the loyal support he had received from the noble service to which he was proud to belong. If anything could temper the grief which he felt at severing his well-nigh lifelong connection with this country it was the thought that he left the reins of power in such capable hands as those of Sir Charles Elliott, whose health, as Chief-elect of the Bengal Civil Service, he had the honour of proposing.

Sir Charles Elliott rose to acknowledge the toast. He said that he could not claim an acquaintance with his illustrious colleague of so long a date as that which the Chairman could boast. His personal knowledge of Sir Steuart Bayley dated no further back than the year 1877, when the latter was Secretary to the Government of India in the Famine Department, while he was Famine Commissioner for the then province of Mysore. In the course of arranging his papers lately, prior to leaving Simla, he had stumbled on a portly bundle of letters which Sir Steuart had addressed to him while acting in that capacity. He was filled with admiration at the pains which the guest of the evening had taken to explain difficulties, to indicate the policy he had adopted, to guide by wise counsels. Some years later he had again come in official contact with Sir Steuart Bayley, when succeeding him in the Commissionership of Assam. Once more he recognised the same measure of ready help, the same loyal support in assuring a continuity of policy. Now, for the third time he had to acknowledge on the part of his predecessor in office an earnest desire to lighten the administrative burden by a painstaking exposition of difficulties and experiences. When he (the speaker) very unexpectedly received Lord Lansdowne's commands to undertake the high functions on which he was about to enter, he was filled with perplexity. The Lieut.-Governorship of Bengal was said, and probably with some truth, to be second only to the Czardom of Russia in the demands it made on the governing power of him who was called on to fill it. As all lovers of Dante would do, he turned to that glorious poet for inspiration. Opening the third canto of the Inferno, he came on the well-known line: "All hope ye leave behind who enter here." This was sufficiently discouraging, though Bengal was not precisely an Inferno. But a few lines further on came the poet's appeal to Virgil for aid. The true import of Virgil's reply had escaped the critics. Instead of brooding over the awful inscription that frowned on them from the gates of hell, he showed how the powers of evil might be disarmed—

> "Here thou must all distrust behind thee leave, > Here be all fear extinguished."

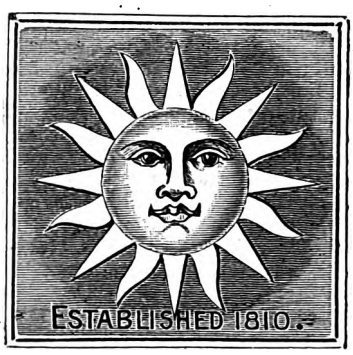
That was the key to the difficult problem—perfect trust in the instruments at one's hand. He was proud to affirm that in the good men and true whom he saw around him he had helpmeets who would stand by him in difficulty and aid him by advice and loyal co-operation.

After the ringing applause evoked by this eloquent address had subsided, the Chairman proposed the health of the Father of the Feast, Mr. C. E. Buckland, to whose energy and organising power he attributed the success of the demonstration. Mr. Buckland, who was warmly received, briefly acknowledged the toast. He said that he had so often made arrangements for festivals of the sort that he almost thought that a special department should be added to the rather multifarious functions of the Secretary of the Board of Revenue —that of getter-up of civilian dinners to retiring lieutenant-governors. If the billet carried a remunerative allowance he would have no objection to hold it permanently. (Laughter.) He had inherited and personal reasons for taking the part he did in the present instance—inherited, because Sir Steuart Bayley's father gave his (the speaker's) father a nomination to the Civil Service, and personal, because he entertained towards his departing Chief warm feelings of attachment, which he felt sure were shared by all who came in contact with the latter. He was equally confident that Sir Steuart, in the ease and dignity of his official position at home, would not forget his many friends in India, but would strive in the future, as he had in the past, to further their interests. He thanked those present for their kindly appreciation of his services on this occasion, and devoutly hoped that this might not be the last in which his colleagues would unite to pass a pleasant and profitable evening together. (Cheers.)

The Viceroy's Band, under the direction of Herr von Goldstein, played a selection of music during the dinner.

SIR STEUART BAYLEY'S DEPARTURE.



The Mahomedan Literary Society and the National Mahomedan Association, attended by separate deputations, presented farewell addresses at Belvedere, on the 15th Dec., to Sir Steuart Bayley. In replying to the address of the Mahomedan Literary Society, which was read by Nawab Abdul Luteef, Sir Steuart said it had been a consistent object with him to foster Mahomedan educational efforts. He held that by their own spontaneous educational energy and of activity, rather than by exceptional indulgences, they would find a way to secure a fair share of employment under Government, and of political influence. He trusted their leaders would use their influence to induce their co-religionists to dwell in peace and harmony with the members of other religions. Prince Furrokh Shah read the address of the National Mahomedan Association, which referred to Sir Steuart Bayley's willingness to extend his aid to the Mahomedan community whenever opportunity permitted. In replying, the Lieutenant-Governor said it had always been a main object of his administration to encourage Mahomedan educational efforts, believing he could do more in that way to help them than by any peculiar indulgence, to secure that share of employment and political influence which he earnestly wished them to secure. The Mahomedans had made large strides he found everywhere in spontaneous educational activity, and he hoped this would be continued. He repeated the hope that they would do all they could to promote harmony in their relations with other communities.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 6, 1891.

INDIA, 1890.

WE are not of those who consider that the birth of a New Year should always be utilised for the purpose of carrying out the process referred to in the old proverb of "Paving hell with good intentions." There are, however, worthy individuals who insist on looking back upon the shortcomings of their actions during the year that has just passed away, and making excellent resolutions for self-reforms during the year that has just dawned. The habit is as old, perhaps, as created memory, and the result has been much the same in all the ages—the good resolutions have lasted for "a day and a night," and been forgotten in the morning. Or, as one who holds our sentiments, wrote many New Year Days ago in Calcutta on this self-same subject:—

"The sins we most constantly cherish
We vow shall at once disappear,
'Neath the excellent coating of whitewash
We give them each 'Happy New Year.'

"So, filled with mince pies and mince piety,
Let's offer our annual prayer;
And commence a fresh score with the Devil
From the date of this 'Happy New Year.'"

And as it has been with many individuals so has it been with many journalists. They, too, like to improve the occasion, and treat their readers to "Retrospects" or "Reviews" of the bygone year, and draw prophecies or morals with regard to the new one. It may be good "copy"—for any cant or common-place seems to be "good copy" at this season—but it is generally dull and foolish reading, which accounts, perhaps, for its being invariably left unread.

We have already had the journalistic history of the past year for England, Scotland and Ireland in many newspapers, to say nothing of the story of the "Military Year," of the "Naval Year," and of the "Colonial Year!" India has as yet escaped this infliction at the hands of the gentlemen of the Press at home, but the Anglo-Indian Press is sure to shortly send us more than we need on the topic of India's past and future. Those who are interested in India to any measurable extent should not require much instruction regarding her past history under British rule. The land has been enjoying peace since the dark hours of the Mutiny, which it never knew before the British raj. It may be that progress has not kept pace with peace, and as a consequence narrow-minded critics have had an opportunity to cavil at the good work done by the Government of India by the servants who work so faithfully for it. Mr. Caine has already been acting the part of such a critic in the country itself. The papers by the Overland Mail just to hand tell us that he has been instructing his Native hearers; that the present system of governing India is all wrong, and that it never will be right until the Natives have a Parliament. And Mr. Caine has been presented with addresses, some of which have been placed in "beautiful caskets." There is no difficulty with those who know India in understanding the value of this kind of thing. The Pioneer explains it in a few words tersely and fairly put, in pointing out the relations of mutual esteem and admiration which subsist between a typical English democrat and an audience inclined to take him at his own estimate. "The speaker cannot be wrong, because he tells his audience that they are the true depositories of political power, on whom depends the salvation of the country. The audience must be right, inasmuch as they recognise in their counsellor all that is elevating, progressive and ennobling." Mr. Caine tells his Native audience that it is the duty of the British Government to concede political power to them, for "if they had wanted to keep India in Oriental bondage they should have kept India in Oriental ignorance." This is one of those shallow sayings which are often mistaken for aphorisms. The privileges of education which the Natives of India have enjoyed under British rule surely were intended, as the Allahabad paper holds, for some better, broader, and more ennobling end than to teach them to scramble to a polling booth to vote for the man who had been most successful in pandering to their ignorance, or in tickling their vanity. If progress in India be delayed it will be owing to India allowing such vapourings to take root in the minds of the true men who would help and aid her in all that is bright and good in a people's aspirations. But we have no fear of this evil thing happening, either in this or for many coming years. And so we believe that out of all the darkness of the past the Star of India to-day is a Star of Hope shining with clear and steady lustre on the Future.

WHAT may prove to be a miniature Punjab Pompeii has, according to a correspondent, been accidentally lighted upon near Lahore city, in the course of some excavations. The correspondent says:—"A large tract of land near 'Sultan's Serai,' I believe, belonging to one Mir Ali Sultan, has been sub-leased to a Mahomedan who, native-like, saw that the land abounded in Badshahi bricks. For some months past the tenant has been tearing up the ground and has exhumed lacs of bricks. The Municipality having taken action, an officer was sent to report upon what was being done; his version is that the entire excavation shows the site of an ancient town, and that tiers and tiers of foundations show the former erection of immense buildings. As the foundations, all in pukka masonry, are ten and twelve feet broad, and several of these foundations are yet entire, and as they traverse a public roadway, the Native who has leased the ground cannot go on with further excavation.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

THE Secretary of State for India has sanctioned, with effect from the 1st of April, 1891, the proposal to place the non-commissioned officers permanently attached to the Schools of Musketry in India in the same category as sergeant-majors of hill depôts, in respect to warrant rank, pay, pension, clothing, &c.

THE military authorities in Bombay have not yet decided which two regiments of native infantry shall be broken up in order that two new local battalions recruited from the races on the Trans-Indus Frontier may be raised. The 27th, 28th, 29th, and 30th are safe, the 28th being pioneer, and the three others Beluchis. Beluchistan and Zhob will probably be the recruiting ground, and British officers will be selected for their knowledge of tribes and languages of these districts. The Border regiments will probably be placed on the same footing as regards pay and allowances as the new Burma battalions.

IN spite of the fact that the number of hospital assistants of the Madras Presidency is thirty-three under its established strength, the Government of India has telegraphed for the withdrawal from Burma of twelve of this class, lent by Bengal, as they are wanted, it is said, for field and trans-frontier service in the North-Western Provinces. The Madras Native Regiments in Upper Burma will thus be crippled of medical aid. The only hope is that Bombay may come to the rescue by sending some men.

CAPTAIN D'ARCY THOMAS, who has for some years past been Adjutant of the 1st Battalion Worcestershire Regiment, handed over charge of the duties of that appointment, on the expiry of his tenure of office, to Lieutenant Westmacott, who will discharge the duties of Adjutant for a few days, pending the arrival of Captain Randolph, who is expected here about the 23rd or 24th instant. Captain Thomas then becomes permanent Station Staff Officer of Poona in place of Captain W. C. Ross, who has joined the G.I.P.R. Volunteers as Adjutant.

THE new order about the wearing of medals and decorations by military officers deserves, writes the Pioneer, to be given wider currency than it will obtain in the columns of the Gazette. Officers in uniform are not under any circumstances to wear miniature medals. When in undress or mess-dress the ribands of medals and decorations are to be worn, stitched upon the cloth and not on a bar. Miniature medals will consequently be useless until an officer has retired from the service, when he will be permitted to wear them in evening dress on all public and official occasions. It is needless to add that no definition is hazarded of the term "public occasion."

ANOTHER of those unfortunate fracas between European soldiers out shooting and Native cultivators, which have unfortunately been so frequent of late years, is reported to have occurred near Mooltan. It appears that a soldier of the Warwickshire Regiment, accompanied by two dogs, was breaking for game in some high grass jungle, when his dogs were attacked by some dogs belonging to the villagers, and he shot one of the village dogs, on which the villagers attacked him in return, and endeavoured to disarm him. In the fierce struggle which ensued the muzzle of the gun was forced into the ground, and the loaded barrel exploded, fortunately without injury to those struggling for its possession; and then of course the soldier was overpowered and taken to the police station. It would be instructive to know, says an up-country paper, whether the soldier has sufficient knowledge of the vernacular to make himself understood; and why one man was allowed to go out shooting by himself.

A TELEGRAM from Fort White, dated Dec. 10th, states that the building of huts is now going on busily at Fort White and all the posts on the line, as the 4th Madras Pioneers and one compamy of the Sappers and Miners are expected shortly. The 2nd-3rd Goorkhas being detained by cholera, the departure of the 2nd-4th will have to be delayed some little time. The wire was again cut last week between No. 4 and No. 5 Stockades, but very little was taken. Evidently this is the work of some budmashes, who wish to disturb the peace between the Siyins and ourselves. But for this little occasional annoyance, everything goes on perfectly smooth. Kuphaw, the head chief, has got over his mistrust, and now comes in at once whenever sent for. He has taken up his abode near Fort White, and for the first time brought in his wife the other day to see the Fort. The Siyins are busy building villages, and constant feasts are held by way of house-warming, or to celebrate the beginning of the work or the laying of the foundation-stone of some influential man's house. Myook Moung Tur Win has twice been present at these feasts, and was treated in a most hospitable and friendly manner by the Siyins. Occasionally he is asked to partake of boiled armadillo or other fearsome wild-fowl. Lieutenant Heycock is making a survey of the proposed new site on the Letha range.

THE following arrangements have, states an up-country paper, been made regarding the conversion of the four Hindustani levies of the Bengal Army. The 33rd will be formed of carefully selected volunteers from the 21st, 24th, and 28th Punjab Infantry, and from Cis-Indus Punjab Mahomedans now serving in Hindustani regiments, and Mahomedan recruits drawn chiefly from the neighbourhood of the Indus, the Salt Range, and the Rawal Pindi district. The new 38th will be composed entirely of Dogras, a nucleus being obtained from volunteers still serving in Hindustani regiments, from the Dogra company in the 1st Punjab Infantry, now under reduction to make room for Afridis, and from a Dogra company of the 22nd Punjab Infantry. The 39th will be formed from six companies of Garhwalis, now in the 2nd Battalion 3rd Goorkhas, and from volunteers from the two companies of hillmen in the present 39th. The present 40th will be replaced by a newly-formed regiment of trans-frontier Mahomedans, including Beluchis, to be called the 40th Beluchis. A new battalion of Goorkhas, called the 2nd Battalion, 3rd Goorkha Regiment, will be raised to replace the battalion broken up in forming the new 39th Bengal Infantry, the two companies of Goorkhas in the present 2nd Battalion being transferred. The 33rd, 38th, 39th and 40th will be respectively broken up at Delhi, Lucknow, Jhansi, and Cawnpore, and reformed at Jhelum, Sealkote, Lansdowne, and Quetta. As to sepoys in the existing regiments, the Punjabi Mahomedans and Dogras are not considered suitable for transfer to new regiments, and such few Sikhs as are in the ranks will be permitted to volunteer into any Punjabi regiments which enlist those races. There then remain between 800 and 900 Jats and 1,804 Hindustanis and Hindoos. Careful selection will be made of the best men among these (low caste men being eliminated), and they will be given the option of transfer to the colours or the reserve of any Hindustani regiment chosen by them. Such soldiers as are rejected altogether will be discharged on terms similar to those offered when the Levy Regiments were disbanded in 1882.

ELECTION DISTURBANCES AT PONDICHERRY.

PONDICHERRY, DEC. 15.

The election of the retiring members for the Conseil Général took place on Sunday, the 14th inst. Most of the outgoing members were elected, but Chanemoogaôelayouda Modeliar, a very old Councillor, lost his seat, being replaced by Sadassiva Naiker, whose return was secured by a combination of several distinct parties. There were serious disturbances at several of the polling stations, especially at Kasana Gardens, Cavalacoopam, Criplicane, Moodeliarpett, and Mooroogapacom, and at Cavalacoopam one man was killed. There were a great many broken heads and damaged limbs; in fact, during the whole of the day there was more or less fighting going on at the above five places; there was no disturbance in the town, everything having passed off quietly. There were a good many arrests made, but no proof was forthcoming, and they were consequently discharged. The row resolved itself into a free fight, and no trace was to be had of the real originators of the riots. As is usual at the voting of the Conseillors électifs, in addition to the local rowdies, many of the leaders of the different sections secretly bring in from the neighbouring districts a number of fighting men, who are fed and paid for the purpose of creating disturbances, and their numbers are generally so great that the police and military forces are unable to preserve order, and consequently in the neighbourhood of these voting places complete anarchy prevails during the whole of the election. In one of the stations, the crowd seized the voting box and ran away with it, notwithstanding the efforts of the police and others. I believe that this box has not yet been recovered or traced. Pondicherry has now had eleven years of "local self-government," and it is to be regretted that these riots occur at nearly all the elections. This year has been more unfortunate than usual, as one poor man lost his life. The masses of the people pay but little attention to the puny efforts of the administrative and municipal authorities to preserve peace and order. Pondicherry, being a busy seaport, attracts large numbers of able-bodied coolies, who are ever ready to join in any public excitement that may be going on, and the police and military forces are so small that they are totally unable to prevent these disturbances.

THE

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him ! ! I know him not ! !. If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge ! !"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain.

JEOPARDY OF LIFE, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset ! ! ! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, "ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.

"A DEVONSHIRE LADY.—Jan. 25, 1889."

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose Without it Life is a Sham!—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced stages they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm."

THE weather in the western frontier has been very severe lately. Sir Robert Sandeman and his force are detained on their march into Lus Beyla territory till the Hubb River becomes fordable.

TEN feet of snow has fallen at Murree.

NOTWITHSTANDING the recent heavy floods in Bengal a full average rice crop is expected.

NAIB SULTAN, the Kotwal of Kabul, who was suspended some time ago for embezzling Government money, has again been thrown into prison for having stolen Rs. 900,000.

AT an influential meeting of the Armenian community, held at Calcutta, Dec. 26th, the Armenian Association, Calcutta, presented Mr. Schwann, M.P., with an address, thanking him for his services in the House of Commons on behalf of the Armenians in Turkey. The address was encased in a handsome silver casket. On its being handed to the honourable member, the latter said he had a difficulty in adequately expressing his thanks for the address, adding, "Your kind words have touched me deeply, but I feel that they are far too flattering for the small services I have been able to render to the cause of suffering Armenia. I have only begun to work in the vineyard, and therefore accept your thanks, not for myself, but on behalf of the great leader of the Liberal Party, for your advocates in Parliament are sensible how little we have been able to effect towards repressing the wrongs committed upon your unoffending fellow-countrymen. It is impossible to believe that in the nineteenth century such atrocities are possible without an immediate repression by the Great Powers. The responsibility primarily lies with the Great Powers, chiefly England, as protector under the Berlin Treaty Porte in 1878, who solemnly promised to reform the abuses, but have never fulfilled the pledge. The British public opinion is now rapidly awakening to the necessity of immediate action to prevent a continuance of the scandalous state of affairs. A large meeting will shortly be held in Manchester, followed by meetings throughout England, to secure, if not political autonomy, absolute protection and freedom under Native Governors."

NOTES.

THE chief news from India to day will be found recorded in the Times telegrams, which we reproduce, and in the account brought by the Overland Mail of the Czarewitch's arrival and reception at Bombay.

THE "illustrious stranger" has been given a cordial welcome. He is accompanied by a numerous entourage, some seventeen or eighteen in number, amongst whom are some magnificent specimens of the Imperial Guard, "whose helmets were surmounted by gilt or silver double-headed eagles larger than pigeons." So says a Bombay reporter.

THESE helmets and eagles, and the physique of the wearers themselves, evidently frightened the poor reporter at first, who declares that "by the side of the Anglo-Indian regulation helmets these casques, worthy of Mars himself, were magnificent to a degree." But having partially regained his self-possession, the reporter adds: "It may be questioned whether they are so well adapted to the uncompromising rays of even a December sun in India as the more unassuming topee."

AND, grown bolder, he at last has his revenge on those who at first frightened him. "The Prince and suite proceeded to Government House, at Malabar Point, in open carriages. It would be safe to wager that before they got to the end of the four miles' drive they wished that they had left those resplendent helmets safe in St. Petersburg until their return." The reporter, we think, "scored."

THE Indian Spectator, which professes to be an organ of advanced Native opinion, says:—"Had H.I.H. the Czarewitch arrived in time we would have advised Sir D. M. Wallace to take him off to Calcutta during the Congress week. There the Prince might have seen something of constitutional discussion of the measures and policy of Government, carried on by a body of men totally unconnected with that Government. More instructive still would have been the spectacle, as affording a clue to the might and magnanimity of a foreign Government under which such deliberations could take place in the light of the day. Abysmal, indeed, must be the ignorance of those who expect troubles to arise from a display of this wise forbearance, or from any other cause, so long as British statesmen continue to be true to their instincts."

THE Punjab Government has just made known the decisions it has come to in the matter of the Simla Municipality. First and foremost the Municipal Board is to be reduced to ten members—four nominated, and six elected. The Government of India, it appears from the correspondence, recommended eight members—four nominated, and four elected; but here, as throughout the business, the Punjab Government, hedging with both sides, takes up a half-way position that may please neither the Municipality nor the memorialists. Of the nominated members one is always to be a Civil Surgeon, another the Executive Engineer, the third place is to be reserved for a nominee appointed by the Government of India, and the fourth for the future President, a salaried officer, who will be invested with magisterial powers.

THE attack on the "Simla Exodus" commences early this year. Here is what the first independent voice of the opposition says:—

"Private interests should always sink below public ones, and there can be no two opinions on the point—viz., that public interests demand that Simla should cease to be the Hill resort of the Supreme Government, and that Darjeeling should step into its place."

The italics are ours; the quotation is from the Darjeeling News.

IT is only natural, says the Pioneer, that the news of some particularly large donations by a Native Chief to a project so much touted as the Imperial Institute should be received with mixed feelings by the Indian public, which knows that the gift may very possibly represent the wishes of anyone rather than the donor; but the £20,000 which the Maharaja of Jeypore has contributed to the Prince of Wales's favourite scheme seems to be quite above suspicion. At all events there is no case for imputing pressure to the Political Resident; for Colonel Prideaux, we have good authority for saying, was almost the last person to hear of his Highness's intention, which indeed took everyone by surprise, though it appears now to have been maturing for some years. The truth is, that after doing everything that was possible at home for the arts and industries of his capital, the Maharaja conceived the wish for having them worthily represented in London, and his idea was to found and endow a special Jeypore court in the Institute. This plan, it seems, does not fall in with the general scheme of things, and may not be realised; but there is every reason to believe that Jeypore will be prominently represented when the Institute is opened.

CRIME has increased to a considerable extent to Bombay. There were two thousand and two hundred more persons before the Court than in the previous twelve months, and eighty-seven per cent. of these, as compared with eighty-two per cent. of the previous year, were convicted. Serious crime is also shown to have been more prevalent, murders and attempted murders having been greatly in excess of previous records, and out of six murders only one was prosecuted to conviction. House-breaking had become more common, and out of thirty robberies in thirteen only were the police able to secure convictions.

THE Madras Times is severe. There is some room for merriment, it says, over the visit to India of a travelling orator and a travelling artist in the persons of Messrs. Caine and Allen. We would fain speak of their advent as a conjunction of Science and Art; but whatever may be said of Mr. Allen and Art, certainly Mr. Caine will not pass as the embodiment of political or other science. He belongs to that growing class of reformers who, from a stock of knowledge which is of the scantiest, somehow contrive to form opinions which speedily assume rigidity. He has been unfortunate in receiving his early education in Indian affairs from Mr. William Digby, one of the least informed and most unreliable of teachers on such a subject, and we doubt whether he will hereafter be able to escape from the meshes of the miserable crew in which he has been caught.

REGARDING the conflicting statements in the Calcutta papers as to the Chief Secretary of Bengal, the Pioneer states "upon the best authority" that Sir J. Ware Edgar will retain the appointment unless his health should fail him.

COINCIDENT with the departure of Sir Steuart Bayley from the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal comes the retirement of one of the two civilians whowere senior to him in the service of the Lower Provinces, Mr. William Vansittart Graham Tayler. Both belonged to the small and rapidly diminishing band of Haileybury men, and both to families which have been long and prominently connected with India; but in their careers there was no further correspondence. While almost all Mr. Tayler's contemporaries and many of his juniors have risen to the top of the tree in their several lines, he has remained to the end of his long service a magistrate and collector.

THE farewell to Sir Charles Crosthwaite was a public one in Mandalay, the principal roads along the route to the railway station being lined with troops, and at the station itself there was a very large gathering of Burmans, as well as ladies and gentlemen from the Cantonments and Civil Lines. The Burmese farewell address on prettily-illuminated paper was short and pithy, and Sir Charles's answer was in the same strain. One remark the Chief Commissioner made proved how successful his administration had been. He said: "The post of Chief Commissioner of Burma has been one of the greatest interest to me, and I have never had and never can hold a post which I shall like as well. As a rule, work to be interesting is generally successful.

THE question of the retention or non-retention of a fifth Judge in the Punjab Chief Court being as yet undetermined, it is not known what the personnel of the Chief Court in the near future will be. Sir M. Plowden, it is understood, will take long furlough, covering two hot weathers, shortly; and Mr. Benton, it is said, takes seven months' furlough at the end of March. Messrs. Stogdon and Beachcroft, who have both served before with admitted success, will, says a local paper, if the fifth Judgeship is sanctioned, both return; but the selection of a barrister Judge will remain to be settled.

MURDER OF MR. C. H. WETHERELL.

Information has been received from the Political Officer at Haka that Mr. Charles Hodgson Wetherell, Assistant Superintendent of Police, was shot dead by Chins near Yokwa on the morning of December 21st. Mr. Wetherell was marching from Rawnan with Lieutenant Ducat, and was riding about 100 yards ahead, when four shots were fired from behind a tree, killing Mr. Wetherell immediately. The body was brought to Haka for burial. The murder is believed to have been committed by the Thetta tribe, who have hitherto refused submission to the Political Officer at Haka. An expedition against Thetta village was about to start, and arrangements will now be pushed on with all possible despatch. If it is found to be the Thetta tribe that is responsible, exemplary punishment will be inflicted. Mr. Wetherell had been just three years in the Burma Police.

THE result of the balloting at the Chamber of Commerce on the 19th ult. for a Deputy Chairman of the Chamber for the coming year was that Mr. J. L. Symons, of the firm of Messrs. Finlay, Muir and Co., was elected.

THE Persian Governor-General of Khorasan has sent one of his Generals, Alekner Khan, to Askabad, to salute the new Russian Governor-General of the Transcaspian, General Kouropatkin, Bokhara, which is to all intents and purposes a Russian province, hardly does more. Why the Persian authorities of Khorasan should always send a special Ambassador to propitiate the newly-appointed Russian Commanders on the other side of the frontier, as though Khorasan were actually, and not only in accordance with Russian theory, dependent upon Russian good-will, it is difficult to see. Certainly the Russians do not view this kind of courtesy as mere Asiatic politeness.

Mysore Shares were last quoted 5 15-16 to 6 1-16, Nundydrog 1 11-16 to 1 13-16, Indian Consolidated New Company (9s. paid), 4s. 3d. to 4s. 9d., Balaghat-Mysore (New) 8s. to 8s. 6d., Champion Reef 11-16 to 15-16, Ooregum Ordinary 2 5-16 to 2 7-16, ditto Preference 2 11-16 to 2 13-16, Devala-Moyar 6d. to 1s., Nine Reefs New (fully paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 4s. 6d to 5s., Mysore Wynaad (18s. 6d. paid) 2s. 6d. to 3s., South-East Mysore 9d. to 2s., Indian Glenrock New 2s. 6d. to 3s., Gold Fields of Mysore 12s. 6d. to 13s. 6d., New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 2s., and Mysore West (17s. 6d. paid) 2s. to 2s. 6d.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 9.

In the Legislative Council to-day Sir A. Scoble introduced a Bill to amend section 375 of the Penal Code, relating to rape, by raising the minimum age of a girl capable of consenting from ten to twelve years, and also to amend the Criminal Procedure Code by removing the offence as between husband and child-wife to the class of non-cognisable. Sir A. Scoble spoke in support of the measure at some length.

Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, a Bengalese member, opposed the proposed legislative change, and said that, whatever might be the case in other parts of India, there was a strong feeling against it in Bengal. He contended that the Hindoo Scriptures required a husband to consummate marriage as soon as the first signs of puberty appeared, which sometimes happened before twelve years. He thought the Bill infringed the Queen's Proclamation on taking over the Government of India, which promised abstention from any inference with the social and religious customs of the people, and he believed that it would meet with much opposition. He added that even if it were quietly accepted it would be useless.

Krishnaji Lakshman Nulkar Rao Bahadur, Bombay Hindoo member, said that if some interpreters of the Scriptures opposed it, still the measure was one of common humanity, and therefore he was prepared to support it.

The Viceroy said he could not admit Sir Chunder Mitter's arguments, but there would be ample time to discuss them hereafter. He then proceeded to address the Council in a somewhat lengthy speech, and said that he thought it desirable to place the members in full possession of the views of the Government, not only with regard to the special questions dealt with in the Bill, but also respecting other matters, which were to some extent connected with it in the mind of the public. The Bill in no way affected what might, for convenience, be styled the marriage law of the country. It merely proposed to protect the great body of female children between ten and twelve from the unquestioned evils of early prostitution or premature intercourse; and it affected the marriage usage only so far as the protection extended to married as well as to unmarried children. But the proposals embodied in this Bill had recently been associated with other proposals widely different, which most distinctly affected the marriage law and Hindoo religious social institutions; and it had been inferred that if the Government dealt with one part of the subject they stood committed to deal with the rest. He desired to correct this misapprehension. The proposals to which he referred had been brought prominently under the notice of the Indian Government be an English committee, comprising many persons occupying conspicuous positions in public life. It was impossible to doubt their sincerity or the excellence of their objects, and if the Government were unable entirely to agree with their conclusions it was because, being in closer contact with public opinion here, they realised more fully the extreme gravity of any steps which might be truly said to involve an interference with the religious and social institutions of any large section of the people of India.

The Viceroy then proceeded to discuss the resolutions of the English committee seriatim. The first was in favour of raising the age of consent. That was a proposal embodied in the present Bill, a measure which, while rendering the law more stringent by increasing the age limit, should also greatly increase the precautions against abuses of the law. The second resolution suggested that infant marriages should not be valid unless subsequently ratified. He did not think those who advocated this change could have realised the tremendous gravity of such a step. It would simply revolutionise the Hindoo social system, and involve an interference with domestic institutions which the Government were not prepared to admit. The third resolution referred to the much-debated subject of suits of restitution of conjugal rights. The Government had already considered this matter of extreme intricacy, and they were satisfied that such suits were common in only a few localities, and among the lower classes. They thought the existing law was capable of improvement, and that it would suffice if the Courts were empowered to refuse to imprison the recusant husband or wife; but the question was not of immediate importance, and it was not necessary to deal with it concurrently with the wholly distinct question of the present Bill. The fourth resolution related to the remarriage of widows. His Excellency discussed the existing law in some detail, and referred to the letters on these subjects recently published in the Times. The suggestions had been anxiously considered, but the conclusion had been forced on the Government that while Hindoo opinion remained what it was, the Legislature would not be justified in attempting to prevent the social and religious excommunication of widows remarrying. Any change in these respects must come from within, and he was glad to say that signs were not wanting that such changes were already in progress. He concluded by saying that he trusted the measure would receive the support of public opinion, and he commended it to the favourable consideration of the Council.

JAN. 11.

Although it was generally expected that Sir Andrew Scoble's Bill with regard to the age of consent in marriage would meet with considerable opposition, still the public were hardly prepared for so violent an attack as that made by Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter. That a gentleman who was for many years Judge of the High Court, and was for some months acting Chief Justice of Bengal, should have objected so strongly shows that the feeling against the measure is not confined to the uneducated or strictly conservative classes. It may be noted, however, that the hon. member of the Council based his religious objections chiefly on the authority of Raghunundum, a commentator of the Hindoo Scriptures, greatly venerated in Bengal, but not followed in other parts of India. It may therefore be hoped that the opposition to the simple and humane amendment proposed will not extend beyond this province.

This hope receives support from the speech of Krish Nulkar Rao Bahadur, the Bombay member, who said that some discontent might be expressed at first, but it would disappear when it became known that no interference with the marriage law was contemplated.

The Viceroy and Sir Andrew Scoble made it very clear that no such interference was intended. The latter, although he spoke before Sir Romesh Mitter, answered many of his arguments by anticipation. He pointed out that the Bill created no new offence. The question of child marriage, he said, had been discussed by men of great erudition and authority, and from this discussion two propositions emerged and stood established; first, that sages enjoined and the custom of many castes required that a girl should be given in marriage before puberty; secondly, that the Scriptures denounced in the strongest terms the sin of connection with an immature girl. He could not accept the arguments that the mischief which it was intended to remedy was not of common occurrence, or that the existing law was sufficient, and he proceeded to quote several authorities against both propositions. As regards the objection that legislative action was not likely to have much direct result, he said he should be content if its effect was mainly educative, and if it strengthened the hands of fathers for the protection of their daughters, and modified custom so as to diminish the pernicious practice.

The Native Press has not yet expressed an opinion on the Bill, with the exception of the Indian Mirror, which, while highly praising the Viceroy's speech, professes indifference to the measure, saying that the original section of the Penal Code has hitherto been a dead letter, and that the amendment will remain a dead letter likewise.

At Friday's meeting of the Legislative Council, Sir Andrew Scoble introduced another important Bill, to amend the Indian Merchandise Marks Act. The amendments proposed were in accordance with the advice of the committee appointed some months ago. Power will be given to the Government to define the term "piece goods," and the provision of the present Act requiring the name and place as well as the country of manufacture on foreign goods will be repealed.

Dr. Voelcker, the expert in agricultural chemistry, who was sent to examine the subject of Indian agriculture a year ago, has now started for home. It is understood that his report shows a strong belief in the practical possibilities of improvement in Indian agriculture.

It is reported from Cabul that the Ameer's last attack of gout was more severe than any from which he has previously suffered. He was obliged to give up his intended visit to Jellalabad.

Winter is said to have set in earlier and with more severity this year throughout Central Asia than for many years.

BURMA

RANGOON, JAN. 7.

The expeditionary column reached Thetta on January 2nd. In the attack on Thetta Lieutenant James, Royal Engineers, Burma Sappers and Miners, and two Goorkhas were killed, and one Goorkha was wounded. During a pause in the engagement a parley was held, with the result of the proffered submission of the Thettas and payment of a small fine. The troops subsequently returned to Haka.

JAN. 9.

Detailed reports show that the attack on Thetta was repulsed. The attacking force consisted of 160 Goorkhas, commanded by Captain Carnegy, of the 3rd Goorkhas. Two miles from the village the Chins opened a hot fire, killing two Goorkhas and wounding one. When the troops approached the village they found it too strongly stockaded to be rushed. Lieutenant James was killed at this point. The troops then retired to arrange a fresh attack. Meanwhile a Haka chief entered Thetta, and induced the villagers to offer their submission, to pay a nominal fine, and to promise to pay tribute. These terms were accepted by the political officer with the force, and the troops returned to Haka.

Sir A. Mackenzie has called for further information regarding the arrangements actually made, and the question of further action is now under consideration. The acceptance by the political officer of such unsatisfactory terms is generally disapproved. The Thetta Chins not only murdered Mr. Wetherell, but perpetrated a long series of outrages, attacking posts, killing and wounding Sepoys, and cutting telegraph wires. It was recently announced officially that a full inquiry into Mr. Wetherell's murder would be held when Thetta was taken, and that exemplary punishment would be dealt out to the murderers.

The Chief Commissioner informs me that the report recently published by the Mandalay Herald, which was quoted in my telegram of Dec. 24th, of a serious dacoity committed by men from Wuntho was gravely exaggerated. A dacoity did occur in the Yeu district, and property was carried off, but there is no foundation for the story that captives were carried away. The Wuntho Tsawbwa has been called to account for this dacoity.

JAN. 11.

It has been decided to take the following steps against the Chins. It is stated that it has been ascertained that the oath of friendship recently taken at Thetta does not preclude friendly occupation of that village, and a fresh force, therefore, proceeds from Haka to Thetta, accompanied by a political officer. The troops will camp at Thetta for some weeks, and will visit neighbouring villages now unknown. In case the Thetta Chins resist the occupation they will presumably be forced to submit. Another column, accompanied by a civil officer, marches through the Baungobe country to accept the submission of villages, and arrange for a nominal tribute and their future good conduct. Collision is to be avoided if possible, but any opposition met with is to be sternly repressed. A third expedition starts for the Chinbok country, to punish the villages which recently attacked the Yawdwin post.

Captain Drury, of the 3rd Goorkhas, whose case has been referred to in recent telegrams, has been placed under arrest. On Dec. 8th and 11th leading articles were published in the Rangoon Times attacking Sir C. Crosthwaite's alleged action in supporting the conduct of the assistant political officer at Haka, and praising Captain Drury's conduct. Soon after these articles appeared Captain Drury was required by General Stewart to sign an ample apology to Sir C. Crosthwaite for their publication. Captain Drury refused compliance on the ground that he knew nothing about the articles and never authorised any publication. When the articles were published Captain Drury was several hundred miles distant from Rangoon. Owing to his refusal to sign the apology, Captain Drury was placed under arrest at Haka, where he commanded, and was marched to Myingyan, where he is stil kept under arrest.

The liability of having to apologise for leading articles in local journals, sought to be imposed on officers serving in Burma, adds a new danger to military service here. The case has been forwarded for Sir F. Roberts's decision.

THE CZAREWITCH IN INDIA.

BOMBAY, JAN. 10.

The Czarewitch met with a grand reception on his arrival at Jeypore, one of the chief features of which was a procession of elephants through the city.

During the day his Imperial Highness exchanged visits with the Maharajah, and in the afternoon went out tiger-shooting. Two tigers were killed, both falling to the gun of Prince Bariatinsky.

In the evening the Czarewitch dined with the Maharajah, on whose behalf the Dewan proposed the health of Queen Victoria, the Czar, the King of Greece, and of his Imperial guest.

The entertainments after dinner included a nautch dance and a grand display of fireworks.

ARRANGEMENTS are in progress to despatch 600 Darjeelin coolies from Calcutta to Burma. These will be utilised in carrying loads and in road making during the approaching operations in the Chin country.

H.I.H THE CZAREWITCH IN BOMBAY.

(Bombay Gazette, Dec. 27.)

His Excellency the Governor and the large crowd which assembled on the Apollo Bunder on Tuesday morning to welcome his Imperial Highness Hereditary Grand Duke Nicolas Alexandrowitch, Czarewith of Russia, to Bombay had an unexpectedly long wait; and the surprise at the non-appearance of the frigate Azova early on Tuesday morning was all the greater owing to the telegram which was received from Aden a few days ago, stating that the vessel and her two consorts, the Admiral Kornilaff and the Vladimar Monomachus might be expected to reach Bombay some time on Monday night. But a mistake had evidently been made in the reckoning. On the receipt of the telegram from Aden, H.E. the Governor determined, though his Imperial Highness expressed the desire that no official notice should be taken of the arrival of the squadron until yesterday morning, to go on board the Azova, should she arrive before ten o'clock at night, and welcome the Czarewitch privately to India. Accordingly Captain Hext, Director of the Indian Marine, had a launch in readiness at the Apollo Bunder to take his Excellency on board, while the guns at the land battery were kept manned to fire the salute on the signalling of the Azova. But no Azova appeared all night through, and when, shortly after seven o'clock yesterday morning, the people began to assemble on the Bunder, there was still no appearance of the looked-for ships.

SCENE ON THE BUNDER.

Long before eight o'clock the spacious shamiana, which had been erected under the superintendence of Khan Bahadur M. C. Murzban, M.I.C.E., was crowded with a very brilliant gathering. The shamiana was the same as is usually erected upon such occasions, separate spaces being allotted for members of the Legislative Council, the heads of departments, civil and military, the Bombay Municipal Corporation, consular representatives, and other ladies and gentlemen. The decorations were, as they usually are, bright, yet tastefully arranged. Drapings of maroon and old gold adorned the roof, and fell like curtains in graceful folds around some of the posts that supported the shamiana, hiding their rude forms from view. Shields and trophies of flags also adorned the posts, and the passage which ran through the tent from the pier head to the carriage entrance at the opposite end was lined with shrubs and flowers. From the roof floated a perfect mass of flags, and over the main entrance were fixed the Royal Arms. The harbour, too, made a pretty picture. Opposite the Bunder were anchored H.M.S. Turquoise and Reindeer, further up lay the turret-ships Magdala and Abyssinia, and still further away was that trim little gun-boat the Brisk, which, together with other ships lying at anchor in the harbour, were all decorated from stem to stern with steamers.

His Excellency the Governor was amongst the first to arrive on the Bunder. Late on Monday night his Excellency issued a Government Gazette Extraordinary, containing a notification to the effect that, in view of the Azova not having been signalled within the time expected, he would leave the Bunder at 7.30 A.M. to pay a visit of welcome to his Imperial Highness, and his Excellency was punctual; but as there was no appearance of the Azova, he retired to the Yacht Club to wait.

THE ARRIVAL AND RECEPTION.

Exactly at seven minutes to eight the firing of three guns from the land battery told the assembly that the squadron had at last been sighted. Still they had a long time to wait, for it was not until twenty minutes to nine that the Azova, stopping her engines almost opposite the Apollo Bunder, allowed herself to drift slowly towards the Turquoise and Reindeer, firing a salute, which was promptly responded to by the former. Capt. Brackenbury, Commander of H.M.S. Turquoise, the senior Naval Officer, in the absence of the Naval Commander-in-Chief, was the first to board the Azova after she had dropped anchor. Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace next went on board to inquire whether, owing to the lateness of the hour of arrival, it was the desire of his Imperial Highness that the original programme should be adhered to, while Capt. Hext stood by the Government steam launch Bee to take H.E. the Governor on board. At 9.25 Sir Donald Mackenzie Wallace brought back the reply that his Imperial Highness was ready to receive H.E. the Governor on board, and Lord Harris, accompanied by his staff and Captain Hext, steamed off in the launch Bee to the Azova. In half-an-hour his Excellency returned, in order that he might meet his Royal guest on shore to welcome him officially. In twenty minutes more it appeared from some commotion observable on board the Azova that preparations were being made to land, and immediately the Azova and one of her consorts and H.M.S. Turquoise and Reindeer commenced firing simultaneously a salute of twenty-one guns, making a cannonade of eighty-four shots in all. The firing lasted between ten and fifteen minutes, and the vessels were so enveloped in smoke that the departure from the Azova was not observable. As the clouds of smoke cleared away, however, a train of boats was seen coming rapidly towards the shore. In front was the Imperial barge rowed by sixteen oarsmen bearing H.I.H. the Czarewitch, and flying the Russian colours, while two launches followed in its wake. Exactly at half-past ten, his Imperial Highness, dressed in the picturesque uniform of a Colonel of Hussars, stepped on shore, followed by the Grand Duke George Alexandrowitch of Russia, H.R.H. Prince George of Greece, Major-General Prince Bariatinsky, Chief of the Staff, Admiral Bassarghind, Captain Prince Kotchubey, Captain Walkoff, Lieutenant Prince Obalensky, A.D.C. to the Czar, Prince Oukhonsky, Secretary, H.E.M. Onou, Dr. D. Smirnoff, and M. Grilyenkko. His Imperial Highness appeared in excellent health, and did not seem to have suffered in any way from his voyage. At the foot of the Bunder steps his Imperial Highness was met by Captain Hext, who conducted him upstairs, where he was received by H.E. the Governor. The land battery then fired a salute of twenty-one guns, after which the band of the Gloster Regiment played the Russian National Anthem. A halt was made at the top of the Bunder, where his Excellency presented to the young Prince the Members of Council, the Judges of the High Court, the Consuls representing the various nations, and Mr. Lee-Warner, Political Secretary to Government. His Imperial Highness naturally appeared somewhat bewildered at the strange (strange at any rate to a foreigner who has never been in India before) and picturesque assembly of people who had met to make him welcome to India. While returning the salutes made to him his sharp, striking eyes were continually in motion, glancing quickly from one side to the other, scanning with evident curiosity the quaint and brilliant costumes of the Natives.

DEPARTURE FOR GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

A move was then made up the Bunder, the Czarewitch and his followers in their magnificent uniforms as Hussars, Cuirassiers of the Imperial Guard, with their bright helmets surmounted by the golden eagle, and other picturesque dresses, making a splendid show. Much as the Natives of India are accustomed to grandeur, the splendid physique of the Russian officers and their magnificent helmets rather surprised them, the "metal topees," as they called the helmets, and the gold and silver eagles being wonderingly commented upon. On reaching the spot where a hundred rank and file of the Glo'ster Regiment, under the command of Captain Tufnell, were drawn up as a guard-of-honour, the soldiers presented arms, and his Imperial Highness, accompanied by H.E. Sir George Greaves, Commander-in-Chief, inspected the guard, afterwards continuing his march to the main entrance, where he entered the Government House carriage, with H.E. Lord Harris, and drove off to Government House, escorted by a detachment of his Excellency's body-guard, the crowd cheering him as he left the Bunder.

ARRIVAL AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

At eleven o'clock Dr. Martin, who had been riding in advance of the cavalcade, galloped up to Government House by the private road, and announced the approach of the Imperial party. Ten minutes later his Excellency the Governor's State carriage with four-in-hand and postilions, drew up under the porch of Government House. The guard-of-honour, of a hundred rank-and-file of the 4th Bombay Rifles with Regimental colours, under the command of Subedar Mehta Harmehta, presented arms, while the band played the Russian National Anthem. On alighting his Excellency Lord Harris conducted his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Czarewitch to the top of the stairs, where he was received by Lady Harris and Mr. S. W. Edgerley, Private Secretary to his Excellency. Her Excellency was also introduced to his Royal Highness Prince George of Greece, who wore a Grecian merino uniform, and Captain Walkhoff, whose dressing was similar to that of his Imperial Highness.

His Excellency the Governor's bodyguard, under the command of Captain Gott, were drawn up outside the porch in front of the guard of honour. After the interchange of courtesies his Excellency Lord Harris conducted his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Czarewitch and Captain Walkhoff to their rooms situated to the south-west of Government House, which were beautifully fitted and upholstered for the comfort of the distinguished visitors during their brief stay in Bombay. The rest of the Imperial suite were located in Colonel Rhodes' bungalow. Excellent order was maintained by the police at Government House, under the superintendence of Superintendent Brewin. An officers' guard of forty-five rank and file, Glo'ster Regiment, are mounted on duty at Government House during his Imperial Highness's stay. After the interchange of ceremonies the distinguished party sat down to breakfast at twelve o'clock. Prince George of Russia, it may be added, remained on board, owing to indisposition.

EXCURSION TO ELEPHANTA CAVES.

In the afternoon his Imperial Highness visited the Elephanta Caves. A start was made from Malabar Point about three o'clock.

The Apollo Bunder was reached about half-past three, and the excursionists were taken to Elephanta in Government launches. A most pleasant afternoon was spent viewing the Caves, and his Imperial Highness was evidently both pleased and astonished at what he saw. The party returned to the Apollo Bunder about half-past six, and drove straight back to Government House.

DINNER AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

His Excellency the Governor and Lady Harris entertained H.I.H. the Czarewitch and party to a dinner at Government House, Malabar Point. The following is a list of those who sat down to dinner:—

His Excellency the Governor and Lady Harris, his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke Czarewitch, his Royal Highness Prince George of Greece, his Imperial Highness the Grand Duke George Alexandrovitch of Russia, his Excellency Sir George Greaves, K.C.B., K.C.M.G.; Commander-in-Chief, Bombay Army; the Hon. Sir Charles Sargent, Chief Justice, the Right Rev. the Bishop of Bombay and Mrs. Mylne, the Hon. Sir Raymond West, K.C.I.E., member of Council, and Lady and the Misses West; the Hon. Mr. C. B. Branch, Q.M.G.'s Department, Simla; Lieutenant C. J. Venables, Gloucestershire Regiment; Mrs. Lindsay. Staff—Colonel Rhodes, Military Secretary; S. W. Edgerley, Esq., C.S., Private Secretary; H. Martin, Esq., M.B., M.S.; Captain A. W. Forbes, A.D.C.; Captain the Honourable St. Leger Jervis, A.D.C.; and Captain E. H. Cox, A.D.C.

THE BALL.

The dinner was followed by a ball, at which there were from three to four hundred guests present.

Shortly before ten o'clock dancing commenced with a waltz, his Imperial Highness dancing with Lady Harris, and H.E. the Governor with Mrs. Lee-Warner.

A sumptuous supper was served at midnight, and dancing was kept up till a late hour.

MR. CAINE IN MADRAS

(Madras Times.)

There is some room for merriment over the visit to India of a travelling orator, and a travelling artist in the persons of Messrs. Caine and Allen. We would fain speak of their advent as a conjunction of Science and Art, but whatever may be said of Mr. Allen and Art, certainly Mr. Caine will not pass as the embodiment of political or other science. He belongs to that growing class of reformers who from a stock of knowledge which is of the scantiest, somehow contrive to form opinions which speedily assume rigidity. He has been unfortuate in receiving his early education in Indian affairs from Mr. William Digby, one of the least informed and most unreliable of teachers on such a subject, and we doubt whether he will hereafter be able to escape from the meshes of the miserable crew, in which he has been caught. At any rate, he regards it as his present duty to denounce Englishmen in India, and the Indian Government, and to place no confidence in their testimony concerning Indian affairs, while he sets forth the supreme excellence and the marvellous attainments of our Hindu fellow-subjects in the best language he can command. One result of this is that in India he gravitates towards men of his own style of thinking. His "splendid" reception in Madras illustrates this. He was received by the members of the "Hindu Preaching Society," a society which is not remarkable for its loyalty to the British Government, nor famous for its respect for Englishmen, but which appears to have discerned in him a kindred spirit. It is natural enough that to a certain class of Hindus, an Englishman should appear worthy of honour who traduces his countrymen, and such traduction appears to be out of the characteristic features of Mr Caine's mission. That it will secure for him a certain notoriety goes by saying; that it is and can be only mischievous is equally true. It can neither benefit Englishmen nor make Hindus better men.

If Mr. Caine considers Englishmen so culpable, it is cowardly in him not to say so to them. He could have easily addressed a meeting of Englishmen in Madras, in Bombay also, but he has discreetly perferred to avoid meeting them face to face. If he did meet them, we doubt not that he would be compelled to change his tone and lower his flag. Would any audience of Englishmen in this city listen to the following:—"We (the Englishmen in England) look upon you as follow subjects, and the Anglo-Indian looks upon you as the subject race," or the statement at Bombay, repeated in substance since, to the effect that Englishmen found India sober and have made it drunken? Such statements cannot be justified, and ought not to be made by any well intentioned and intelligent man. Passing by Englishmen and their testimony, let us see what conclusions Mr. Caine has reached by "close personal investigation on the spot." He has himself given us a specimen, in the following choice passage:—"British Democracy will expect you to satisfy them that you will treat the sweepers on an equality with the Brahmins; unless you convince them of that you will not get your demands. Unless I was convinced that it would be so I would not have been on this platform." He has convinced himself that the Congress agitators in India hold and will act according to this doctrine of equality. We have some knowledge of the Indian Congress and of Congress Committees, and of Indian Congress agitators, and are certain that in this matter Mr. Caine is utterly deluded. There is no doctrine of equality in the creed of the men or the Congress whose cause he generally espouses. This is as certain as that the sun is in the sky. But what of his close personal investigation? Where and how was it made? Superficiality like his may manifest itself in loquacity and blundering, but cannot secure wise Indian reform, and the truth is that Mr. Caine has not seen and does not know British India; he only dreams a dream.

In his address on the Congress movement he took occasion to refer to the Political Agency in England, and its journal—India—, which he pronounced a treasure. It would be nearer the truth to speak of it as a treasury of exaggeration and misstatement. We find it giving publicity to statements like the following:—"Take ten years of British rule by this 'benign and humane government,' and count the hopes that have been blasted, hearts that have been crushed, the misery, the suffering, the deaths from starvation, and you will find that the horrors of barbarian invasions are trifles when compared with the agony of chronic hunger, which has sent millions of men, women and children to an untimely grave." Again: "India is a nation, and a great nation. The three hundred millions live in the same country. Their religion with the exception of forty millions of Mahommedans is the same. Their manners and customs are the same. Their love for their common country is the same. They love each other as their own countrymen, and it is vain that you try to stir up race distinction and make difference between them." The writer is an "educated" Hindu, just the type of man whose testimony Mr. Caine would delight to quote in the House of Commons, believing it to be perfectly true. The publisher of these choice statements is Mr. William Digby, who knows well that these statements are false, and Mr. Caine urges Hindus to purchase and file the journal which contains such statements as a "treasure." What are we to say of this adviser and his advice? Unless he means to work evil by his visit to India and his speeches to the English-speaking section he must improve his knowledge and his method. He must neither misunderstand nor misrepresent. Apparently, he has yet to learn that a large mass of the people, even of those who do not live in jungles, know nothing of Government, and, so far from respecting, dislike it, and systematically endeavour to defraud it. What India most of all wants is agencies and agitators, not to worry and perplex the Government, but to instruct the people, and deliver them from evils which are self-imposed and infinitely more grave than the supposed evil of not possessing a vote. If Mr. Caine can assist in obtaining and employing such agencies, agencies which shall create life and intelligence where now are torpor and delay, he will do a nobler work than that in which he is at present now engaged. Life shapes its own organisation, and, despite the spread of Western education, India is not yet alive in our Western sense of the term, and no amount of tinkering by irresponsible Englishmen at the present machinery of Government will make it alive in our Western sense of the term, and no amount of tinkering as Mr. Caine's tends to lessen respect for authority among a people who have not yet learned that lesson, and fosters discontent and the growth of worthless ambitions.

THE INDIAN COAL FIELDS.

(Times of India.)

The chief difficulty in the way of the development of Indian ores lies, as we have already suggested, in the question of fuel. If fuel suitable for smelting could be found conveniently near the deposits of ore, or if it could be transported at remunerative prices, the matter would be far simpler. The Bengal iron fields have the advantage of the Raniganj coal mines, from one of which, Sanctoria, very fair smelting coke can be made. Its analysis shows over 84 per cent. of carbon, and though 15 per cent. of ash is high, yet the actual impurities are low, sulphur being present to the extent of only a quarter per cent., and phosphorus being practically absent. No other ironfield has such advantages in the way of coke; but fuel of sorts is nearly always attainable at a reasonable cost, and every effort should be made to improve its quality where it is inferior. In a former article we pointed out that the best coal for smelting purposes was found in Raniganj and the Wardha Valley. It may be said roughly that coal should contain at least sixty per cent. of carbon to give good result, and though the Raniganj coal is said to contain only some 53 per cent. of carbon on an average, yet the yield of the Kahabari (Hazaribagh) seam runs as high as 78 per cent., while the Pisgaon (Wardha Valley) coal gives an average of 65 per cent. In considering the value of coal for smelting we must, however, not merely consider its proportion of carbon when dug out of the ground, but its readiness to coke, and the percentage of carbon likely to be found in the coke. This especially affects the coal found in the Madras Presidency. Thus the coal found at Beddadanol in the Godava ri Valley showed only 37 per cent. each of carbon and volatile gases, and 26 per cent. of ash, but on coking the volatile gases disappeared, leaving 60 per cent. of carbon and 40 per cent. of ash, thus just bringing the coal within the limits we have laid down as remunerative, though we admit that in this instance the ash is excessive. This would not prevent smelting, however, though it would possibly increase the labour of cleaning out the furnaces, if the ash clinkered instead of proving friable, and would certainly require care in tapping the charge into the pigs. Even if a little ash found its way into the pigs at first, that need not seriously interfere with their value, as it could be eliminated in subsequent castings. The Singareni coal shows from 62 to 66 per cent. of carbon, 23 per cent. of volatile gases, and from 11 to 15 per cent. of ash. Assuming that on coking the Singareni coal will act in a manner similar to that of Beddadanol, viz., that all the volatile gases will disappear, and the carbon and ash be increased in the proportion of 23 to 14, we have a result for the poorest yield of 76 per cent. of carbon in the coke, and 24 per cent. of ash; this is quite good enough to work on, and may be taken as a fair basis for work with the products of this valley. Although the average of Raniganj coal gives only 53 per cent. of carbon, yet there is no reason why excellent smelting should not be done with it, for it contains over 30 per cent. of volatile gases (including moisture), and, as this should all disappear in coking, the resultant coke should show 72 per cent. of carbon to 28 per cent. of ash.

The Barakur coal should give even better results, for it has 65 per cent. of carbon in its natural state, which would rise to over 79 per cent. when coked, the balance being ash. It is thus evident that the small proportion of carbon in the original Indian coals is not so serious a matter as might be supposed, on account of the high per centage of volatile gases which would disappear in coking. The effect on the Kahabari coal, which we have already shown, naturally the best for smelting, is to raise the carbon in the coke to from 80 to 84 per cent., while Warora coal, which with only 45 per cent. of carbon, appears at first sight unsuitable, contains so much volatile gases and water (40 p r cent.) that its coke would contain fully 70 per cent. of carbon. Specimens of coal sent from Kanigorum (in the Waziri Hills) showed about 48 per cent. each of carbon volatile matter, and only 2 per cent. of ash. This if coked would yield 78 per cent. of carbon, but would so greatly increase the ash that it is doubtful whether in this instance it would not be better to use the coal as it stood with a hot blast. Kanigorum coal would not be of much use in iron working, on account of the enormous cost of transport, and the figures given being only from small samples, are not, perhaps, good indications of the general value of the coal there. We mention the case, however, to show that even inferior coal may be worked up into serviceable fuel, and may also be found in the most out-of-the-way and unexpected places. We have assumed that the coal would be coked before using to show how even apparently poor fields could be profitably worked. Such coal as that of Kahibari and Singareni would not, however, require such treatment; the proposal is only an alternative one in any case. In our opinion, it would pay better to artificially increase the proportion of carbon, and this could be done by adding a certain amount of charcoal to each charge. Charcoal is by far the best fuel for iron-smelting, and if it could be obtained cheaply it might be advantageously used at every stage. It is to charcoal that Indian iron must look for its future development, if for no other reason, because the purity and excellence of ore, and in cheap charcoal we must look for the means of starting a great industry. It may mean that each process will be a step in advance of those carried out in Europe, viz., that coal processes have to be carried out with coke, and coke processes with charcoal, but the result will be good. Salem alone seems absolutely devoid of coal, and Salem ore is so good that it would pay to take it to Calcutta and smelt it with Kahabari coal. In fact, the value of fuel within a reasonable distance, though all important for most ores, becomes less when the quality rises to a very high grade. At the same time good fuel within reasonable distance would be essential to the full development of the Salem fields, for the ore is far from being the same throughout, varying greatly, and only the best would be worth exporting to Bengal—if that. We are, therefore, compelled to consider the practibility of the use of charcoal throughout the processes.

The Indian Steel, Iron, Chrome Company successfully used charcoal during 1833 and succeeding years, and if liberal forests rights were granted by Government, there is no reason why it should not be successfully used again. Good Babool timber fit for charcoal would take about five years or less to arrive at a suitable size. Babool is one of the best, if not the best firewood obtainable, as it is dense, and gives out great heat. Local timber and junglewoods would, however, probably pay better in the end. The question, of mixing charcoal with the coal, thereby raising the percentage of carbon, is one worthy of consideration, though better results would probably be obtained if the charcoal was pounded and then pressed into bricks or slabs, so that its consistency might more closely resemble that of coal. The caking of powdered fuels is not studied as it might be, though it might lead to great results, especially in India. Another fuel that has been hitherto passed over is peat, of which a great deal is available in the Neilgherries. Dr. Percy, in his "Metallurgy," states that it is similar to the peat sold in England, while it is said to be procurable at the bog for eight annas per thousand pounds. It contains, however, a very large proportion of ash, and would probably require to be pulverised mixed with charcoal dust to raise the percentage of carbon, and pressed into cakes. If this was done locally it would be economically used as fuel. Petroleum, unfortunately, has not yet been discovered in Southern India, so that it would have to be imported if used as a lubricant in pressing cakes of charcoal dust, or charcoal dust and peat, but the cruder and cheaper forms of petroleum would be of great value in this connection. The whole question of artificial fuel is one that requires more technical treatment than we feel in a position to give it, but it is certainly worth the serious consideration of experts in connection with the development of the many ores that lie unworked beneath the surface of India. It would be necessary for such experts to fully satisfy themselves as to what really was available in the way of fuel in the different metal-bearing districts of India, and then to see how this material could be best worked up and used in smelting ores. Into the question of fuel in Burma we have not gone. It is a subject upon which we require much more information than we have at present, before we can feel in a position to do the matter justice. Burma will, we believe, prove to be rich in iron and coal, both appearing in the Chindwin Valley, for instance, in quantities that to the eye of anyone not an expert would appear conclusive proof that both could be remuneratively worked. Scientific and systematic examination is however, necessary before the exact value of these fields can be determined. Arakan has long been known for a coal-bearing country, but its fields yield material too poor in carbon for iron smelting, while in the Tenasserim division there are fairly good chances that the Hienlat mines would prove productive at a cost of Rs. 16 a ton. It is in Upper Burma, however, that the rich coal-fields are supposed to lie, that at Membaloung, in the Shan States, having been declared equal to the best English coal.

BREAKDOWN OF THE TROOPSHIP CROCODILE

(Bombay Gazette, Dec. 27.)

Speculation has been rife in Bombay during the last two or three days as to what had happened the Troopship Crocodile to account for her non-arrival. The vessel left Portsmouth on Nov. 26th last with 1,303 persons aboard, all told in charge of Capt. Churchill. She made the usual passage to Malta, Port Said, and Suez, leaving the latter place on the 11th inst., and should have arrived here on Tuesday morning last. She was sighted by the Russian squadron conveying H.I.H. the Czarewitch the morning after passing Aden, but from that time nothing more was heard of the Crocodile until this morning. At about eight o'clock yesterday morning the lookout at the lighthouse made out two troopships making for the bay. It was at once correctly surmised that the Crocodile's machinery had broken down and that the Serapis, which sailed from Bombay on Thursday, the 18th inst., had picked her up and was towing the disabled ship to her destination. The vessels slowly neared the bay and dropped anchor at half-past eleven o'clock. It appears that at four o'clock on Sunday morning last, when the Crocodile was in latitude 16·14 north, long. 58·4 east, about 800 miles from Bombay, the engines begun to jump, and it was discovered that the crank shaft had broken. Staff Engineer White was immediately summoned, and on examination he found that the after-arm of the high pressure cylinder had broken off entirely. Nothing could be done to repair the damage, as there was no duplicate of the fractured shaft aboard. At the time of the accident she was making 46 to 47 revolutions a minute, rather over the usual rate, giving a speed of from 10 to 14 knots an hour. Steam was promptly cut off without any further damage being done to the vessel or injury to persons. The Crocodile laid helpless on the water, and as there was not a breath of mind, it was useless to set sail. The weather fortunately was fine and the sea as still as a mill pond, and the vessel drifted idly about awaiting assistance, there being little anxiety as to the safety of those aboard. At about eight o'clock in the evening the look-out sighted a steamer low on the horizon making for Bombay. Rockets and guns were fired to attract attention, but they failed, and the steamer disappeared without answering the signals. A slight breeze had by this time sprung up, and the captain gave orders for sails to be set, but they did little more than move the colossal hull of the Crocodile. Nothing more was seen that night, and the wind dying away the ship got broadside on, and drifted about two miles out of her course. On Sunday morning, after lying helpless for twenty-four hours, the Serapis was sighted, and a steam-launch was sent off to communicate with her. The Serapis immediately replied to the summons, and a couple of steel hawsers were got aboard. The port haweser twice snapped before the Crocodile was moved, but after two hours the ropes were got to stand the strain, and a speed of about seven knots an hour eventually made. All now went well with both vessels. The Serapis was splendidly handled, and was enabled to keep the uniform speed of seven knots until land was sighted. The engines of the Crocodile are three-cylinder compound engines with an indicated horse-power of 4,100, and were built in 1880 by Messrs. Humphreys and Tennant, London. The injured section of the shaft is 17½ inches in diameter, and weighs about six tons. On arriving in Bombay the authorities at home were communicated with for instructions. The Serapis will leave again for England at 9·30 this morning. There was rather an amusing scene aboard the Serapis when the disabled vessel was sighted. Ever since they left Bombay every one aboard was on the look-out for the Crocodile, and when she was sighted and it became evident that they would have to retrace the eight hundred miles they had already made, the feelings of the passengers were distinctly vindictive, and there was a hearty wish that some one else had picked her up. However, the trouble was not sufficient to prevent anybody aboard either vessel from spending a very happy Christmas day.

The following is the list of persons aboard the Crocodile:—60 officers, 13 ladies, 12 officers' children, 1,132 European rank and file, 46 women, and 40 children. During the voyage one child died of bronchitis. The following are the names of the officers and their families:—

BENGAL.

PRINCE MUHAMMAD FURROKH SHAH, a popular Native gentleman at Calcutta, will be the sheriff of the city for 1891. It is some years now since the office has been held by a Muhammadan gentleman.

AT Saturday's meeting of the Calcutta University Senate a recommendation of a committee which has been engaged in examining the Act of Incorporation was adopted, the effect of which, if carried out, will be to change the entire character of the University. At present, of course, the University is simply an examining body, but it is now proposed to convert it into a teaching body as well, with Professorships and endowments. Sir Alfred Croft opposed the scheme on the ground that it was in advance of existing requirements. Taking a practical view of the matter, he doubted whether the scheme would pay, owing to the scant attendance of students. There are now eight hundred M.A.'s in the various faculties, and the number of those who have pursued their studies in any special branch of higher knowledge may be counted on one's fingers. This was not said as a reproach by Sir Alfred, but was merely mentioned as a fact. It certainly is in keeping with the strictly utilitarian views of Indian students, to whom the securing of a degree as a marketable commodity is the aim and object of educational ambition.

MADRAS.

MR. JUSTICE PIGOT has refused the application for a special jury for the trial of the Jain defamation case, which is now engaging the attention of the greater part of the Calcutta Bar at the Sessions.

DISAPPOINTMENT leads to derangement, and derangement suicide—not always; but it was so, observes the Madras Times, in the case of a young man named Rupert Stewart, who brooded over his non-success in an examination, lost his balance of mind, and shot himself with an old gun. The circumstances of his death are very sad, and mournfully related in a Colombo paper. The deceased young man was the second son of the late Mr. George Stewart, District Judge of Kegalle, and the nephew of Mr. Charles Stewart, retired Puisne Judge of the Colombo Supreme Court.

THE Madras Catholic Union recently forwarded a memorial addressed to the Marquis of Salisbury, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, praying for the abolition of the Ecclesiastical Patronage of the King of Portugal in India, and particularly for redress in connection with the grievances of Catholics of the Archdiocese of Madras in regard to the Adyar Orphanage in the St. Thome Diocese, which is subject to the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Mylapore, though it belongs to the Archdiocese. The memorial is signed by Messrs. Ambrose and Philips as honorary secretaries of the Union. The Government of Madras has forwarded the memorial to England without any remarks.

SOME copies of a memorandum by Colonel J. H. Bell, R.E., late of the Madras Public Works Department, on the Irrigation Works of General Sir Arthur T. Cotton, K.C.S.I., R.E., in this Presidency, have been sent out by the former officer now in England for distribution to officers and others in the Madras Public Works Department. Colonel Bell in forwarding the copies has informed the Chief Engineer that the Memorandum was drawn up by him at the special request of Indian Engineer officers. Colonell Bell is believed to be the only officer who was personally cognisant of the details of all Sir Arthur Cotton's projects, and it is highly desirable that his memorandum should be put into the hands of all Engineering officers. The volumes have been supplied gratis, and have been acknowledged with suitable thanks by Government.

THE Chamber of Commerce in a letter to Government in the Public Works (Railway) Department, on the subject of Feeder Railways in Guzerat, expresses its regret that Government has not been able to formulate and lay down plainly the conditions under which it is prepared to sanction the construction of those feeder lines. The Chamber places little reliance on local boards originating schemes, and trusts Government will decide on taking advantage of the moderate terms offered by the B.B. and C.I. Railway Company for working feeder lines in connection with their system and determine to commence such railways, guaranteeing from provincial revenue the interest on capital borrowed for the Imperial Government. The Chamber impresses upon Government the desirability of commencing at once the survey of the branch from Manmar to Nandobar.

THE Government of India having expressed to the Governor of the French Settlements in India the willingness of Government to render assistance in enabling a railway survey to be made for a proposed line from Pondicherry to Tirupapuliyur (Cuddalore New Town) the agent of the South Indian Railways, on Sept. 11, that the survey was about to be commenced by this Company at the request of the French authorities. He asked the Madras Government to give orders to the Collector of South Arcot to issue the necessary notice under section 4 of the Land Acquisition Act to allow of the Engineers engaged on the survey to enter on the land in British territory, remove trees and leave such marks as may be found absolutely necessary. This matter was attended to by the Government last month.

BOMBAY.

(Dec. 27.)

MR. J. TINTNER, of the firm of Messrs. A. Blascheck and Co., was on Tuesday elected Chairman, and Mr. N. S. Glazebrook, of Messrs. Lyon and Co., Deputy Chairman, of the Bombay Cotton Trade Association for the ensuing year.

AT the Appeal Court on the 19th inst. Mr. Justice Birdwood and Mr. Justice Parsons resumed consideration of a reference from Mr. W. R. Hamilton, Second Presidency Magistrate, whether, after an accused had been committed on a charge of culpable homicide not amounting to murder to the Sessions Court by the Coroner of Bombay, a Magistrate could inquire into the same charge for the purpose of the same commitment. Their Lordships gave their ruling that the Magistrate was not ousted of his jurisdiction because the Coroner had held an inquiry into the cause of the death of the person murdered and drawn up an inquisition under Act 4 of 1871.

ON Saturday morning Sir Steuart Colvin Bayley, K.C.S.I., C.I.E., the retiring Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, who has been appointed Political Secretary at the India Office, accompanied by Lady Bayley, and his son Lieutenant Bayley, of the Political Department, arrived in Bombay from Calcutta, which place he left on Wednesday evening. Captain Cox, A.D.C. to H.E. Lord Harris, was present at the Victoria Terminus to meet Sir Steuart, and there were also present H.E. Nawab Sir Khorshedjah Bahadoor Shamshur Oomrah, K.C.I.E., and Mr. Shapoorjee Eduljee Chinoy. The retiring Lieutenant-Governor and party, after a short conversation with those present on the platform, drove in a Government House carriage to the Esplanade Hotel, where they stayed for a couple of hours. A salute of fifteen guns was fired announcing his arrival. At a quarter to one o'clock Sir Steuart and Lady Bayley drove to the Apollo Bunder, where they were met by Captain Hext, R.N., C.I.E., the Director of the Indian Marine, and proceeded in a Government steam-launch on board the P. and O. mail steamer. Captain Hext and Lieutenant Bayley accompanied them to the steamer and saw them off.

THE Bombay Catholic Examiner writes:—"The terrible catastrophe which occured in the Native Town early on Wednesday morning, by which twenty-nine lives were lost on the spot, and upwards of forty persons were seriously injured, is yet another painful example of the deplorable conditions under which buildings are raised in Bombay. No later than last June a four-storied house in course of construction collapsed, with the result that five lives were lost; and now the structure in Jambli-street, which left the builder's hands little more than three years ago, tumbles down, like a house of cards, involving in its ruin loss of life to no fewer than twenty-nine individuals. Nobody with his eyes open passing through the streets of Bombay can fail to see the cause of this and similar disasters. Houses are run up with a most culpable disregard to the safety of those who may have to inhabit them. There is no adequate supervision on the part of the Municipal authorities; in fact, it is not quite clear if the Municipality has the right to insist on proper precautions being taken by owners or contractors. It is time that Government should interpose and frame a number of stringent by-laws which will serve to put a stop to the jerry-builder's trade. There should also be some means of punishing owners and builders who by their criminal neglect expose to imminent risk the lives of unsuspecting tenants."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, OUDE AND PUNJAB.

THE question of the retention of a fifth judge in the Punjab Chief Court has not yet been settled. Sir M. Plowden goes on long furlough covering two hot weathers, and Mr. Benton also takes seven months' furlough. Mr. Stogdon and Mr. Beachcroft will both return to the Chief Court to fill the vacancies if the fifth judge is sanctioned; but the selection of a Barrister Judge is still unsettled.

THE Government of the North-West Provinces has just given a substantial proof of its interest in the Ramsay Hospital project at Naini Tal, by placing the sum of Rs. 50,000 at the disposal of the committee towards the cost of construction and equipment of the hospital. The building is now being rapidly pushed on by Mr. Holme, and no avoidable delay will be allowed to occur in completing the project.

THE Irrigation Department in the Punjab seems to be in a flourishing condition. The percentage of net revenue on capital outlay has risen in the case of one of the canals—the Sidhnai—to close on 14, and for the whole province it has reached to 4·76. The balance of net revenue, after providing for interest charges, was about one and three-quarter lakhs at the end of last year; it is now close on five and three-quarter lakhs. The boon conferred by the irrigation system on the province may be gauged from the fact that the value of crops raised by canal water during the past year is estimated at over eight crores of rupees.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, JANUARY 12, 1891.

THE CZAREWITCH IN INDIA.

THE Bombay papers to hand by the present Overland Mail are filled with accounts of the arrival and landing of the Czarewitch, and of the official ceremonies observed on the occasion. His Imperial Highness was received not only with all the marks of official courtesy which the occasion required, but with an evident desire on all sides, official and non-official, to accord him a really hearty welcome as an illustrious guest whom they were glad to see. The scene must have been a very imposing one, and could hardly have failed to have struck the visitor with strange impressions which he is not likely soon to forget. "The formal reception," we read, "was, of course organised according to the strictest etiquette, and the glitter of gold lace and steel and brilliant uniforms beneath the glowing Indian sun formed a spectacle it would be difficult to match. The crowds, however, of citizens of every caste and creed and in varied turbans and in many-coloured garments that lined the streets and thronged the approaches to the Apollo Bunder, gave a spontaneous and quite unofficial welcome." There is no city in the world, perhaps, which can beat Bombay in grouping together such a variety of "many-coloured garments" on particular occasions, and in making a picture which the eye dwells upon with pleasure and wonder, but which defies the most skilful artist to reproduce on canvas. It can only linger in memory and in the mind's eye. Such a picture we may rest assured was presented to the Czarewitch on the morning that he stepped on shore in beautiful Bombay. The ever-present and omniscient reporter tries slightly to describe the effect on the Imperial visitor:—"As he advanced, clad in the somewhat quaint but effective uniform of the Hussars of the Imperial Guard, he acknowledged with a military air the salutations of the high officers of State and the foreign consuls grouped around. A strongly-built, broad-shouldered youth, about five feet eight in height, his first impression was evidently one of half-amused surprise as he found himself the subject of so much interest. With sharp black eyes—noticeably contrasting with the northern fairness of his complexion and the light brown of his moustache—he scanned inquisitively the strange faces, European and Asiatic, and examined with evident interest the novel costumes.

It was a striking scene, and one which must have caused some curious reflections in the minds of many who witnessed it. The Times of India sees little in the incident of the visit, but the arrival of an illustrious personage who is entitled to a welcome in India, not so much because he is the heir of a vast empire, but because he is a close relative of our Royal Family, and goes to India as the guest of the Queen-Empress. Therefore it considers that the welcome so warmly accorded to him in Bombay will accompany him throughout his journey in India. "Everywhere he will be received with the respect and regard, though not necessarily with the same loyal affection that India already has been delighted to bestow upon his English relatives, their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Edinburgh, the Duke of Connaught, and the Duke of Clarence." And then the same writer goes on to refer to objects and places of interest that the illustrious visitor may see, where he may have the chance of contrasting the remains of bygone powers and past magnificence with the flourishing actualities of the present. "It would be easy to moralise on the presence of the future Emperor of all the Russians amid the ruined cities of Hindustan and the grand relics of Moslem prowess and in the very strongholds of British India, and to draw parallels and contrasts between the civilising methods of Brama and Mahomet on the one hand, and Russia and India on the other. But these things are obvious enough to be left unsaid."

Certainly they are better left unsaid if this be all the "moralising" which the writer can draw from the visit of the Czarewitch to India, and the welcome given to him there by its English rulers. The Bombay Gazette shows a truer instinct as to the real moral to be drawn, and goes straight to the point:—

"It is easy enough," it says, "to say that the incident has no political meaning—that there is little more than personal importance in the fact that a young Prince who is connected by marriage with the Royal Family of England is on a journey round Asia, and that Bombay is only one of the places on his route. The shortest way of testing the truth of that view of things is to ask if the Czarewitch would have been a likely, or even a possible, visitor to India a few years ago. There was a time when any Prince or Potentate in the world might have come here save a representative of the House of Romanoff. It would be less grateful to ask why such a visit was impossible a few years ago than to ask why it is possible to-day. If it is suggested that it is an optimistic exaggeration to read in it the suggestions of improved relations, and of greater reciprocal confidence, between the two great Asiatic Powers, the answer is that the Prime Minister of England has publicly asserted that view. We cannot go behind Lord Salisbury's declaration that the visit of the Czarewitch to India is a pledge of peace, for the most certain way of making him a false prophet is to disbelieve his prophecies, and to cling to the old-fashioned conventional belief that England and Russia are in the nature of things bound to distrust each other until distrust has broken out into open discord. They best labour for peace who most believe in it, and in a generous and trustful interpretation of this auspicious visit we may contribute largely to the maintenance of good relations between two Powers who have each a legitimate mission in Asia."

There is the rub. What a change might be if only our Russophobist friends could be brought to that sensible frame of mind which will allow them to recognise that Russia may have a mission in Asia quite as justifiable as our own, and that it might be possible for the two nations to do better than to stand aloof from each other, counting the hours and preparing the weapons for a coming struggle. But we have for so long a time taught ourselves that we must sooner or later fight Russia in order to hold India that it is little wonder the same idea has got fixed in Russian minds too. The Bombay Gazette thinks that if there was a little more wisdom and good temper on both sides, and that if it could cease to be a canon of Anglo-Russian polity that the only thing England can do with a European power in Asia is to mistrust him and treat him as an enemy, it is possible that Russia and England might live in closer neighbourhood in the East, and the idea of conterminous frontiers lose its terrors. And we think the same.

FIVE lakhs were spent last year on the protective works at Dera Ghazi Khan; and of the two lakhs remaining unexpended out of the sanctioned grant, one will be expended this year, and one next year, the requisite stone being obtained locally from the spurs of the Suleiman hills. Local opinion at Dera Ghazi Khan, appears, however, to hold that the stone alone will be adequate, and that protective "bunds" of mud should be constructed, as has been successfully done on other parts of the Indus, to divert the current of the river and reclaim land now spoiled by inundation.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

IN consequence of the decision of the military authorities to abandon Chunar, the detachment of the East Lancashire Regiment now stationed was to vacate the place by about January 4th, the historic fort being then handed over to the civil authorities.

REGARDING the composition of the Black Mountain Force, the Northumberland Fusiliers, from Nowshera, and the Manchester Regiment, from Sialkot, will probably have to be employed, as the authorities recognise that it is not advisable that young regiments fresh out from England, such as those now in Pindi, should be taken for the rough work and exposure of hill warfare.

A FURTHER reduction of the military garrison in Burma will probably take place in the course of this cold weather, two Madras Infantry regiments being withdrawn. This, however, is contingent on the new Burma Infantry battalions being raised to their full strength within the next few months. The Bengal Infantry regiment next on the roster for service in Upper Burma is the 7th.

THE 7th Bengal Infantry have been warned for Upper Burma in relief of the 38th, which regiment is to be withdrawn as soon as possible. The following changes have been made in the Bengal Infantry relief, owing to the impending reduction of the four Hindustani regiments:—27th Punjab Infantry from Bareilly to Jullunder, instead of to Jhelum; 36th Sikhs from Jullunder to Delhi; 18th Bengal Infantry from Jubbulpore to Silchar, whence the 40th will be withdrawn, to be broken up at Cawnpore; the 1st Nowgong to Jubbulpore; 24th Punjabis from Sialkote to Ferozepore; 35th Sikhs from Ferozepore to Jhansi or Nowgong.

THE 2nd Battalion of the 4th Gurkhas are to be kept for a month at Haka and Fort White after the arrival of the 2-3rd Gurkhas, so as to permit of columns being sent out to visit the Kanhow country, which has not yet been reduced to a proper state of subordination. The Kanhows have to be thoroughly punished for their attack on Yetsagyo, and this only can be done by two or three columns moving simultaneously upon their villages. The outbreak of fever at Haka has prevented the Chins in the Thetla district from receiving the attention which they have courted. Their villages are only a few miles off the road between Haka and Kan, and the headmen will have to explain to the Political Officer, backed by 200 or 300 Gurkhas, the petty raid near the latter place. On the Chittagong side it seems that the frontier police may, after all, be able to hold the posts without military assistance. The two companies of the 18th Bengal Infantry who were to have been sent to Chittagong have been detained for the present, pending arrangements to be made by the local civil authorities.

REGIMENTAL ORGANISATION.

The following orders in regard to the regimental reconstitutions to be effected from the 1st prox. in the Bengal Army are published in the Gazette of India:—

I.—The 33rd Regiment of Bengal Infantry, as at present constituted, will be mustered out at Delhi, and to replace it a regiment of Punjab Mahomedans, to be styled "The 33rd (Punjab) Regiment of Bengal Infantry," will be formed at Jhelum. The nucleus of the new regiment will primarily be formed from carefully selected volunteers from the 21st, 24th, and 28th Regiments of Bengal Infantry, and from the Cis-Indus Punjab Mahomedans now serving in the various Hindustani regiments; but, where specially recommended, men from other Punjabi regiments will also be eligible for transfer. The regiment will be completed by Punjabi Mahomedan recruits drawn from the neighbourhood of the Indus, from the Salt Range, and from the Rawalpindi District.

II.—The 38th Regiment of Bengal Infantry, as at present constituted, will be mustered out at Lucknow, and to replace it a regiment of Dogras, to be styled "The 38th (Dogra) Regiment of Bengal Infantry," will be formed at Sialkot. The nucleus of the new regiment will be formed from carefully-selected volunteers from the Dogras now serving in Hindustani regiments, from the Dogra company of the 1st Punjab Infantry (now under reduction to make room for Afridis), and from the Dogra company of the 22nd Bengal Infantry.

III.—The 39th Regiment of Bengal Infantry, as at present constituted, will be mustered out at Jhansi, and to replace it a regiment of Garhwalis, to be styled "The 39th (Garhwali) Regiment of Bengal Infantry," will be formed from the six companies of Garhwalis now in the 2nd Battalion of the 3rd Gurkha Regiment, and from volunteers from the two companies of hillmen forming part of the present 39th Bengal Infantry. The Garhwali companies of the 2nd Battalion 3rd Gurkha Regiment (which are now serving in Burma), will take the new designation set forth above from the date above specified. The re-formed regiment will eventually be stationed at Lansdowne (Kaludanda).

IV.—The 40th Regiment of Bengal Infantry, as at present constituted, will be mustered out at Cawnpore, and to replace it, a regiment of trans-frontier Mahomedans, including Baluchis, to be styled "The 40th (Baluch) Regiment of Bengal Infantry," will be formed at Quetta.

V.—A new 2nd Battalion of the 3rd Gurkha Regiment, to replace the battalion broken up in forming the new 39th Bengal Infantry, will be formed at Lansdowne, to be eventually located at Almora with the 1st Battalion. The nucleus of this battalion will be formed from the two companies of Gurkhas now forming part of the present 2nd Battalion, 3rd Gurkha Regiment.

2. The men now serving in the 33rd, 38th, 39th, and 40th Regiments of Bengal Infantry will be disposed of in the following manner:—

1. The Punjabi Mahomedans who do not belong to the classes designated for the new 33rd Regiment, together with the few Dogras and Sikhs serving in these corps, will be permitted to volunteer for transfer to the establishment or the reserve of any of the Punjabi regiments which enlist those classes.

2.—Jats and Hindustanis.—A careful selection will be made from the men of these classes now serving in these corps (all men whose retention in the service is from any cause considered undesirable being eliminated), and these selected men will be allowed the option of transfer to the establishment or the reserve of any Hindustani regiment they may select. The remainder, together with all Native officers and non-commissioned officers, will be discharged on the following rates of pension and gratuity:—

(a) The superior rates of pensions specified in Art. 500 (a), Army Regulations, India, Vol. I, Part II., to officers, non-commissioned officers and men who have completed twenty-five years of service and upwards.

(b) The ordinary rates of pensions to all officers, non-commissioned officers and men who have completed fourteen years' service, and have less than twenty-five years' service, with a bonus of one month's pay (including good-conduct pay) for every two years' service.

(c) To officers, non-commissioned officers and men of more than ten and less than fourteen years' service who may not volunteer for the reserve, two-thirds of the ordinary rate of pension, and a bonus of three months' pay (including good-conduct pay).

(d) To non-commissioned officers and men of five and less than ten years' service who may not volunteer for the reserve, a gratuity of one month's pay for each year of service, together with an additional bonus of three months' pay as above.

(e) To non-commissioned officers and men of less than five years' service who may not volunteer for the reserve, a gratuity of six months' pay.

3. Free passes by rail to their homes will be given to all officers, non-commissioned officers and men discharged on pension or gratuity under these orders.

4. The certified cost involved in change of uniform and equipment will be allowed to soldiers transferred to other regiments.

5. Any subsidiary orders that may be required to carry the above arrangements into effect will be issued by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India.

AN INDIAN "JACK THE RIPPER."

A HORRIBLE TALE UNFOLDED.

The annals of crime in these dominions find no parallel with the recent brutal murder committed by a respectable looking Mahomedan residing in the city of Hyderabad. The incident, from beginning to end, reads like a "Penny dreadful." The manner in which the murder was committed, its clever concealment for a time, and the eventual discovery, unfold a harrowing tale.

The deceased woman was a convert, and a teacher of the Zenana Schools in the Hyderabad City, and possessed a somewhat attractive appearance. Abdool Hoosain, her murderer, dressed like moonsufdar met her in the City and asked her if she would undertake to teach some of his children, to which the deceased replied in the affirmative. He then asked her to accompany him to his house. It being a holiday, and the deceased having spare time, accompanied her assassin to his residence near the Sir Salar Jung palace. When she had been decoyed into the house, Abdool Hoosain, with two other men, first divested her of all her jewellery, amounting to over Rs. 2,000, then attempted an outrage on her, and finally murdered her. Committing his horrible deed, Abdool Hoosain next made preparations to dispose of the body, which he did in a highly ingenious fashion, and had it not been for Providential circumstances the crime, perhaps, would never have been detected. He placed the body in a wicker basket, which he firmly secured by ropes, and placed over it a brand new cotton carpet. The basket was well padded, so as to prevent the corpse from shaking about. This make-up was again deposited into a deal-wood box securely nailed down and fastened with iron clamps, giving the package the appearance of a legitimate article for despatch. When Abdool Hoosain had completed his operations he engaged a cart and had his parcel conveyed to the Hyderabad Railway Station; but as it was a Sunday he was told by the Custom House authorities that no goods could be booked that day, and that if he wished it they would keep the package for him in their charge until the following day. Abdool Hoosain declined their offer, and said he would return the next day, on saying which he ordered the cartman to return to his house. On reaching his house he paid the cartman one rupee, which was a double fare, and told the man to call the next day to take the parcel to the railway station.

Unfortunately for Abdool Hoosain, the cartman arrived late in the day (one o'clock), and by the time the station was reached the goods train of that day had already left. It was, therefore, necessary to warehouse the package for the following day. The package was booked in the name of Shumshoodeen to Alla-oo-deen at Lahore, for which Rs. 15 and some annas were paid, and it was declared as wearing apparel. On the Good's Clerk visiting the shed on Tuesday he found an obnoxious odour emanating from some one of the packages, and, on closer scrutiny, discovered that it came from the one he had received from Abdool Hoosain. He immediately reported the matter to Messrs. Shaw and Williamson, the station-masters on duty, who suspecting something wrong, called in the police, and had the box opened, when to their horror they found a woman's corpse in an advanced stage of decomposition. They at once despatched telegrams to those concerned of the mysterious discovery, and cautiously proceeded to find trace of the consignee. Dr. Hunter and Mr. Crawford, of the Railway Police, arrived on the scene, and pronounced the case as one of murder. The stationmasters questioned the various cartmen, and eventually fell upon the right man, who, not being aware of the reason of their inquiry, stated that he was the person who had brought the package, at the same time describing where the man who gave it to him lived. He was then taken by the police to the house which he pointed out, and where Abdool Hoosain was arrested. The murderer frankly acknowledged his horrible crime, and furnished the police with evidence of its perpetration—handkerchiefs and pieces of cloth stained with blood. When arrested he was outside his house seated on the parapet, and the moment the cartman saw him he told the police that Abdool Hoosain was the man. The corpse, when discovered, was found in a seated posture, and was dressed in a cholee, a silk petticoat, and slippers, and appeared to be that of a good-looking Mahomedan woman of about twenty or twenty-five years of age. She had a wound on the the right side of her head—evidently her first blow from a stick—a knife wound on the right side of her chest, and her bladder was penetrating through her abdomen. Her teeth were knocked in, and her tongue and eyes protruding as if they were the results of strangulation.

The deceased's husband is a Munshi in the service of the Rev. George Gilder of the Methodist Episcopal Church Chudderghaut. He states he first missed his wife on Saturday night, and had reported the matter to the police. He was in the City on Tuesday, and hearing the report of the murder of a woman immediately concluded that it must have been his wife. His predictions were verified on visiting the Hyderabad Station, where he was shown his wife's corpse.

The deceased was a Christian convert and a mother of three children. She was much appreciated by all who knew her, and was always known to have led a Christian life. Her remains were removed from the station premises at ten o'clock on Friday night to their last resting place, which was accompanied by all the station staff and the deceased's friends, the Rev. Gilder performing the funeral service.

Abdool Hoosain is in police custody, but his two accomplices are still at large.—Deccan Times, Dec. 11.

THE Lahore paper writes:—The opinion of the Punjab Government upon the question of the Simla Municipality will soon be before the Government of India; and its recommendation, which will no doubt be given effect to, will be that there shall be a paid president, but that otherwise the committee shall be left much as it is. In the shape in which the question has been raised this will perhaps be the best settlement, provided, of course, that the right president is selected. There ought, moreover, to be a wider selection of candidates willing to accept the position. Nevertheless, the choice will not be easily made, for the post will require considerable administrative experience; and the president of a committee which, like that of Simla, must always be mainly composed of men of social standing, will require other qualifications than mere business aptitude. The expenditure which the Punjab Government is willing to undertake with reference to the salary of the president and the extension of local improvements is likely to appear liberal enough to satisfy the Government of India and the reforming party, at any rate for a time.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, une 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

And that same prayer doth teach us all to render

JEOPARDY OF LIFE THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous result's might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, "ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.

"A DEVONSHIRE LADY.—Jan. 25, 1889."

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose Without it Life is a Sham!—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 3rd January; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 1st January; and from Bengal to the 31st December.

H.I.H. THE CZAREWITCH has been travelling in Hyderabad during the week, shooting and visiting the Caves of Ellora and other places of interest. H.I.H. passed through Bombay on Wednesday night, dining at the Victoria Terminus, and then proceeding on to Ahmedabad, where till last night he remained the guest of H.E. the Governor, shooting and visiting places of interest. Last night he left Ahmedabad for a tour in the N.W. Provinces.

H.E. THE VICEROY AND LADY LANSDOWNE witnessed the race for the Viceroy's Cup at Calcutta.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR has been spending the week in camp at Ahmedabad, in the neighbourhood of which he has been shooting. He met H.I.H. the Czarewitch at Ahmedabad, and entertained his Imperial Highness in camp. To-day his Excellency proceeds to Godhra to cut the first sod of the Godhra-Rutlam Railway.

LADY HARRIS left Bombay on January 12th to join H.E. the Governor at Ahmedabad for the reception there of H.I.H. the Czarewitch.

THE annual parade of European and Native troops, in honour of the proclamation of H.M. the Queen as Empress of India, took place in all military stations on New Year's morning.

Two mountain batteries, six regiments of Native Infantry, and a detachment of Cavalry, under Colonel Lockhart, commanding the Punjab Frontier Force, will comprise the force for the Miranzai Expedition, which sets out during the month of February.

THE Siamese Government have withdrawn all armed posts in the Trans-Salween States found to be tributary to the British by the Boundary Commission.

THE Government of India has decided to construct a new line of railway from Mogul Serai to Palamow, in order that the Daltongunge coalfields may be utilised. The branch line from Belaspur to Kutni, Bengal-Nagpur Railway, was completed on December 23rd. The new line is 197 miles in length.

THE expedition against the Black Mountain tribes will probably set out in March.

THE Delhi-Kalka Railway, having been finally inspected, will be opened on the 1st prox.

M. NOUET, late Governor of Pondicherry, left India for Martinique, of which he is appointed Governor, on Dec. 27th.

THE Sixth Indian National Congress opened at Calcutta on the 26th of December, and closed on the 30th. The next Congress will be held at Nagpore.

A SMALL force is to be sent to Thetta to punish the villagers for the murder of Mr. Wetherall.

NEWS was received from Bombay on January 1st, by telegram, that the title of Maharajah was conferred by Government upon his Highness the Thakore Sahib. This mark of the esteem of the paramount Power for his Highness, which could not fail to be connected in the popular mind with the two recent main events of his Highness's reign—namely, the institution of constitutional administration by a State Council, and the resolute and effectual punishment of blackmailers, caused hearty rejoicings among the people as the news became known. In the afternoon his Highness received visits of congratulation from his officials, as well as a large number of his subjects at Moti Bag. It being New Year's Day a fancy dress ball was given in the evening at Gadechi.

CAPTAIN LEIGH, Deputy Commissioner, Kohat, will be Political Officer with the Miranzai Field Force.

MR. PYNE, from Kabul, has arrived at Calcutta, with a commission for further purchases of machinery for the Ameer.

Mr. E. J. SINKINSON, Financial Secretary to the Government of India, died at Darjeeling suddenly on New Year's Day.

THE Miranzai Field Force strength will be between five and six thousand fighting men.

THE new post of Revenue Commissioner in Baluchistan will probably be created at the beginning of the next financial year.

MR. MACKENZIE will be away for two months in Upper Burma. The Chief Secretary accompanies him.

IT is probable that the Government of India will shortly decide the terms of a contract for the distribution of receipts and charges in Upper Burma between Imperial and Provincial Funds.

THOUGH it is too early for any definite arrangements to be made, it is probable that the Viceroy will open the Allahabad Waterworks, which are now rapidly approaching completion, on his way up-country in April.

MAJOR RIDGEWAY, V.C., lately officiating as Assistant Quartermaster-General at Army Headquarters, takes command of the 44th Gurkha Light Infantry at Shillong on January 1st.

THE appointment of Mr. P. G. Melitus, now serving in Assam, to the Under-Secretaryship in the Home Department, rendered vacant by the elevation of Mr. T. P. Hewett to the Deputy-Secretaryship, is now gazetted.

THE current Gazette of India notifies several changes in the Foreign Department. The Hon. Mr. R. J. Crosthwaite goes to Central India as Resident; Mr. C. S. Bayley officiates as Political Agent in Bikanir; and Captain Younghusband, so well known for his explorations in Central Asia, is attached to the Department.

THE composition of the Miranzai Field Force, to operate beyond the frontier south of Kohat, will probably be two mountain batteries, six regiments of Native infantry, and a detachment of cavalry. Colonel Lockhart, commanding the Punjab Frontier Force, will be in charge of the expedition, which will start about the middle of January.

MR. BALDWIN LATHAM, the eminent drainage engineer, goes to Benares on Jan. 7th to report on the proposed drainage works of that city for the information of the Local Government.

NOTES.

THE telegrams from India give little news of variety, and the papers by the Overland Mail are equally barren of topics likely to be interesting to Anglo-Indians at home. The question which is agitating the Hindu community in Calcutta concerning the age of consent in marriage is being fairly and temperately dealt with; but so far as information which has appeared in the public Press goes it is evident that the Government of India must proceed with the greatest caution in the very delicate social matters affecting the marriage customs of the Natives of the country, whether Hindu or Muhammadan.

THE Times of India says:—"Now that full reports of the Sixth Indian National Congress have been received from Calcutta it is evident that any very general interest in the movement is dying out. There were, it is said, some 1,400 delegates; but the huge meeting hall is described as being half empty, while the audience is said to have been mostly of the schoolboy type. The delegates were welcomed by Mr. Munmohun Ghose, who maintained that the National Congress represented the thinking portion of India, and was not as a body opposed to social reform. There had been some difficulty this year in finding a President. Finally the honour fell upon Mr. P. M. Metha, probably because he is a Parsee; and, as the Parsees as a body have now withdrawn from the movement, a prominent Parsee is precious."

THE Czarewitch's tour has been one of quiet hospitality, without any sensational incidents or comments. Both Natives and Europeans have received him as an illustrious guest, credited to them by the Queen-Empress, and there has been no attempt to make any political capital out of the circumstance of his visit to India.

WE have been carefully looking for the expressions of opinion in the Native Press on this matter, and for the benefit of our Russophobist friends we subjoin a few.

THE Rast Goftar says:—"We rather expect that the visit to India will have a good educational value upon the Czarewitch. He will see that the British Government derives its strength from the diversity of races inhabiting it as well as from their interested, and, therefore, staunch loyalty. He may notice that although the masses are too ignorant to make any difference between one European power and another, they are perfectly contented under the just and peaceful rule of England. He may also see that even those who declaim most strongly against particular measures of the Government, and who demand most unreasonably the rights and privileges of popular Government—even these do not for a moment harbour a secret desire in their hearts for the subversion of British rule."

THE Kaiser-i-Hind says:—"The Czarewitch and his Royal companion, who were so hospitably treated by H.E. the Governor for three days, must have been convinced in their minds, from personal experience, that the reports received by them in Russia about India and its people were grossly exaggerated and false. It is quite possible that his Imperial Highness, when he travels all over the vast continent of India, will be in a position to disabuse the mind of the Czar of all the Russias and his counsellors of the fictitious reports they have been receiving from interested parties about the present condition of India and its teeming millions. The Czarewitch must have been convinced, from what little he has seen in Bombay, and will be still more convinced, when he travels over the length and breadth of the country, that not only the millions of its inhabitants, but the Native Rajahs and Chiefs, with their respective subjects, are happy and contented under the British sway, and that none of them desire the interference, and much less the rule of any foreign Government. Notwithstanding a few defects in their Government of this country, the British have been able to secure the love, affection, and good-will of the people in India, and it will be impossible for any power in the world in any way to relax the ties of loyalty and friendship existing between the rulers and the ruled."

THE Gujrati says:—"There are some among us who will attribute the visit of his Imperial Highness to political motives. We prefer to believe that the tour is intended to impart to his Imperial Highness' education that finish which otherwise it will be wanting in. India is a vast continent, inhabited by races as different at least in race, religion, and habits as any two different nations may well be. It boasts of a civilisation that is unfortunately now lost, and a grandeur that is extinguished. . . . . However, what will perhaps strike his Imperial Highness is the universal peace reigning throughout the land, and the spectacle of a heterogeneous people contented and loyal to the British Crown. His Highness will also notice the freedom which under the British rule the Indians enjoy; it is the result of the confidence which the rulers have in course of time found the Indians have well deserved. Education has already made rapid strides, and people have learnt gradually to demand from their rulers those popular rights which by their education and ability they think they are entitled to at the hands of an enlightened Government. They have evidently great confidence in the liberal instincts of the English nation, to whom they sometimes appeal for the redress of any grievvance they may feel. Many Indians occupy high offices in the State in the judical and revenue and political departments, in the councils of Governors, and the council of the Viceroy. The Indian Press has a freedom that was unknown before. All this, we repeat, has been the result of mutual confidence between the ruler and the ruled, of a sympathy begotten of long association."

THE Jam-e-Jamshed remarks that the personal experience which the Czarewitch will be able to obtain in India will leave no room for him and his countrymen to doubt that the people of this country are bound by strong ties of affection and loyalty to those who are destined to rule over them.

THE Kassid-i-Mumbai remarks that the visit of the Czarewitch will do one very great good to India, and it is that he will be able to see with his own eyes that the people are happy and contented under the British rule. The paper wishes his Imperial Highness a safe return to his own country.

These could be followed up by many other extracts from the whole Native Press of India; but perhaps these extracts will do for the moment.

We might say to Mr. Digby and his Congress friends: "Please copy and—if possible—ponder."

THE Times of India says:—We record with deep regret the death, at the European General Hospital, Bombay, of Mr. Robert W. S. Pinhey, Fourth Judge of the Small Causes Court. For many years Mr. Robert Pinhey has been suffering from that terrible disease—consumption. Ten years ago his friends despaired of his life, but a visit to Australia gave him a new lease of existence. His pluck throughout must have been almost indomitable, for he never spared himself either in business, in society, or in field sports. He was invariably cheerful, and seemed at all times so full of vitality that only his very intimate friends knew that from many years back his life was doomed. He returned from furlough a few months since. His friends were shocked by the change in his appearance. He resumed his duties in the Small Causes Court as vigorously as ever, and continued them, until the bursting of a blood-vessel some three weeks back necessitated his removal to the European General Hospital. Mr. Robert Pinhey was the eldest son of the well-known Bombay Judge, and few members of the Bar have been more popular, whether in Kurrachee or Bombay, for he was an essentially likeable man.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 18.

Yesterday's Government Gazette contains a despatch from the late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal to the Indian Government, forwarding a number of letters from civil and medical officers on the subject of the age of consent in marriage. Sir Steuart Bayley thus sums up the conclusions he has drawn from a study of these papers.

First, that it is a religious obligation among the Hindoos for their daughters to go through the marriage ceremony before the age of puberty, but that it is no part of the Hindoo religion that they should be subjected to cohabitation before that period. Secondly, in Bengal, the first indications of puberty generally appear at the age of twelve or thirteen. Thirdly, it is a general practice for Hindoo girls after marriage, but before puberty is even indicated, to be subjected to more or less frequent cohabitation. Fourthly, apart from the moral abominations which sometimes accompany this practice, its physiological results are disastrous, not only to the immediate health of the girl, but still more to her capacity for bearing healthy children. Fifthly, while the practice is viewed with growing disfavour by educated men, it is favoured and enforced by the influence of women. Sixthly, the custom appears to be widespread, though it is less universal among the higher than among the lower classes, but it prevails generally over Bengal proper, especially over the eastern and centre districts. It does not, however, extend generally to Behar, and is not prevalent in Orissa, and the aboriginal tribes are apparently free from it.

Sir Steuart Bayley recommends raising the age of consent between husband and wife to 12, and in other cases to 14.

Sir Andrew Scoble's Bill has been much discussed by the Press during the past week. It may be said generally that the Anglo-Indian journals approve of it. The Native Press is divided; some papers give the measure a hearty support, others express approval of the principle, but think legislation useless or unnecessary. A third party, representing the more strictly orthodox and conservative Hindoos, denounce it in more or less strong terms. As yet the opposition has not gone beyond newspaper writing, but it is understood that steps are being taken to organise meetings to protest against the Bill.

Pundit Rama Misra Sastri, Professor of Sanscrit at Bengal College, has made an important addition to controversial literature on the subject by publishing a pamphlet containing a full and learned exposition of the Hindoo marriage law. He arrives at the conclusion that for a wife to join her husband before the age of twelve is an abuse expressly forbidden in the ordinances of Manu and Susruta.

Owing to the heavy rain the starting of the Miranzai expedition was postponed to Friday; but up to noon on that day there was no signs of the weather clearing.

The 4th Sikhs and the headquarters wing of the 32nd Pioneers will join the left column of the Black Mountain force.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JAN. 17.

The condition of the Shan State Momein is very unsatisfactory. Kahon Tsawbwa, who had committed serious outrages, was required to appear before Mr. Daniel, Assistant Commissioner, who was recently sent with a small column to the Momein territory. Instead of obeying, the Tsawbwa mur dered one of the messengers sent by Mr. Daniel, and the other escaped with difficulty. Mr. Daniel reports that he expects organised opposition from several districts, and he has asked for reinforcements; 100 military police and sixty British mounted infantry have been despatched. A further demonstration would be made against Momein by sending strong patrols of British infantry from Bernardmyo.

It is definitely declared that the tracts east of the Salwen river, occupied by the Karens, belong to Sawlawi, chief of the Red Karens, not the same who claimed them. This area comprises some of the finest teak forests in Burma.

The Rangoon Times refers to Captain Drury's arrest on account of articles published by it, characterising the proceeding as an act of senseless tyranny. It declares that Captain Drury is an absolute stranger to the newspaper, which never had any communication with him. It is now reported that Captain Drury was required to apologise, not for the contents of the articles published in the Rangoon Times, but because those articles were supposed to be indirectly due to his action in other matters. The military authorities refuse all information as to Captain Drury's case.

The Mandalay Herald reports that a Phoongyee was recently arrested carrying a seal and letter purporting to be from the Mingoon Prince.

The official estimate of the rice crop available for export is 1,154,000 tons, or about 150,000 tons less than last year. The merchants' estimate of the crop is somewhat higher. The quality of the new crop is good.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

SIR JOHN EDGAR.

The Indian Mirror has the following highly eulogistic notice of Sir John Edgar:—

The only fault of the Chief Secretary, so far as we see, is that he has given the administration he has served a character generally for sobriety, justice, and fair dealing, which was sadly wanting in its predecessors. Even the most brilliant intervals of Sir Rivers Thompson's rule, brief as they were, were those during which Sir John Edgar served as Chief Secretary. Sir John's bad health has prevented him from contributing to that continuity of policy which would have been so undesirable for us all. But when we consider the generally even and smooth character of the late administration, its absence of sensational incidents and its want of theatricality, on the whole we must say that, for all this, we are indebted to no small extent to the tact and common sense of the Chief Secretary. We simply refuse to believe that Sir John Edgar is partial to the children of the soil. Those that know him know very well that his chief merit consists in his fair play and love of truth. He has not one scale of justice for the European and another for the Indian; he decides every question upon its own merits. careless of what may follow as the consequences of his action. At the same time, he is supremely courteous to all, and if his decisions ever carry a sting, there is honey in his language, which ren.ders them agreeable. Of course, Sir John has many enemies in his own service, and that is a lot which befalls every clever man who is promoted over the heads of rivals, and who succeeds in winning the confidence of his chiefs; if these hate him or traduce him in the columns of newspapers, it augurs a condition of things for which he is not to blame. By us Sir John must be judged by his public acts, and not by that under-current of jealousy which treacherously finds its vent in anonymous journalism. During the short period that he has been prominently before the public he has been Commissioner over five Divisions, and in that capacity he has earned a good name everywhere. His services in connection with the Lushai expedition were so brilliant as to entitle him to a C.S.I. Then, again, as Magistrate of Shahabad, he carried out that extensive Sone irrigation scheme, for his splendid services in connection with which he earned the special thanks of the Secretary of State. We shall mention aiso his services on the Excise Commission, of which he was the President. No one who has read the exceedingly able and well-written report of that Commission can fail to be struck with the grasp, sympathy, and culture which characterises its composition. The production will always remain the only standard of reference on the Excise question; and, whatever the policy of Government, it is sure to be moulded and guided by the principles which it enunciates. Sir John Edgar possesses literary power of no mean order, and to these he adds a penetration and philosophic depth which are rare in these days of superficial red-tapeism. He has, besides, a strong sympathy for the oppressed, which renders him eminently fitted for the position of a ruler. All these qualities he showed in the composition of that admirable report to which we have alluded. We may draw the attention of the Englishman to its series of highly laudatory articles on the report of the Bengal Excise Commission, and ask whether we have anywise exaggerated the merits of the President. Sir John Edgar is known everywhere as a strong man, with strong common sense and strong opinions on all subjects; and he combines with these tact, courtesy, and gentlemanliness of a high order. We shall be very sorry to lose the services of a statesman of Sir John's capacity. His sagacity and experience must be valuable to every ruler who will have him for his chief counsellor.

This will, perhaps, be taken as excessive laudation of one who has more than once been severely criticised in these columns. But we have endeavoured to give the general impression that Sir John Edgar's career, as a whole, would produce in the mind of anyone who has candidly followed it. As the Bishop of Rangoon said of the Chief Commissionership of Sir Charles Crosthwaite, there were gradients and declivities and cross rails in the work of Sir John Edgar as Sir Steuart Bayley's Chief Secretary; but, on the whole, the road looked remarkably straight. There was one incident, more than all, which, to our mind, damaged the reputation which Sir John Edgar has been enjoying among the people for fairness and impartiality. His partiality for Dr. Hilson, whom he supported with all his power against all reason, and by which he ruined the prospects of three brilliant Bengalee Assistant Surgeons, will always be pointed out as the chief blot on Sir Edgar's Chief Secretaryship. Barring this incident, Sir John Edgar tried to be all that a Chief Secretary should be, and, considering the state of his health, his success was remarkable. He can, therefore, well afford to pass by the abuse of the Englishman as idle wind. The Statesman has divulged the secret of the Englishman's anger. Sir John Edgar refused blankly to give the Hare-street journal the monopoly of official news, and hence its ire. And it is thus that writers in the Anglo-Indian Press indulge their petty spite, and call it journalistic criticism of public men and measures!

THE SALT ACT.

(Englishman.)

How is it that an Act such as the Salt Act cannot be framed without its application being liable, not only to cause gross injustice, but to make the law ridiculous? It is well known what ingenuity has to be exercised in districts where salt earth is to be found to prevent the ryot from defrauding the revenue by eating earth instead of making his purchases of salt from the bunnia. Two cases have, however, occurred in Bombay which are a greater triumph in legal ingenuity than often falls to the lot of either the police or the law courts. In each case a poor Native woman was found evaporating water from a very small quantity of salt, the excuse in one instance being that a child had poured water on the salt, and in the other that the salt had got mixed with direct. The section under which these two law-breakers were "run in," to use police phraseology, reads as follows:—"Whoever in contravention of this Act, or of any rule or order made under this Act, or of any license or permit obtained under this Act, manufactures, removes, or transports salt," &c. It will be obvious that in evaporating water containing salt the women were "manufacturing salt;" so the High Court decided. The lower Court had, however, inflicted a penalty, in one case, of Rs. 10 fine, or in default eight days' rigorous imprisonment, and, in the other, of Rs. 15 fine, or ten days' imprisonment. These sentences were reduced by the High Court to fines of one anna and eight annas. An ingenious suggestion had been made, that the law in declaring that the term "manufacture" included certain processes did not mean that these processes necessarily amounted to manufacture; the learned Judges, however, would allow of no quibbling. It is a matter for congratulation that in this case hardly any injustice was done, but a law is decidedly dangerous to a community which allows of a fine of Rs. 500, with six months' imprisonment, for an act such as these women committed. The legislature is extremely jealous of allowing protection to private rights which may be used with undue harshness, and a little of this clemency might well be extended to the enforcement of Government demands, instead of leaving the prevention of injustice to accident, or the discretion of a conscientious Judge. To pry into economical domestic arrangements for the purification of damaged salt is an excessive exercise of authority.

INDIAN RAILWAY CONTROL.

(Pioneer.)

By the way, at the recent half-yearly meeting in London of the shareholders of the Rohilkhand and Kumaon Company, General Trevor, the Chairman, delivered himself characteristically. "I have not the slightest doubt," he said in reply to a shareholder, "that the Secretary of State has not the least desire to injure us. The expression Secretary of State is rather a wide one. We know it is Lord Cross, but everybody is Secretary of State in India—everybody uses the name; and the powers are exercised by a multitude of persons, of whom the Government of India is the nominal head. Their views change. They are not very keen about encouraging private enterprise, and they rather wish to extend State railways and convert all railways to the broad gauge. In the midst of all these conflicting opinions we come off rather badly. I am heartily sick of speaking of gauges. I am always mixed up in it. In India I was an advocate of broad gauge; now I am called an advocate for the metre. As a matter of fact, I am equally interested in the maintenance of both gauges." Everybody outside the Government of India, or its Public Works Secretariat perhaps, recognises the truth of what General Trevor says. Both gauges have their uses, especially when the nucleus of a large system on either gauge invites its extension in suitable areas. At this very moment the British Government is constructing narrow gauge lines in Ireland for the development of agricultural districts, whilst the Government here is obstructing the creation of lines in similar districts, in the teeth of the urgent remonstrances of the local rulers. We must very nearly have reached a point at which railway questions will be taken bodily out of the hands of the authorities in India and left to be dealt with by the Secretary of State.

FRONTIER EXPEDITIONS.

A DIFFICULT PROBLEM.

(Englishman.)

Situated as India is, with a large portion of its frontier bounded by almost inaccessible countries, inhabited by wild and lawless tribes, the difficulty of preventing raids into British territory is not only a serious one, but one which we are almost inclined at times to regard as a permanent condition of our lot in the East. Of late years, it is true, a great improvement has taken place, and is still going on, both in the consolidation of the frontier, and in the clearly defined relations established with the ruling chiefs, great and small. The extension of frontier trade is also perhaps having a slow civilising effect on our neighbours, and leading them to prefer the arts of peace to those of war. Nevertheless the wild spirit is still abroad upon a wide extent of the frontier, and in spite of treaties and fortified outposts, is certain to break bounds from time to time for many years to come, necessitating those aggravating "little frontier expeditions," which consume large sums of money without yielding any adequate return—exploits, moreover, which are apt to draw upon the Government of India the censure of those who understand nothing of the subject. Such expeditions are inevitable, for there is a limit beyond which tact and conciliation cannot go in securing peace; and then, if summary punishment were not administered, the spirit of rebellion would soon spread far and wide and extend within our own borders. Happily, a great deal has been learned as to the best means of arranging for the peace of the frontier, and the arrangements at the present time are a wonderful contrast to what they were fifteen or twenty years ago. Whatever control can be exercised either by the payment of subsidies or by the prospect of punishment, our sway has been well-nigh secured, and the only room for improvement now seems to lie in better defensive arrangements along those portions of the frontier both in Burma and India where fresh additions have recently been made to the Imperial dominions.

Not long ago a German tourist in India was heard to remark that he supposed the object of the Sikkim Expedition was to annex Tibet. He declared that he knew the English, and that the object of their expeditions was always annexation. When it was explained to him that further extension in the direction of Tibet was practically impossible, but that the settlement of frontier questions was always a work of difficulty, the extent and difficulty of the subject seemed to to dawn upon him, and he expressed admiration for all he had seen of British rule in India. Referring to German operations in Africa, he said that although on the map large tracts of country were marked as German, yet if any German went a mile into them without two hundred armed men at his back he was certain to lose his life. In India the security of life and property everywhere had greatly impressed him. Many persons besides this foreigner give the Government little credit for the many frontier difficulties which are at all times claiming its attention. The Chin-Lushai expedition last year, while it greatly improved our position for controlling the Lushai tribes, created new disturbing elements of a temporary kind by bringing our outposts into contact with new tribes to whom peaceful relations with their neighbours were of the nature of a novelty. Where the country at any part of the frontier is inhabited by a succession of petty tribes it is often difficult to decide at what point outposts can most effectually be placed. To avenge an act of hostility by advancing outposts into a Chief's territory merely brings us into closer contact with another hostile Chief further afield. The Chin-Lushai expedition, however, distinctly improved the former position, as the opening up of the country on two sides made the position of the Chiefs much more precarious than it had been before. That some of the Chiefs should have required a further lesson is not a matter of surprise, but the complete success which has attended the recent insignificant operations is ample proof that that part of the frontier is now well in hand. All the offending Chiefs are now prisoners, including Lienpunga and Kalkham, the two men who had given more trouble than all the rest.

Another expedition which has been brought to a very successful close is that in the Zhob country. Here, as elsewhere on the northern frontier, the country is too poor to be worth acquiring, even if annexation were the policy of the State. Neither was there any necessity for advancing British outposts, although one or two new posts had been established. The country, however, is comparatively accessible, and what the expedition has done has been to establish British influence among some of the tribes in the interior beyond the frontier.

Digitized by Google

These tribes are not warlike, and are induced to become peaceful neighbours. Sir Robert Sandeman, who has proved himself a master of the art of coercive conciliation, has now extended British influence over a wide extent of territory, and the benefits of what has been done are likely to be far-reaching. Turning to the north-western frontier and the tribes of the Black Mountain, we come to one of the most troublesome frontier questions with which the Government has to deal. Time after time during the past forty years have punitive expeditions been sent into these inaccessible mountains, but to this day the tribes remain as untameable as their country is barren and inhospitable. The serious nature of these expeditions is such that they cannot be lightly undertaken. Each cattle-lifting raid and every murder of a British subject is carefully noted down, and when the measure of crime is full an expedition is sent which exacts a penalty in full in fines of money and cattle, and if these are not forthcoming burns crops and villages for satisfaction. It is only two years since the last big expedition, which certainly accomplished its task most completely, and managed to survey a wide extent of almost unknown country. Yet the spirit of the people is not tamed. Not only have raids into British territory been committed since, but the recent march of British troops along the frontier was made the occasion of a hostile demonstration which cannot be overlooked. The Maliks of several villages, moreover, refused to come in when summoned to do so. It has therefore been settled that a punitive expedition will be undertaken this cold season, and we trust that the result will have some degree of finality. The acquisition of Upper Burma has undoubtedly opened the way to fresh frontier difficulties, some of which may yet prove to be of a serious nature, but the Shan chiefs appear to have considerable control over their followers, and are comparatively easy to treat with. Considering the disturbed state of the province, it is certainly a matter for surprise that the chiefs have behaved so well, and it is possible that satisfactory relations may be established without any further military operations being necessary.

PURDAH PARTIES.

(Pioneer).

Perhaps some of your readers may be interested in hearing about these. There is in India a large association with many ramifications which extend over the whole country. This is called the "National Indian Association." Its object is briefly "Social Reform." (Reform must always be written in large capitals.) The Bombay branch of this association has lately put forth a tender shoot: very delicate and verdant is this young bud. To say it must not be breathed upon would be language both inadequate and coarse. The essence of it, its very life and soul, consists in the fact that it must not even be looked at. At any rate it must never be looked at by the masculine eye. This sweet, shy twig is named "The Ladies Branch." It exists solely to nourish and support those mysterious retiring blossoms called "purdah ladies." It is very, very select. When we first met (and we were but three) we decided, in solemn whispers, that only real ladies were to be admitted. How we were to know who really was real we left to be decided later. Is there such a thing as a female expert in these matters? If there is, send her to me at once. Daily I plunge deeper into a sea of uncertainty. Some candidates appear to me very genuine, and then I am told, "Oh, no! She would never do, because you see, &c., &c." But this was not what I meant to tell; let me sink my personal grievances and come to "Our Work."

Let no one scoff at "Our Work," for we have undertaken no less a task than the regeneration and social salvation of Hindu and Mahomedan womanhood. I do not speak of Parsees, for they require no reformation. Indeed, they are more than equal to the task of reforming us. A short time ago I had the honour of an invitation to a meeting of Parsee young ladies. I went, of course. And how did this social gathering employ itself? In discussing women's rights and wrongs? Certainly not; they had got far beyond trifles of that kind. They were employed in explaining to each other and to the awe-struck visitors "Parliamentary Procedure" in all its branches. The duties of every officer from the Speaker downwards were defined to a hair. The right method of conducting a debate was fixed irrevocably. I don't believe there's an M.P. in England who knows the ins and outs of the Houses as these Parsee maidens know them. It was a thousand pities none were present to take advantage of such a lesson. For myself, I went there with a firm conviction that I knew something of the duties of a secretary, having acted in that capacity once or twice. Alas! how rudely was I undeceived! Out of the mouths of these young persons came a list of duties such as I had never dreamt of, and certainly never fulfilled. Overcome with shame, I rushed from the place and drove quickly home with a firm resolve to alter everything, to burn my books and papers and start afresh.

Again I must apologise. I do not know how it is I wander so much from "Our Work." I was saying that with a light heart we have undertaken to reform Hindu and Mahomedan women. I should say ladies, for this is the very essence of our existence. It will be asked, how we propose to set about it. The apparatus, I can assure you, can be worked by a child. We give them tea-parties. That is all, with an occasional magic lantern thrown in. This may seem to English readers to be too simple, and even to savour of childishness, but it has been revealed to the female Anglo-Indian mind that this is the only suitable method of dealing with Native ladies.

"The ladies' branch" is strictly conservative. We are not the people who go brandishing new ideas about, making everyone uncomfortable. Accordingly we stick to the good old plan of tea-parties. It is through the spout of the teapot that we intend to pour sweetness and light into these dark homes. Cakes and sweetmeats are to be the "Open Sesame" that is at last to draw aside the purdah. And here let me state my firm conviction that the more slowly the curtain goes up the better both for those within and those without. If the veil is too suddenly lifted, the glaring light of the Western nineteenth century will surely blind the feeble eyes used only to semi-darkness. They will seize our vices and add them to their own long before they will even discover our virtues. And we who live outside the purdah are not anxious to look within too hastily. Of late years we have drawn close to it, and it is wearing very thin. We hear many sounds issuing thence, and from these we gather what is going on inside. We hear the gabble of the storyteller repeating tales which for obscenity could not be matched by French or Russian novelists, and for puerility stand far below "Jack the Giant Killer" or "Puss in Boots."

But sounds far worse than these are to be heard from behind the immovable purdah—the screams of the little wife seven or eight years' old, taken from her own home and parents and delivered over to a mother-in-law, who revenges on her helpless victim the miseries she herself endured during her own childhood. Then may be distinguished the sobs and shrieks of the child-widow, as every imaginable insult and indignity is heaped on her young head. Despair is indeed her meat and drink. She perhaps is quite unaware that she is married, and she discovers in a moment that she was a wife and is a widow, with a life of shame and degradation before her. Lastly, if we listen attentively may be heard faint moans and cries for help. But we must be attentive, for seldom are these cries allowed to penetrate the thick screen of the purdad, and quickly are they silenced by the great silencer of all tears and laughter. These proceed from the lowest slave of the purdah, from the ten-year-old wife, to whom the bridal night brings nothing but pain, misery and death.

But where have we been led to? I mean to describe an innocent and peaceful tea-party. Well, the house is cleared of obnoxious male servants. Ayahs and English maids are borrowed in all directions, oceans of tea and coffee and cartloads of cakes and sweets are prepared. The carriages with blinds drawn down begin to arrive. The hostess flies about from one to another. "Oh! Mrs. Brown, do come and talk to some of these ladies. I know you speak the language so well." "Yes, gladly; but I only speak Marathi." "Oh! dear! and they talk Guzerati, I believe. Is there anyone hear who can talk to those three in the corner, they look so dreadfully forlorn and frightened?"

Away runs our hostess intent on making her guests as happy as these untoward circumstances permit, and I, mustering what few words I can command, advance to the "three in the corner," clothe my countenance with a winning smile, and stammeringly ask if they will come and have some tea in the next room; they smile and bow and look as if they understood. So, begging them to follow, I lead the way. Arriving at the tea-table I look round for my friends, but find myself alone. I repress a rather strong exclamation, resume the smile (now rather the worse for wear), and return to look for them. There they are still huddled together in the corner. This time, I am not to be outwitted. I advance resolutely and politely, but firmly. I seize two of them by the hand, the third, with a gesture that needs no translation, I drive on in front of me. In this ridiculous manner we arrive at the tea-room, and there they overcome their fears sufficiently to drink a little tea, or possibly I then discover that these are high caste Hindus to whom to offer a cup that has been touched by our impure flesh-eating lips would be a deadly insult, besides involving a serious outlay to recover caste.

Well, in spite of these complicated and endless difficulties, they seem to enjoy themselves. They look at each other's dresses and jewellery, and we look at theirs and envy them. The Parsee ladies are especially wonderful, for they have grafted part of our dress on to their own. They seem to have selected three things to begin with; to wit, stays, high-heeled shoes, and fringes. Over the stays they, of course, wear English bodices. A white satin body, trimmed with very full blue or pink ruches, or perhaps blue and pink, looks sufficiently odd in the daytime. Add an aggressive fringe, a sari, a very full, short skirt of yellow or green, pink silk stockings and high-heeled shoes, and you have the modern Parsee lady. Finally, the tea is drunk, the cakes are eaten, the music listened to, and the guests with many compliments and much ceremony take their departure, and we who are privileged look at each other with thankfulness, and congratulate ourselves that it all went off so well.

We repeat this process every month, and I sincerely hope the "progress and social reform" for which we are working will begin soon.

BENGAL.

(Dec. 31.)

IT is understood that the Government of India have now communicated to the Secretary of State their intention to construct the line from Mogul Serai to Palamow, in order that the Daltongunge coalfields may be utilised, the product of which is reported to be equal to the best coal to be found in any part of India. The Government is about the only projector that can afford to make a purely mineral line such as this will be; but nevertheless it will prove a very beneficial one.

"CUSHLA," in the course of some interesting notes which he contributes to the Indian Daily News, writes:—"I have already expressed it as my conviction that Lord Lansdowne will carry out the right policy for the physical development of the country. And I now hear it stated that his Excellency is going himself to see what can be done in regard to giving due facilities to mining enterprise. So I was right. His Excellency, however, will find that the rules and principles, as they exist, are liberal enough; but that it is the contracted application of them that causes all the difficulty."

THE fire which broke out on Christmas Eve in the forehold of the Golconda while she was anchored at Diamond Harbour has been got under, and it is now ascertained that very little damage has been done. The origin of the fire is unknown, but it broke out among some bales of jute. The occurrence was at once telegraphed to Calcutta, and the local police did all they could to aid in extinguishing the fire. On Christmas morning the Port Commissioners' Fire Engine was despatched to the vessel's assistance, and on arrival at once began pumping water into the hold. On Friday Captain Petley, the Port Officer, and the Deputy Conservator of the Port, went down in the Guide, but by the time they arrived the fire was very nearly extinguished.

MADRAS.

(Jan. 1.)

AT the annual meeting of the Madras Chamber of Commerce, on the 24th ult., the Hon. Mr. J. A. Boyson, of Messrs. Binny and Co., retired from the office of chairman (which he had held for two consecutive years), as he is about to proceed to England; and Mr. J. R. Turnbull, of Messrs. Wilson and Co., was elected to succeed him. Mr. Turnbull was first elected to the office in December, 1885, and was re-elected in the following December. In July, 1887, he resigned on proceeding to England; Mr. J. Fortune, of Messrs. Parry and Co., was the same day elected Vice-Chairman; Mr. C. E. P. Vans Agnew, of Messrs. Arbuthnott and Co., Mr. C. Slater, of Messrs. Best and Co., and Mr. W. Gordon, of the Chartered Mercantile Bank, were re-elected as members of the committee; and Mr. J. R. Hunter, of Messrs. Dymes and Co., and Mr. G. W. Deane, of Messrs. Deane and Co., were also elected on the committee.

BOMBAY.

(Jan. 3.)

MR. BAINES, the Census Commissioner for India, will be in Bombay during the time of enumeration, from the 20th to the 27th of February, after which he goes to Simla.

THE appointment of Mr. Justice Birdwood to be Vice-Chancellor of the Bombay University in succession to Dr. Wordsworth, resigned, is notified in the last Bombay Government Gazette.

A LARGE and influential meeting of Europeans and Natives, presided over by Brigadier-General Boyce-Combe, commanding Sind Division, Bombay Army, was held in Denso Hall, Kurrachee, on the 8th inst., at 4 P.M., to devise ways and means to perpetuate the memory of the late Mr. Alexander McHinch, whose work as chairman of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Municipal Corporation of that city had been held in such high esteem. A committee has been appointed to collect subscriptions, and to decide what form the memorial should take.

A writer of Poona Notes in the Pioneer observes that the intelligent Deccani has quite made up his mind that the Wali-Auad of the Russian Empire has come on a tour of inspection of his future possessions. This being the case, and Poona being of course the one spot in India suitable for the residence of an enlightened monarch, he is convinced that his Imperial Highness has only deferred his inspection of this favoured locality until he had a tour round India and satisfied himself that it is worth annexing. Having set his mind at rest upon this point, he will of course return and see what improvements and extensions are necessary to prepare Ganeshkhind for his residence, select a site for the new summer place at Mahableshwur, and allow his staff to choose their bungalows. The Poona houseowner is a little sad at the prospect of the Russian invasion, an officer who has lately returned from St. Petersburg having informed him that it is not every Imperial Government which will allow its officers to be charged a yearly rent of twenty per cent. of the building cost for the quarters they occupy in a conquered country.

BOMBAY has a bad notoriety for the collapse of its houses. Nor is the cause, asserts the Englishman, to be found in the mere fact that Native houses are built several stories higher than in Calcutta. As many persons can still remember it was in the European quarter of Cumballa Hill that the Hon. Mr. Narayan Wassoodeo lost his life by the falling of his residence. The true cause of these calamities is nothing else than the wretched work of the contractors, as has been frequently shown. Mr. Narayan's death caused a great sensation, and more than one secret of bad building was brought to light in the newspaper correspondence which followed. A civil engineer, who still occupies a prominent position in Bombay, mentioned a case where an important beam in a house was found to have been manufactured out of four long narrow planks, nailed into the form of a hollow beam and filled with clay to make it appear solid. A less sophisticated Government than ours would hold a builder responsible for any house that fell down before its time, and perhaps even for lives lost in the catastrophe. But we insist on the identification of a particular beam or brick, and then require evidence that on a particular day the builder knowingly used it in the house he was building. We have a morbid fear lest somebody may have changed the beam after the house was occupied.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

ON the 26th ult., in Durbar, the Maharajah of Nabha received a deputation of the Khalsa College Committee, which had waited upon him at his request. His Highness was pleased to give the magnificent donation of one lakh and eleven thousand rupees to the Khalsa College Fund, with the promise of an additional gift if further appeal to him should be necessary. The deputation had also been hospitably entertained at Patiala, where additional subscriptions were received, the amount now subscribed by his Highness the Maharajah and State officials reaching the handsome figure of two lakhs eighty thousand rupees.

A Punjab Gazette Notification of December 18 shows that the Simla Municipal Committee shall in future consist of ten members, of whom six shall be elected and four nominated, although those elected members now serving on the committee shall continue members for the full period, in the usual way. The reduction of the number of members from thirteen to ten has been made in deference to the wishes of the Government of India; and if any hitch should arise in transacting municipal business, owing to the difficulty of obtaining a quorum, the Punjab Government will not be to blame. The Civil Surgeon and the Executive Engineer of Simla will be, ex officio, two of the nominated members of the Committee. The District Superintendent of Police was to have been similarly a member, but in deference to the views of the Government of India, the Punjab Government now contents itself with merely suggesting that he should attend the Committee meetings to gather and give information, and not as a member. A third nominated member will be the nominee of the Government of India; and the fourth will be a President invested with magisterial powers, when the office of President becomes vacant. His salary as President will be paid by a grant from the Punjab Government, who will make another grant of Rs. 6,000 per annum towards the Municipal Police.

THE murder of Sawal Singh, the favourite of the Maharajah of Cashmere, at Jammu, removes one of those characters that spring up only in the unhealthy atmosphere of Eastern courts. The less said of him the better: since there is, to our knowledge, writes the Lahore paper, nothing good to say. Of the circumstances of the murder, the accounts which have reached us merely state that the corpse was discovered with the head completely severed from the trunk. Private enmity, zenana intrigue, and political ambition are variously ascribed as the motive of the crime.

NATIVE PRESS.

LORD CONNEMARA.

Says the Kaiser-i-Hind :—Whatever the failings of Lord Connemara may be in the social direction, there is no difference of opinion on his abilities as a talented and indefatigable administrator. His four years' rule is universally characterised by a single-mindedness of purpose, namely, to seek the greatest good of the greatest number, and a genuinely kind sympathy, which put us in mind of all the traits which distinguished his eldest brother, the late Lord Mayo, the third Viceroy since the direct assumption of the sovereignty of India by the Crown. Madras feels extremely grateful to his Lordship for all the good he has rendered to the provinces, and is anxious that he should not depart without some marked recognition of his administrative abilities. The memorial which is to be raised in his honour is deserving, and it is to be hoped that the memory of so good and capable a Governor will long be cherished, not only by the people of the provinces over whom he ruled, but by people in all parts of India. The country needs many Connemaras if it is to rise in the scale of nations.

THE CONGRESS PRESIDENT.

The Indu Prakash remarks :—After all the shifting and changing of the past few days, the Reception Committee of the Congress has at last made its choice definitely, and that choice, we are glad to say, could not have been more worthily made. Mr. Pherozsha's name had often occurred to the Bombay committee as an eminently eligible one for the Presidentship of the Congress, but that committee felt a certain sense of delicacy in pressing forward a Bombay name. Now that the choice has been made by the Calcutt a Committee we have no hesitation to say that it is most apt and deserving. The offer was made to Mr. Gantz of Madras, but for certain reasons declined to accept it. Mr. Pherozsha got his offer on Saturday last, and he has signified his acceptance. The choice of a president is always a difficult question. It is gratifying, however, that the Congress is at last assured of a head who is qualified by intellect as well as experience to control is fully its debates with conspicuous success.

COTTON ADULTERATION.

The Rast Goftar says :—It seems that the Liverpool buyers have good grounds for complaint. Cotton adulteration is going on to an increasing extent from year to year, and the nature of the adulteration is getting gradually more scientific, and, therefore, much worse. The commencement was made with mere false packing of bales ; then were introduced machines called "openers," by which inferior cotton might be more thoroughly mixed up together ; and now sellers have come to mix inferior cotton seed before ginning. Buyers must be protected from fraud where they cannot well protect themselves, and Government have now a precedent afforded by the Merchandise Marks Act, which has legalised the principle of protecting the interests of buyers. In facing the growing evil of cotton adulteration, we must not be guided by any theory as to liberty of trade and the necessity of letting it go on free and unhampered. Some law must be made by which the adulteration may be stopped and the persons infringing its provisions may be punished. There is no reason why the mixing of cotton or cotton seeds should not be made liable to an adequate penalty. Wilful packing should be considered a penal offence, and provisions may be made to trace the adulteration of cotton to the offender by issuing, as the Chamber recommends licenses to the presses, ordering the affixing of press-marks upon the bales, and restricting the free importation of unginned cotton into any cotton-growing district.

THE HON. MR. JUSTICE BIRDWOOD.

The Gujerat Mitra discourses :—The honour of conferring the degree of LL.D. on our retiring Professor Wordsworth is universally approved and hailed with joy. It will be quite opportune, and simply doing a public duty, when we say that, for their very valuable services, Dr. Vandyke Carter, late Principal of the Grant Medical College, and the Hon. Mr. Justice Birdwood, of the Bombay Bench, are in no way less entitled in turn to the due recognition of their services by the Senate. As the Hon. Mr. Justice Birdwood will shortly be called to join the Legislative Council we are sure that he will be remaining with us still for some years to come, and hence we need not be in a hurry to put forth his claims for a similar distinction ; but it is very much to be regretted that the eminent services of Dr Carter, who has retired so long from the Indian Medical Service, remain unrecognised up to now. While writing on this subject we take this opportunity of proposing the name of the Hon. Justice Birdwood as a worthy successor of Professor Wordsworth as Vice-Chancellor of the Bombay University. It is but meet to say that he has been working on the Senate for so many years with perfect zeal and good sense, always keeping the interests of the student world at heart. As for his being an eminent scholar we need hardly refer, in addition to his learned decisions delivered from the Bench, to the rare distinction of L.M. that he has been fortunate enough to win from the English University. We hope, therefore, that this suggestion of ours will be taken up in due course to nominate the Hon. Justice Birdwood as a worthy successor of Professor Wordsworth as Vice-Chancellor.

THE DEMAND FOR UNIVERSITY REFORM.

The Maharatta says :—Reduced to their bare elements, the arguments of the opposing senators, not a few of whom, by-the-bye, happened to be syndics, came to nothing more than unfounded apprehensions for the safety of the dignity and the prestige of the Syndicate. Some of them, indeed, went the length of asserting or of implying that the acceptance of the motion by the Senate would be tantamount to passing a vote of want of confidence in the executive body. Of late there is so much reliance placed in Bombay, in the Municipal Hall, and elsewhere, upon this argument, and it has so many times prevailed with the over-tender Bombay corporators, oversensitive for the full maintenance of the dignity of the executive, that is was no wonder the same tactics were resorted to on the present occasion, happily, however, without success. Nor were their threats, veiled as they were, altogether wanting. One of the opposing gentlemen found himself called upon to declare then and there that if the proposition were carried, he would have to ask to be excused from continuing on the committee. This could well have been achieved at a later time, and certainly in a better manner. But there appeared to be a determination on the part of the opposition to leave nothing unsaid that could possibly lend support, however small, to turn the scale in their favour. We have more than once likened the University to Hindu orthodoxy in its obstinate regard for things as they have been, and the present is but one more instance of that conservative spirit which sometimes threatens to border on the irrational. All is well, however, that ends well, and we have strong reasons to believe —at least, to hope—that the present movement will end well for all parties concerned—the students, the senators, the syndics, and the scrutators alike.

THE BARRACK-GATE OF INDIA.

MILITARY BIRDS OF PASSAGE.

Deolali Depôt is not looked upon by the British soldier in India as a paradise. In fact, I have heard many describe it in forcible language as that place which is exactly the reverse of a paradise. It is a place of bustle and bustle and general aggravation to most people, who have but little time to look round or observe their surroundings, ere they are sent packing down country or to catch their "trooper" as the case may be. One has to be posted to Deolali for a few weeks' duty, to become, so to speak, an inhabitant, in comparison with the birds of passage who spend a few days, or at the outside a week, to note the great deal that there is to be noted there. To the civilian reader it may, perhaps, be necessary to explain that Deolali is the "Barrack-Gate of India." To Deolali come nearly all soldiers arriving in India, and through Deolali pass nearly all soldiers leaving this country. Deolali itself, as you will find by consulting a railway map, is a small railway station on the G.I.P. line, some 100 miles from Bombay, and near the top of the Ghats. It is a station which the passenger travelling Bombay or Calcutta-wards generally passes in the middle of the night, and only halts at for a few minutes, and consequently sees and knows little of. It is nevertheless a vast camp of brick and canvas, and the great military depôt of India.

As I have said, Deolali is altogether too bustling and go-ahead a place for the sojourner of a day or so to have much time to look round ; to him it is a wilderness of huts and tents, and a confused crowd of infantry and cavalry and artillery coming and going all day long, of baggage ; parties struggling among mountains of baggage, of piles of sea-kit bags ; of multitudious orders, and much of fatigue and weariness of spirit. Such is Deolali to the homeward bound officer, with his detachment of time-expired and invalid soldiers ; or the man bound down country, with his draft of recruits fresh from the trooper ; and, as a rule, he shakes off the dust of Deolali from his feet, and he thanks his stars that he is out of it. It is necessary to get settled down there, and to be able to look round with the calm eye of a spectator on the wear-and-tear and bustle around you. There is a certain amount of gratification (arising from the inborn selfishness of humanity) in watching new comers rushing hither and thither in a vain search for people or places which are never to be found, while you sit in a long chair smoking the pipe of peace. But apart from such selfish feelings as these, the crowd which comes surging from October to April, in and out of the "Barrack-Gate of India," is one likely to give the most thoughtless a subject for reflection. Stand at the cross roads in the centre of the camp, and you will see marching towards you, with quiet, brisk tread, a party of soldiers, a couple of hundred perhaps.

Youngsters most of them, fresh and ruddy, their faces showing but short acquaintance with the Indian sun, and with the healthy look a month of sea air has imparted to them. Laughing and joking they swing along, cavalry, artillery, infantry, still dressed in the loose sea-kit blue serge clothing of the trooper. They are the drafts which the last "trooper" has brought into Bombay, and they are being marched to the Quarter Master Stores to fit them out for their journey up-country to their regiments. India is a new land to them, and everything is novel and amusing. They stare at the Natives as natural curiosities, and the wag of the company cuts a joke on their appearance which sends his comrades into roars of laughter. The bheestie and his bullocks are viewed with deep interest, and a harmless lizard is pointed out as a reptile of deadly venom. It is quite refreshing to see their interest and delight in the novelty of a new country. They are passing through the barrack-gate of India for the first time, full of life and health, and anticipation of the good things which await them beyond it. Day after day, as the heavily laden "troopers" come steaming into Bombay harbour, and send their passengers across the Ghats to Deolali, you may see hundreds of fresh young English faces in the big camp going north and south, east and west, to fill the gaps in the Army of the East. How many there are of those youngsters who will never pass out of the barrack-gate again!

A very different looking band are those thin, pale, and decrepit soldiers who are moving slowly along the same road that the draft have just passed over so briskly. There is very little of life or briskness about these men, though they are trained soldiers, some of many years' service, but the Indian climate has worked its will on them, and its handiwork is written plainly on face and figure. They are invalids homeward bound. They have served their time in India, and after a hard fight have barely escaped an Indian grave. Many are but going home to die, some die at sea, others even in Deolali. The journey down country, with its heat and discomfort, seals the death-warrant of not a few broken-down soldiers, and they reach the barrack-gate only to find a grave behind it. Funerals are of frequent occurrence in Deolali, and not unfrequently the first military duty a young soldier is called on to perform in this country is to follow his worn-out comrade to the little cemetery which lies in a lonely hollow a mile away from camp. They form a painful contrast, that batch of invalids, to the drafts fresh from home and full of health and vigour. Here is another party, a fine-looking lot of men, for the most part in the prime of life, well set up and seasoned soldiers; a few of these men can count their twenty-one years' service, but the majority are twelve and six years' men. They are all time-expired. The regular Army has done with them, although the Reserve can count the six years' men as its own for another six years.

The bulk of these soldiers are just the men you would pick out to garrison India; in the prime of life, used to the climate, and well trained, they are, indeed, the pick of the British troops in India. Just when they are at their best our Army is letting them go, and filling their places with that draft of boys which we have just seen go by. It seems a cruel pity to lose all those fine soldiers from our small Army in the East, but it is the inevitable result of the short-service system. A man enlists say, at twenty-one, and at twenty-seven he goes. He has been trained at considerable expense; he has become a smart and efficient soldier; he has reached his highest state of fitness as a fighting man, and then back he goes to civilian life, his military training of no use either to himself or his country, save in the event of the Reserves being called our for service, and even then it is not always certain that he will be found when wanted. Many of these men, however, the Army gets back in another way. Unable to obtain civil employment they re-enlist, and when they are found out at this game they are well punished for coming back. Raw material is what the recruiters want, and so long as that is forthcoming it matters not what becomes of the trained soldiers who are worked up out of it.

There is one remarkable point in the management and system which regulate the accommodation, equipment, and despatch of the thousands of troops passing through the depôt annually, and that is the marvellous rapidity and precision with which the arrangements are carried out. The number of men in camp generally varies between fifteen hundred and three thousand. These men belong to every corps and every branch of the service. Some are going up country, some down, some are time-expired, some invalids, others drafts. These men have to be fed, housed, paid, equipped (with bags, saletas, &c.); discharge documents have to be made out for every man proceeding home to be discharged; numberless indents, returns, requisitions have to be tendered, and every man has to be accurately shown in the returns of the corps to which he belongs; and often all this has to be done for a couple of thousand men in a couple of days. And it is done like clockwork, without confusion or error. Every morning by the ration stand you may see heaped up mountains of meat and pyramids of loaves with bushels of potatoes and other vegetables, rice, tea, and sugar, &c. It is the day's food of perhaps two thousand men, and every detachment among that number knows to an ounce how much bread, meat, tea, sugar, &c., it is entitled to. Up come party after party of orderly men with huge baskets. In the twinkling of an eye that huge mass of provender has melted away, and the ration stand is as bare as Mother Hubbard's cupboard. Everyone is fed, and there is not a ration too little or too much, and that with a camp constantly changing its numbers. That is calculation with a vengeance!

The saddest place, I think, in all Deolali is the hospital. Here you may see the wreck of many a strong English lad struggling hard for life and strength enough to carry him to the sea and the "trooper." They have got thus far on the journey towards England, and the Indian climate is making its last savage grip on its victim almost within sight of home, as it were. Poor chaps! Many of them have pined for months in some up-country hospital through the heat of a summer in the plains, and the thought of home has kept them up. The "trooper" has been the goal towards which all their hopes have been directed. It is hard to break down within a night's run of the sea, and you can read in many a pale face the "hope deferred which maketh the heart sick." It is a pleasant thing to know, however, that the cool bracing breezes which sweep down from the Ghats across the hospital hill have restored many a poor fellow to convalescence, and sent him home to gain health and strength in old England. For Deolali is healthy, and the Ghats are close at hand, and in an hour's run by rail you may be shivering in a greatcoat. And such is the "Barrack-gate of India." SABRE-TACHE.

OBITUARY.

MAJOR-GENERAL JOHN CHARLES HORNE, Bengal Staff Corps, late Judge-Advocate General, Bengal, who died on the 9th inst. at 44, St. James's-square, Bath, in his sixty-second year, entered the Service in 1848, and served with the Ensafzie Expedition on the North-West Frontier of India of 1858, receiving the medal.

LIEUT. BERTRAM ALFRED JAMES, of the Royal Engineers was killed in action at Thetta, Chin Hills, Burma, on the 2nd inst., at the age of twenty-four.

THE REV. WILLIAM MARSHALL SARJENT BABINGTON, B.A., late Chaplain, Madras Presidency, eldest son of the late Lieut.-General David Babington, H.M. Madras Army, died on the 30th ult. at Abbotsbury, Dorset, aged fifty.

LIEUT. F. G. DE SALVO.—Many old friends in the Dorsetshire Regiment will hear with regret of the death of this young and promising officer as having taken place at Quetta on December 16. Frederick George de Salvo, who was only in his twenty-sixth year, was promoted from sergeant in the Dorsetshire Regiment in February, 1888, after four years' experience in the ranks, and joined the 1st Battalion Dublin Fusiliers as second lieutenant. He passed into the Staff Corps in the following year, and at his death was serving as wing officer of the 13th Bombay Native Infantry.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. E. J. SINKINSON.—The sudden death is announced of Mr. E. J. Sinkinson, Financial Secretary to the Government of India. He had gone up from Calcutta for the Christmas holidays to Darjeeling, where he was suddenly seized with internal inflammation, and died on Jan. 1, as it seemed before anyone in Calcutta knew of his being ill.

MR. WHITESIDE, the father of the Madras Civil Service, after thirty-five years' service, retired on Dec. 29. The Madras Mail refers in most appreciative terms of Mr. Whiteside. He has been a generous patron of arts and sciences in India. As a practical horticulturist he has done no small public service. He has been a liberal and active supporter of a great variety of schemes. His benevolence was conspicuously kind and courteous in things great and small. Mr. Whiteside during the whole of his service has only had four months' furlough, yet he has enjoyed phenomenal good health and high spirits, and retires in full enjoyment of the same.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

MAJOR RIDGEWAY, V.C., lately officiating as Assistant Quartermaster-General at Army Headquarters, took command of the 44th Gurkhas Light Infantry at Shillong on Jan 1.

THE Civil and Military Gazette in concluding an article on "The Fault of British Musketry" says:—All who wish for the introduction of practical musketry will agree with us that something should be done to deprive individual firing of the spurious importance which it has acquired at the expense of performances of far greater utility. While, however, the military authorities out here are powerless to alter the present system, nothing can be done unless the figure of merit is to be abolished altogether, which is a question beyond our present scope. For the present we can only hope that the unanimous opinions of all in this country, who deserve to be heard on this subject, will be allowed to prevail before another year of musketry instruction in India commences. The shooting of the British army has of late years so much improved, especially in India, that it has a right to expect that no pains will be spared to make the practices of greater professional utility, and that it will not be deliberately left with a musketry course which can only have the result of making British regiments in India inferior in shooting powers to Native regiments.

THE detailed list of officers on the staff of Major-General Viscount Frankfort, commanding the Bengal Presidency Division, is as follows:—Divisional Staff: Major St. J. F. Michel, Assistant Adjutant-General; Captain L. C. Dundas, D.S.O., Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General; Lieutenant-Colonel C. W. Townsend, commanding R.A.; Colonel F. J. Mortimer, Ordnance Officer; Colonel F. H. Thomas, Chief Commissariat Officer; Captain H. E. Irwin, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry; and Deputy Surgeon-General J. C. Morice, Principal Medical Officer. Station Staff: Col. A. J. T. Welchman, Garrison Quarter-Master; Major C. H. Brookes, Garrison Engineer; Captain P. R. R. Mockler, Station Staff Officer; Surgeon-Major J. Stevenson, Garrison Surgeon; and the Rev. C. R. T. Winckley, Garrison Chaplain. Major L. B. Irwin has been Assistant Adjutant-General since April, 1889, and only vacates owing to his five years' term of staff employ being completed. His term was actually completed on the 17th of October, but he was retained until the 1st January, 1891, owing to the district being raised to first-class rank, and the junior Staff Officers being new to the district.

The additional reliefs of the Native Infantry, rendered necessary by the disbanding of the Hindustani levies, will be carried out on the following dates:—The 1st Bengal Infantry and the 24th and 27th Punjab Infantry leave Nowgong, Sialkote, and Bareilly, respectively, on Feb. 2nd; the 36th Sikhs leave Jullundur on March 2nd; the 38th Bengal Infantry embark at Rangoon on Jan. 25th; the 18th and 40th Bengal Infantry leave Jubbulpore and Silchar, respectively, as soon as the General Officers commanding the Nerbudda and Assam districts can make the necessary arrangements; the 35th Sikhs will march from Ferozepore to Nowgong on the conclusion of the Meean Mir Camp of Exercise.

Important military preparations are, a Rangoon correspondent reports, being made in connection with the garrison in the Chin Hills. On the 15th January 100 men, instead of 300, will occupy the Yaw Valley posts; and 150 men will go as escort to the Political Officer, who marches aloug the Baungshe country towards Thetta, the village which has recently given such trouble, and which is responsible for Mr. Wetherall's murder. The 2nd-3rd Goorkhas relieve the 2nd-4th at Fort White, but the latter will be retained there for some time. The Fort White line of communication will be held by 540 men instead of 310, and 180 will also be detached to the Kan Haka line, to enable Mr. Ross and Captain Carnegie to strike a blow at Thetta. It is expected that Thetta will be attacked on the 30th. A force of 200 rifles will leave Fort White for the Kanhaw country on the 20th January. The present strength of the garrison in Chin country, the Kale Valley, and the Yaw Valley is 1,115 men. This will be temporarily increased by 1,100. It was never intended to commence any movements against Thetta or elsewhere before January; but the action of the Thetta people precipitated affairs, and it is unfortunate that the 3rd Goorkhas were delayed by the outbreak of cholera, as their arrival at Haka at the proposed time might have kept the malcontents quiet. At any rate, it would have enabled the column to be sent against Thetta at a moment's notice. The road work to be done in the Chin country will commence with the old road from Haka to Fort White, which will be improved by working parties at both ends. Secondly, a new road from Haka to Shaung, to connect the two places by a shorter and safer liner with a better line of supply than is the Myittha river, vid the Pakokku-Pan road, will be made. Thirdly, it is possible a new road will be constructed westward from Haka towards Bengal; at least there is no doubt the last will be surveyed. A wing of the 4th Pioneers and two companies of Sappers and Miners are available for these works.

ARRIVAL OF THE TROOPSHIP CROCODILE.

H.M.'s Troopship Crocodile, Capt. Oxford Churchill, which left Portsmouth on November 26th with the 1st Battalion King's Royal Rifle Brigade and drafts, arrived in Bombay Harbour on Friday, January 2nd, in tow of H.M.'s Troopship Serapis. From inquiries made on board the Crocodile, which arrived four days late, she having been expected on Monday morning, it would appear that nothing of any special interest occurred on the voyage, till about four P.M. on the morning of December 20th, when she was about 850 miles from Bombay, and then it was discovered that her high pressure crank having got fractured had broken into pieces. This necessitated an immediate stoppage of the engines, but although the incident took place during the night, no alarm was felt on board owing to the sea being calm and most of the people on board being asleep in their bunks. Every precaution to ensure the safety of the vessel was taken by the commander, and the engineers set about repairing the damaged crank so as to enable the ship to proceed. While this was being done, the Serapis, homeward bound with troops from Bombay, was sighted, and being signalled, hove to, and lines having been put out, took the Crocodile in tow on the 21st, and proceeding slowly to Bombay, safely brought her charge to an anchorage in port at about 9 A.M. on Jan. 2. The Serapis after recoaling is expected to leave again on Jan. 3. It may be added that there was a good and sufficient supply of provisions on board the disabled steamer, so that those on board were not put to any inconvenience in this respect, and celebrated Christmas Day in a quiet but enjoyable manner.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. CLIVE.

Her Majesty's troopship Clive, Captain W. Powell, arrived in harbour on Wednesday, Dec. 31, from Portsmouth, which she left on Dec. 3, calling at Malta, Port Said, and Suez, with 26 officers, 6 ladies, 1 child, 639 men, 27 women, and 18 children attached to different regiments. Between Portsmouth and Gibraltar a quantity of rain fell, but after leaving the Mediterranean Sea she experienced fine weather throughout the remainder of the voyage. The following are the names of the saloon passengers:—

Lieut.-Colonel R. W. Kaye, R.A.; Capt. J. W. Dunlop, R.H.A.; Capt. H. K. Jackson, R.H.A.; Capt. R. C. Foster, Field Art.; Lieut. C. J. Perwal, Field Art.; Lieut. C. W. Clark, Field Art.; Lieut. R. V. Vassar-Smith, Field Art.; 2nd Lieut. C. C. Robertson, Field Art.; 2nd Lieut. W. K. N. Maddocks, Field Art.; 2nd Lieut. H. H. Cruickshank, Field Art.; 2nd Lieut. C. E. Palmer, Field Art.; Lieut. L. J. Chapman, Mt. Art.; 2nd Lieut. J. W. Robinson, Mt. Art.; 2nd Lieut. R. G. Patridge, Mt. Art.; Capt. W. D. Burrard, E. Div., R.A.; 2nd Lieut. H. H. Tudor, E. Div., R.A.; 2nd Lieut. E. W. M. Walker, W. Div., R.A.; Surg.-Major and Mrs. W. A. Parker, M.S.; Surg. J. Paterson, M.S.; Miss C. L. Still, I. Nurs. Service; Miss L. M. Derham, I. Nurs. Service; Captain and Mrs. W. V. Constable and one child, R.N.; Rev. J. J. Archdeacon, chaplain; wife of Capt. A. C. M. Gompertz, 1st Hamp.; wife of Lieut. A. Pongdestre, B.S.C.; Mr. G. S. Hewett, Ind. Marine; Mr. F. Elderton, Ind. Marine; Mr. S. D. Vale, Ind. Marine; Mr. and Mrs. Atkinson.

The Clive leaves on the 9th instant for England.

THE QUEEN V. THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR WAR.—In this case, on Nov. 15 last, a rule nisi had been granted by the Court, at the instance of Major-General E. Mitchell, for a mandamus to the Secretary of State for War to consider and determine the compensation which that officer—the applicant—would be entitled with reference to any loss he may have incurred by the operation of any Royal Warrant of later date than that of July, 1872, under the terms of the Royal Warrant of 1884. Cause was to be shown on Nov. 28, but the case had not come on, and now stood No. 81 in the list of Crown cases. Under these circumstances, the rule having been obtained on the motion of counsel for Major-General Mitchell in accordance with a rule of the Court, which requires that rules for a mandamus shall be so moved. Major-General Mitchell now appeared in person on Wednesday last, and, with reference to that rule of practice, said that as he desired to support his application in person, he asked for the leave of the Court to do so, lest the objection should be taken. He said also in consequence of the withholding of money due to him by the War Office he could not afford to fee counsel. The judges having conferred, Mr. Baron Pollock said there was such a rule of practice, no doubt, as to moving for a writ of mandamus, but as a rule nisi had been granted, he did not think it would apply, and there would probably be no objection taken to the applicant being heard in person in support of his application.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 20, 1891.

THE DARK SIDE OF BRITISH RULE IN INDIA.

UNDER the above sensational heading Mr. William Digby, C.I.E., Secretary to the "Indian Political Agency, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross," publishes in the National Congress organ called India a many-paged diatribe against the British system of administration in that country. This diatribe he calls: "An open letter to the Members of the House of Commons on the dark side of British rule in India—a side so dark as to make it doubtful if British rule has been and is a blessing to the masses of India," and he heads it with the words, "India must be bled"—a quotation from a speech of Lord Salisbury's in April, 1875, which quotation he purposely misapplies. He then goes on to tell "Honourable Members" that the possible second reading of the Indian Councils Amendment Bill on January 28th impels him to ask their careful consideration of "facts" which he offers in his lengthy epistle. The "facts" are, of course, of a very highly-seasoned character, but they have been advanced before for political purposes when the object has been to gain a party triumph by trying to throw discredit on British rule in the East. "Thousands of publications," says Mr. Digby, "have been issued from the India Office, and scores have come from the pens of Anglo-Indian officials on active service, or retired on pension, made up of unstinted praise of British rule in India. The one deduction from all these publications is unmistakable. It is obvious to the most casual glance. It is that Britain has carried on an unselfish work in India, has rescued a people possessing no administrative faculties from a condition akin to that of the Central African pigmies, and has made of India a land of plenty and of prosperity with every Indian sitting under his own vine and fig tree, prosperous, happy, and contented. Few pictures could be more out of drawing than this." But it is Mr. Digby himself who draws the picture. We are not acquainted with any India Office publication, or with the writings of any Anglo-Indian official who paints the life of an Indian peasant under British rule in this roseate colour. The Annual Report on the Moral and Material Progress of India certainly does not do so. But Mr. Digby presents another picture, which he declares to be the correct one. It is a picture very much in shadow. "The Indian Nation," he tells honourable members, "so far as the masses are concerned, is being stupefied, demoralised, and starved. Starved! By a policy which, while crushing the Indian people, enriches the already wealthy British community. Progress in India, strictly so-called, is confined to the few millions who live in the large towns, and who are brought into contact with the visible tokens of British supremacy and the expenditure of British capital." According to this the introduction of British capital into the country has been a positive evil, some anonymous writer in 1793 having expressed his opinion that the people of India "never had or can have" the smallest occasion for any foreign importation of goods. Mr. Digby improves upon the text and says that India was then prosperous, but it is so no longer. All is now changed for the worse. Britain after first destroying nearly all Indian industries takes the profits made in India and spends them out of the country—and is exploiting the Empire to make the connection more profitable to herself, heedless of any results to India itself. The result of this, according to Mr. Digby, is that the main features of the economic condition of India are:—

Digitized by Google

1. Acute, widespread, growing poverty all over the country.
2. Increasingly severe distress among the lower classes.
3. Absence of economic staying power in the masses.

The introduction of railways into India has only served to increase the number of periodical famines, and to more than double the death-rate consequent thereon. But this is not all. Under our mischievous rule the standard of life amongst the Natives is deteriorating, a subject of the Queen in Britain having the chance, on the average, of living sixteen and a-half years longer than a subject of the Queen in India! Taking 1880 as a normal year British rule in India, according to Mr. Digby's showing, was responsible for nearly four and a-half millions of preventible deaths. "The evil in India," says Mr. Digby, "is not over-population, but under-production, and that under-production is a necessary consequence of the system of alien rule which now exists." And while British rule in India is killing off the people the India Office at home is tyrannising over and doing wrong to the survivors:—

Seldom, if ever, has a Government Department so completely failed to fulfil its highest purpose (or, indeed, any purposes but the most commonplace, saying ditto to the Indian authorities, and saying little else), as has the India Office. In a Court of Righteousness, where it would be possible to make events stand out clear and distinct in the relations they hold towards each other, any man who has ever occupied a position of responsibility in that Department would be overwhelmed with shame, contrition, and confusion of face. He would, otherwise, be no real man. That office has never been known spontaneously to do a single act of justice to any Native of India. Our mind (we are quoting now from a leader by the Editor commenting on his own letter), "after careful thought, is unable to recall any instance in which the India Office has done justice, even when facts as clear as the sun at noon on a fine day in August, calling for its intervention, have been placed before it. No condemnation less severe can adequately express the true state of affairs respecting that Department."

There is nothing like being "thorough," whether it be praise or blame which moves the journalist's pen. Mr. Digby is very "thorough," as will be seen from what we have quoted from his letter and editorial, but we have only "got to the beginning" of his diatribe. Much more remains behind, which we shall touch upon in a future issue. In the meantime we may say this of his letter to "The Right Honourable and Honourable Members of the House of Commons." It will do good, for it will prove to them how utterly unfitted Mr. Digby is, even though he writes with all the authority of the "Indian Political Agency" and the "Indian National Congress" to state "facts" regarding the condition of India under British rule.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay season report for the past week:—Rain during the week heavy in Shikarpur and Upper Sind Frontier, damaging standing and reaped crops; slight in Broach, Belgaum, and Kathiawar. Reaping of early crops and sowing of late crops still progressing in a few districts. Sowing operations in parts of Shikarpur delayed owing to floods. Standing crops damaged by locusts in one taluka of Kurrachee and jowari, by frost in one taluka of Satara; cotton diseased in one taluka of Surat, and blighted in two talukas of Dharwar; crops otherwise good, except wheat in one taluka of Dharwar. Fodder insufficient in one taluka of Poona, Ahmednagar, and Dharwar, and three of Satara. Agricultural stock good, except in one taluka of Ahmednagar.

PAY AND PROMOTION IN THE INDIAN STAFF CORPS.

(United Service Gazette.)

The claim of the officers of the Indian Staff Corps for an improvement in their pay and promotion is a strong one. The fact that while several probationers have lately resigned fresh candidates are coming forward at but a very slow rate considerably accentuates the gravity of the position.

The Staff Corps is now open to candidates from Sandhurst and the Militia instead of, as formerly, being wholly recruited from the home army, in which subalterns were always to be found eager for the adventures of Indian life, and often finding an extra inducement in the increased rate of pay, 325 rupees monthly, instead of 6s. 6d. per diem. The period of service, however, in the junior ranks is undoubtedly excessive, comparing very unfavourably with the British service, and this constitutes a genuine grievance. For a young man just commencing his career £300 per annum might be considered a fair income; but must be remembered that in the East such an income does not go very far, and it is almost certain to be found to be inadequate to the officer's needs before the expiration of the eleven years (reduced from twelve about eight years ago), the period of service required before attaining a captaincy, the pay attached to which is 500 rupees per month. In fact, it is not too much to say that a member of the Staff Corps much reach field officer's rank before he can be said to be practically the richer as a result of his long service in a foreign climate. It is now being pressed by many on the authorities that the period of service should be again reduced by a year, and a majority thus made attainable in eighteen years, instead of twenty as at present.

Why, however, should the system of promotion in the Staff Corps not be entirely revised on an adequate and reasonable basis? There is no possible reason why the system of promotion in the Indian Army should differ from that in the British Army.

We will point out what we consider are the lines on which a new system of promotion in the former, similar to that in the latter, might be built up. The Native Army in India, at any rate the Infantry, is now generally classified in regiments of three battalions each. All these regiments are more or less localised. There is still room for perfecting this system of linking and localisation. This will probably be best effected by the amalgamation of the three Presidential armies into one Indian Army under one commander-in-chief, composed of localised regiments. We have at present regiments of three battalions, but regiments of four battalions are preferable. There are at present eight British officers in each battalion, $4 \times 8 = 42$ officers per regiment of four battalions. We propose that promotion should go in each regiment by vacancy, as in the British Army, and that the officers of each regiment should be thus classified: one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, six majors, ten captains, and fourteen lieutenants. The Army Warrant which lays down that the appointments qualifying for the rank of colonel in the Army are to be Staff appointments only is one of the severest blows that has ever been dealt to "regimental duty." The complaint that the best men are transferred from regimental to Staff duty is universal, and yet here we have an Army Order placing a premium on Staff employ.

The senior lieutenant-colonels of regiments should, as well as officers holding certain Staff appointments, be ex officio qualified for promotion to the rank of colonel in the Army. The senior lieutenant-colonel of every regiment composed of Native Infantry battalions should, on completion of three years' service as lieutenant-colonel, be promoted (by selection) to the rank of colonel. We should then have commandants—one colonel, one lieutenant-colonel, and two majors; seconds in command—four majors; wing commanders—four captains; adjutants—four captains (all adjutants should be captains); two supernumerary captains and fourteen lieutenants as wing officers, quartermasters, &c. We believe that this scheme is practical and practicable. It admits of two battalions of each regiment taking the field with twelve officers per battalion, leaving eight officers with the two Depôt battalions.

It is no more difficult to make this change in the organisation of the Indian Army than it was to found after the mutiny the complex combination of the Staff Corps, General and Local Lists, &c., which has, despite drawbacks and demurs, remained in force so long. To advocate localisation, linking of battalions, and promotion by vacancy, is nothing new. It has been done several times in the last thirty years. The assimilation of the system of promotion in the Indian to that of the British service would, or ought to, abolish in the former "officiating appointments," which are the bane of the Indian Army, and are as unsound as they are unpopular.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it .... there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

.... The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, une 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

.... The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain.

JEOPARDY OF LIFF THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good; and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, "ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose Without it Life is a Sham!—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm."

ESTABLISHED 1838.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 10th January; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 8th January; and from Bengal to the 7th January.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF'S second tour will be considerably modified, as the visit to Poona has been cut out. Sir Frederick Roberts is now engaged with the Adjutant-General settling the preliminaries of the Miranzai and Black Mountain Field Forces.

THE death is announced of Mr. E. J. Sinkinson, Secretary to the Government of India in the Finance Department.

H.E. THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF will arrive in Calcutta on Jan. 23rd, but will only stay for a short time, leaving for his tour after the Czarewitch's visit.

MR. FINLAY, Deputy Secretary in the Financial Department, will carry on the Budget work in the office, his appointment for the present being substantive pro tem.

SIR DAVID BALFOUR will shortly introduce a Bill into the Legislative Council dealing with the movement of ships in Indian ports. Under the existing law it is held that the officers representing the Local Government have only power to control the mooring of ships and their movements after they have once been moored. It is now proposed to take further powers so as to bring vessels under control once they have entered a port, even before they are moored.

THE notification of Mr. F. Henvey's retirement from the Civil Service is accompanied in the current Gazette with a tribute to his work and abilities. Mr. Henvey has twenty-nine years' service, out of which fourteen have been spent in the Political Department, and in these posts, as the official farewell runs, "he has uniformly discharged his delicate and difficult duties with eminent ability, loyalty, and success.

GENERAL SIR HENRY BRACKENBURY is expected to join his appointment as Military Member of Council at Simla in April.

MR. JUSTICE RAMPINI will become Judge of the 24-Pergannahs on Mr. Justice Beveridge's retirement this month; but it is likely he will be permanently appointed to the High Court when Mr. Justice Tottenham retires in the spring.

THE Bank of Bengal's dividend for the past half-year is 9 per cent., and about one lakh and a-half is carried over. These results afford striking evidence of the stagnation of trade during the past half-year. It is long since the dividend was below 10 per cent., and last year the amount carried over was three lakhs instead of only one and a-half.

STEPS are now being taken by the military authorities to complete the organisation of a railway service corps for India. The step has been rendered necessary by the large additions to the frontier lines that have been made of late years, and the further extensions now contemplated.

THE services of Mr. Paul will shortly be placed at the disposal of the Government of India, as he is to be appointed Commissioner on behalf of the British Government under the Sikkim treaty. The Chinese representative is to be Chi, who is Civil Secretary at Lhassa, Mr. Hart being associated with him.

COLONEL LITTLE, Deputy Consulting Engineer, has just made a final inspection of the Delhi-Kalka Railway, which is to be opened on February 1st.

MR. PYNE has arrived at Calcutta from Kabul with a commission for further purchases of machinery for the Amir.

CAPTAIN LEIGH, Deputy Commissioner of Kohat, will be Political Officer with the Miranzai Field Force.

OPERATIONS in connection with the Poona Camp of Exercise are now being carried out on a large scale.

THE Indian Merchandise Marks Act is likely to be amended very shortly in some of its sections which have served to hamper trade. The name of the country only and not of actual place of manufacture will be required to be affixed to imported articles, and a full definition of piece-goods will be given so as to avoid the necessity of stamping dress-pieces and other valuable articles, which are often damaged in the process.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned an estimate of three lakhs for the extension of the Tounghoo-Mandalay Railway to Meiktila, a distance of thirteen miles, and two lakhs for the construction of the Tounghoo-Mandalay Extension of the Burma State Railway.

SIR CHARLES ARBUTHNOT has agreed to retain command in Madras until relieved by Sir James Dormer. Major-General East will not, therefore, become Provisional Commander-in-Chief as had been arranged.

CAPTAIN J. C. TYLER, R.E., who was sent on special duty to Gilgit to examine the defensive position marked out by Sir William Lockhart, has returned to India, and is now engaged in writing his report at Simla.

ALL is perfectly quiet in the Khanates beyond the Cashmere frontier.

STEPS are now being taken by the military authorities to complete the organisation of the Railway Service Corps for India.

FURTHER disturbances have taken place at Manipur, but in this case the authorities were able to nip the rising in the bud.

THE Punjab Polo Challenge Cup has been won for the fifth time by the 12th Bengal Cavalry, who beat the Bays by nine goals to nothing.

MR. EDWARD SINKINSON, Financial Secretary to the Government of India, died at Darjeeling suddenly on the 9th inst.

RENEWAL OF INDIA DEBENTURES.—The Secretary of State for India in Council gives notice that, of the £3,000,000 India 3½ per cent. debentures which fall due on August 16th, 1891, he is willing to renew £2,000,000 debentures for a further period of seven years from that date, with interest at 3¼ per cent. per annum; and that the holders of India 3½ per cent. debentures will, to the extent above named, be allowed the option of renewing their debentures on these terms on giving notice of their desire by letter addressed to "The Accountant-General, India Office, Whitehall," on or before February 7th, 1891.

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation at their meeting on Thursday, Jan. 8, proceeded to consider Budget Estimates for 1891-92 as submitted to them by the Standing Committee. There were about two dozen ratepayers present in the body of the hall to watch the proceedings of the evening. The only item discussed and sanctioned by the Corporation was with regard to Town Duties, which Colonel Merewether proposed should be passed at Rs. 9,00,000. He said that the increase of Rs. 93,000 under Town Duties was entirely due to its being necessary to propose the raising of the duty on grain from 2 to 4 annas per candy, it being found impracticable to cut the expenditure below that proposed without imparing efficiency. The Hon. Mr. Javerilal moved an amendment to the effect that the proposed increase on the duty of grain be not sanctioned, but it was lost, Colonel Merewether's proposition being carried by a majority.

NOTES.

FROM the telegrams which will be found in another column it seems that the Government of India has still to deal with frontier troubles, although none of them threaten to become "little wars" of the old kind, which meant loss of time, money, and valuable lives. The authorities, both political and military, in India are now evidently determined that any measures of repression or punishment that they undertake shall be "thorough," and therefore, it is to be hoped, "short, sharp, and decisive."

THE expedition against the Black Mountain tribes will probably take place early in March. The force will be of considerable strength, so as to ensure the thorough subjection of the Hassanzais and such clans as may join them. Hashim Ali is said to be determined to make some opposition, but it is doubtful whether he will be able to collect many men. The Hindustani fanatics who were so roughly handled by the River Column in 1888 are now among the Chigarzais, and they may possibly exercise a mischievous influence over the more fanatical members of this section, though the tribal leaders can scarcely be anxious to court punishment in the spring, when the crops will be still in the ground. Hashim Ali's influence will have to be completely destroyed before the settlement of the border can be assured.

THE strength of the Miranzai Field Force will be between five and six thousand fighting men, this number being required, not so much because of the immediate opposition likely to be offered, as by reason of checking any disposition on the part of the main body of Orukzais from joining the tribesmen on the Kohat frontier. Experience has shown that the sending of a small body of troops into independent territory over the border is an extremely dangerous proceeding. The Ublan Pass affair, in which the Orukzais scored a marked success over a force from Kohat, was a striking illustration of this. In the present case the villages to be punished cannot muster many fighting men; but the country is difficult, and considerable loss might be inflicted upon a weak column operating on a single line of advance, and General Lockhart will have sufficient men under his command to make organised opposition hopeless.

ACCORDING to Reuter's telegrams the Czarewitch and his brother, the Grand Duke George, are being brilliantly entertained at Calcutta. On Monday night there was an evening party and reception at Government House, among the company being many Rajahs and Native gentlemen; and last evening the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, Sir Charles Elliott, gave a dinner and evening party at his residence, Belvedere, in honour of the Czarewitch. His Highness's stay in Calcutta will be much shorter than was originally intended. He leaves this evening by special train for Southern India, arriving at Madras on Feb. 6th.

HIS Imperial Highness has been very splendidly received in the Native States that he visited. At Jeypore he was most hospitably received by the Maharaja, and took part in a tiger-hunting and pig-sticking expedition, the day winding up in the usual Oriental way with a dinner, nautch, and fireworks.

SOME of the Russian sailors belonging to the squadron in the Bombay Harbour behaved as English sailors sometimes do when they get ashore. They got "drunk and disorderly," entered the tent of a Parsi club, and did damage to the furniture therein. One of the party lifted up a lamp and emptied the oil, not down his own throat, as he might have done had he been a sober Russian sailor, but down the back of a comrade. Police interference and an interview before a magistrate followed, but the Russian Jacks got off with a slight fine.

"MR. CAINE has again," observes the Allahabad paper, "shown how absolutely ignorant he is of the customs of the country in which he has now taken to airing his oratory during the cold weather. At the Social Conference held at Calcutta, on Saturday, he told his Native audience that marriage in England was regarded as a civil matter apart from religion, and he 'wished to throw out the suggestion as to whether that could not be done here.' If he had the slightest acquaintance with Hinduism he would never have made such a foolish suggestion. Marriage is essentially a religious ceremony among the Hindoos. To talk of marriage among the Hindoos ever becoming a civil matter apart from religion is an absurdity. Mr. Caine, by the way, was extremely ill-advised to threaten his hearers with Parliamentary interference. The Government of India are already placed in a most difficult position in dealing with the question of raising the age of consent, and now the ex-member for Barrow must needs further hamper them by his foolish utterances. According to a report in a Calcutta paper, 'speaking about the aversion on the part of most to legislation on the subject, he said the only way to prevent that was to take the matter in hand themselves speedily, and show Parliament that they were making progress for themselves; otherwise Parliament would take up the matter, and, through the Government of India, force legislation on the country, whether the Natives liked it or not.' This is certainly not the way in which to win over the orthodox section of the community to any changes which may be contemplated. It is, perhaps, the most mischievous of the many mischievous things which Mr. Caine has said in India."

"I PRONOUNCE that war is dead and buried, and I make epithalamium over his grave." Thus did the author of the political pamphlet "India in 1983" make a Minister of War in the Babu Parliament expound the position a century hence. "The upshot of the debate," writes the historian, "was that half the army was to be disbanded and the other half to have their pay cut down 50 per cent., and having thus balanced the accounts the Babus adjourned to refresh themselves after the labours of the day." The little Congress Parliament of 1890, which has just completed its Christmas performance in the Tivoli Gardens at Calcutta, has abolished the salt tax, then the income tax, then the land revenue, or a great part of it; then, to please Mr. Caine, the Abkari revenue, and as a set-off against all these little remissions of the State income has abolished also the North-West Frontier. This, says the Pioneer, is a common sense solution of the trans-frontier difficulty. If there is no frontier how can there be any difficulty on the other side? It really looks as if the prophet who wrote the account of the Parliament of 1983 might name an earlier date for the advent of the millennium.

SIR JAMES LYALL is maintaining in the Punjab his reputation as a conscientious worker that he gained in Mysore. He does his own work well, and he insists on his subordinates doing their work well. A few years ago annual forest reports in the Punjabs were abolished for triennial, in the hope, not only that officers would be saved unnecessary worry, but that they would be able to furnish clearer and more reliable reports. Sir James Lyall, however, "regrets to notice that in the majority of cases this expectation has not been realised," and he states that, in perusing the review of the Conservator, he has been "struck with the numerous instances of negligence and inaccuracy brought to notice."

THE Times of India says:—"There is once more a boom in Calcutta gold shares, but it is unlikely that speculation will be as wild as it was last year. The fact seems to be that assays showing gold in workable quantities have been made by the managers of more than one company, and the result has been a steady rise in shares generally during the last few days. Two to three ounces of gold per ton of quartz is quite sufficient to give a good return on capital invested, and this proportion has been secured in recent crushings. It must, however, be remembered, observes an up-country paper, that the extent of the auriferous reefs has yet to be proved, and until this has been done it would be rash to prophecy as to the future of the fields. The majority of the shares in the gold companies are now very firmly held, and unless the Marwaris again rush the market, the rise in value will be slow but steady. There are sanguine holders who expect to see capitalists from England coming forward as large investors. This may possibly be the case, but they certainly will not appear on the scene until they have been convinced that the reefs are of great extent, and that the assays are as good as now reported."

THE Uncovenanted Service Bank at Allahabad, Agra, Naini-Tal, and Bareilly has suspended payment. It is stated that the liabilities are under ten lakhs, while the assets approximate seven lakhs. The share capital is six lakhs.

HERE, however, is a brighter picture of an Indian Bank, which has been a success from the first under the direction of its able manager, Mr. James Walker, C.I.E. The gross profit of the Alliance Bank of Simla for the past half-year is, we hear, Rs. 3,37,000, and the net profit Rs. 80,000, equal to 23¾ per cent. per annum on the capital. The directors have declared a dividend at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum; Rs. 20,000 are to be added to the Reserve Fund, and Rs. 10,000 to the Bad Debt Fund. The working capital of the Bank has been increased during the half-year from 93 lakhs to 102 lakhs.

THE Gazette of India, in notifying the retirement of Mr. Henvoy, says :—"Mr. Henvey has, for the last fourteen years out of a service of more than twenty-nine years' duration, held charge of important offices in the Political Department of the Government of India. The Governor-General in Council desires to place on public record the fact that he has uniformly discharged the delicate and difficult duties of those posts with eminent ability, loyalty, and success. As the Governor-General's Agent in Central India, Mr. Henvey has merited and enjoyed the complete confidence of the Government of India. His Excellency the Viceroy regrets that the public service should suffer loss by Mr. Henvey's retirement."

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 25.

The columns of the Anglo-Indian and Native Press continue to be filled with letters and discussions on the subject of the Age of Consent Bill, and, as far as the Native portion of the community is concerned, it occupies attention almost to the entire exclusion of other topics. The Mahomedans have now pronounced in favour of the measure, and the Brahmo Somaj are also understood to be generally favourable to the Bill. The great body of orthodox Hindoos in Upper and Western India have not yet expressed any definite opinion, and are apparently indifferent: but there can be no doubt that the proposal has excited a strong feeling of fear and dislike throughout Bengal proper, and in at least a portion of Madras. Those in opposition to the Bill have published the opinions of many learned pundits that the measure will place pious Hindoos in the position of having to choose between committing a breach of the law or a deadly sin.

Numerous meetings have been held in Calcutta and elsewhere. One of these, which took place at the residence of Sobkabazar Rajah, was attended by many members of the Bengalee aristocracy and a number of leading Native citizens. The chairman read letters and telegrams expressing sympathy which had been received from Maharaja Durbunga, Maharanee Surnomoye of Kossimbazar, Maharaja Sir Jotendro Mohun Tagore, the High Priest of Baidyanata, and other influential persons, and stated that several leaders of the Congress movement, who had long ceased to be Orthodox Hindoos, were yet strongly opposed to the Bill. A Hindoo physician in large practice argued that the measure was not required; a pundit, whose opinion Sir Andrew Scoble quoted when introducing the Bill, declared that he had been misquoted; and a Mahommedan zemindar asserted that it interfered with the Mahommedan religion. This last gentleman, however, appears to be wrong, as the Mahommedan organ in the Press and representative in Council both expressed a contrary view.

It is somewhat strange that the Opposition allowed the motion to refer the Bill to a Select Committee to pass without a debate, that being, according to the usual practice in the Indian Legislature, the proper stage for discussing the principle of any project of law. Doubtless the measure will be hotly debated when the Committee presents its report, and as the local Governments are now collecting opinions all over the country the Council will have ample material for gauging the real extent and strength of the hostile feeling.

A Madras telegram gives gloomy accounts of the crop prospects in the Chingleput, Vellore, Cuddapah, North and South Arcot, Tinnevelly, and Malabar districts. It is stated that much distress is inevitable, and that the Government has already sanctioned a relief grant.

The through connection of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway was completed on the 19th, and the line will be opened for goods traffic on February 1, while the formal opening will take place a few days later.

Mr. Spring, chief engineer of the Kistna Bridge, writing to the Madras Mail, gives an account of an affray between the Punjabee workmen and the Telinga inhabitants of the vicinity which occurred on Christmas Day, and very nearly turned into a serious riot. The affair seems to have arisen from one of those extraordinary superstitious panics which sometimes seize the ignorant masses, to the effect that the Government, when commencing a great public work, instructs its employés to collect children's heads for the purpose of offering a propitiatory sacrifice to the deities.

"Commissioner" Booth Tucker, the head of the Salvation Army in India, has addressed a letter to the Indian Press proposing a scheme of rescue for the lowest class of people in India on the lines of "General" Booth's English scheme.

The Miranzai expedition has been chiefly occupied so far in reconnoissances and road-making. The health of the troops is good, in spite of the intense cold.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 27.

The Bengal National Chamber of Commerce, representing the Native commercial community, have addressed the Government on the subject of the report of the Factory Commission. They express a hope that no legislation will be undertaken which may endanger the prosperity of the manufacturing industries, and they state that some places which were formerly notorious for the disorderly and criminal character of the people residing in them have become quiet and law abiding after factories had been established there.

Mr. Che, secretary of the Amban of Tibet, who was to have acted as the Sikkim Boundary Commissioner, is unable to leave Tibet, owing to illness. A substitute will, therefore, be appointed.

The scouts of the Miranzai force exchanged some shots with the enemy near the village of Kalsee on Saturday. There were no casualties on our side, but it is believed that the enemy suffered a slight loss. The weather continues to be wet and cold, and to greatly hinder the advance of the force.

BURMA.

RANGOON, JAN. 17.

It is reported here and also in Penang that Germany is endeavouring the obtain from the King of Siam the cession of a port and some territory in the Malay Peninsula between Penang and the southern frontier of Burma. The exact extent of territory which is sought to be acquired by Germany is unknown, but it includes the island of Salanga or Junk Seylon, on the western coast of the Malay Peninsula. This island would make a good port.

The territory between Burma and Penang is tributary to Siam, which exercises a nominal and shadowy suzerainty over it. Although nominally Siamese territory, all the country between Burma and Penang is regarded as being completely within the sphere of British influence, and is practically surrounded by British territory. Such commerce as exists in it is almost exclusively with Penang or Burma.

Renoug is another good port on the western coast of the Malay Peninsula between Penang and Burma. It is north of Junk Seylon, and close to the Southern frontier of Burma. Renoug, which is governed by a petty Native Sultan, was visited by the King of Siam during his recent yachting tour. German influence has been steadily increasing in Bangkok.

Major Kunhardt, R.E., has assumed charge of the Ruby Mines, and it is understood that the system of working the mines will be materially modified.

JANUARY 25.

It is reported from Bhamo that 800 Chinamen are threatening Mogoung and preventing the column under Captain O'Donnell from proceeding towards Endangie Lake. In order to strengthen Captain O'Donnell, 100 men of the Devonshire Regiment and two guns from a mountain battery are being despatched from Bhamo.

RANGOON, JAN. 26.

Further intelligence has been received from Mogoung. Captain O'Donnell reports that he has trustworthy information that 800 Chinamen, armed with rifles, are at Thamnia, 50 miles north of Mogoung, intending to attack the last-named place. Captain O'Donnell's force consists of 400 military police. One hundred and fifty British infantry leave Bhamo for Mogoung to-day. When this reinforcement reaches Captain O'Donnell he will take the offensive.

The presence of this large and well-armed body of Chinamen causes much surprise. It is unknown how they have procured so many rifles, and it is uncertain whence they come.

The Chin frontier continues to be disturbed. A ration column was attacked by the Chins near Wawdin. At Walawaw the Chins fired into Captain Rundle's camp, killing a Goorkha havildar. Captain Rundle has assembled 400 men to punish the Kanhows, and will soon commence operations against them.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

SIR BARNES PEACOCK.

(Bengal Times.)

The graceful tribute paid by Mr. Woodroffe on Friday last, and by the present Chief Justice of the High Court, to the memory of the late Sir Barnes Peacock, recalls some interesting incidents in the life of one of the most eminent personages of his time. The generation has nearly passed away which witnessed the exciting case of contempt of Court, wherein the quondom editor of a Calcutta daily was involved. We allude to it because it illustrates some striking characteristics of Sir Barnes Peacock. The affair arose in connection with the prosecution of Mr. William Taylor, once Commissioner of Patna, and at the time a law agent, in which capacity his conduct was impugned. While the case was sub judice before the Chief Justice and Mr. Justice Sumbhoonath Pundit (the first Native Judge who sat in the High Court), it was commented upon by the Englishman. In the course of the remark, allusion was made to the personal appearance of the Native Judge by a characteristic application of a passage from Gray's well-known elegy in a country churchyard. The writer supposed that something said in Court must have called up a blush on the cheeks of the Hon. Mr. Justice Pundit, although (he added) "like Gray's rose, he must have blushed unseen." This hurt Sir Barnes more than it could possibly have wounded his colleague, and aroused in his bosom the chivalrous spirit which ever impelled him to throw his ægis over the weak and oppressed. He took up the cause of the Native Judge as if it were his own, and issued a rule upon the printer, publisher, and editor of the Englishman to show cause why they should not be committed for contempt of Court. Captain Fenwick, the then editor, at once assumed the responsibility of the act which had been impunged; and the result was a trial which caused unusual sensation in the English community at the Presidency. Outside of the Court, the offending parties sought to represent the action of the Chief-Justice as an attempt to interfere with the liberty of the Press, by invoking against it an obsolete law which was little more than a dead letter on the Statute-Book. The ostensible ground on which the rule was issued was that the editorial objected to had exceeded the limits of fair criticism, and indulged in misrepresentation. Into the merits of the question, now long shelved, we have no desire to enter, but the incidents of the trial, viewed at this distance of time, cast a pleasing light on Sir Barnes Pocock's character, which is not without its interest now that he is no more. The inception of the trial was due to no hostility to the freedom of the Press, for such hostility is inconceivable in so ardent a lover of freedom and fair play as Sir Barnes. The real motive was what we have hinted at, and was traceable to the wound inflicted on the amour propre of a fine old English gentleman of the old school, whose courtesy to his Native colleagues and the Native Bar was marked and uniform. Nevertheless, the public of Calcutta were foolishly indignant at the action taken by the Chief Justice, and a large number of gentlemen came forward and volunteered to subscribe, if we remember rightly, 1,000 each to pay the expenses of the trial, and any fine which might be imposed upon Captain Fenwick. What heightened the interest of the situation was that the list of subscribers was called for by the Court, and submitted to the inspection of Sir Barnes, who must have been taken aback to see in it the names of some of his own colleagues on the Bench. This fact, however, evoked no comment from the Chief Justice, the perfect temper and calm dignity of whose demeanour all through the trial afforded a singular contrast to what is sometimes witnessed in our highest Courts. He did not swerve in the smallest degree from the course he judged to be his duty, notwithstanding the unpopularity which he could not help seeing that he had incurred, and the disapproval of the heads of the very society in which he himself moved. This appears from several incidents which occurred in Court at the time. When the counsel for Captain Fenwick, a distinguished advocate, who now leads the Calcutta Bar, rose to speak, he reminded Sir Barnes what an anomalous position it was in which he (the advocate) was placed, as he had to impeach the action of the mover of a prosecution, in a case in which the prosecutor and judge were united in the same person. He begged accordingly to be permitted to address the Bench as if he were impugning the procedure of a third party. The reply of the Chief Justice was characteristic of his open and fearless integrity. He expressed a hope that counsel would speak with the utmost freedom, and not hesitate to say exactly what he thought; and observed that no such illusory supposition was needed as that the prosecutor was a different person from the judge. Accordingly, counsel did speak freely, and the Chief Justice took it admirably. At the close of the first day's proceedings, the Court was asked whether any bail or security of any sort was required as to Captain Fenwick's presence in Court the following day. The reply was that no such security was demanded, as the Chief Justice could place entire reliance on that gentleman's simple assurance that he would be present. We need not pursue the story further. Suffice it to say that the matter ended without any serious consequences to the accused, and merely formed an episode in public life which has its instructive side. Unless we greatly mistake, it was the proceedings against Mr. Taylor which threatened to be the occasion of a most serious rupture between the Bench and the Executive. The High Court's order committing the accused to prison was very distasteful to the head of the Government, who resorted to the unprecedented course of issuing a mandate to the jailor not to receive the prisoner! In any case this was the information which reached Sir Barnes through a demi-official, but thoroughly reliable channel. The grand old man was equal to the occasion, and did not hesitate a moment as to the course he ought to adopt. He saw clearly that if the behests of the highest tribunal in the land could be resisted by the head of the executive, the arm of public justice would be paralysed. He, accordingly, drafted a proclamation to the effect that, as the Supreme Government had declined compliance with the decrees of the judiciary, the Courts of the country under the jurisdiction of the High Court should be declared closed, and the administration of justice suspended, pending a reference to Her Majesty in Parliament. This proclamation, we understand, was sent for publication to the superintendent of the office where the Gazette of India used to be printed. But before printing it, that officer thought it wise to intimate the state of things to headquarters. The result was that a special messenger was sent countermanding the objectional order; and the necessity for the proclamation ceased to exist. It is clear from the firm attitude Sir Barnes assumed in this instance, and the cool and clear judgment he exercised in an emergency so serious, that he was far more than a sound judge or able lawyer. He was a man for a crisis.

THE MUSSALMANS OF MADRAS AND THE AGE OF CONSENT.

(Madras Times.)

A Mahomedan gentleman writes to us above the initials "N. A.," expressing surprise that a public meeting was held, by the Mussalman gentlemen of Madras, for the purpose of protesting against a proposal to the Government to raise the "Age of Consent." These worthy gentlemen were, he thinks, perhaps, oblivious of the fact that the measure they were assembled to protest against has not only the sanction and support of the Mahomedan Law, but is practically recognised among ninety-five per cent of the Mussulman population of India as an established institution. Some of our correspondent's remarks trench on delicate ground, and we are, therefore, compelled to give merely a cursory review of his opinions. He observes that puberty and discretion, according to the Mahomedan Law, constitute the essential conditions of the capacity of the parties to marry, to enter into a valid contract of marriage; and the almost universal practice of the Mussalmans of India would permit of the age of consent being fixed at fifteen years.

A painful consciousness of the position of women as mere drudges or toys has induced some of the large-hearted and sympathetic men in the Hindu community, with a view to the improvement of existing practice, to propose to the Government an alteration of the exception to the Section 375 of the Indian Penal Code. The alteration proposed contemplates the raising of the age limit of ten years to twelve or fourteen, which, it is admitted, will go a good way towards preventing the evil. But the modification, harmless as it is, has roused groundless apprehensions among a section of orthodox Hindus, and is denounced as a dangerous innovation, which, letting the legislature interfere with our private customs, will ultimately lead to the subversion of all social order and arrangement. But these men are surely labouring under a great misapprehension. In the first place, it is a mistake to suppose this to be legislative interference with either the religious or social privileges of Hindus or Mussalmans. It is very doubtful whether Hindu Shastras really enjoin early or infant marriages, which, are, however, permitted by custom. But the proposed measure does not interfere with this custom. Among Mussalmans the practice undeniably favours the measure; nor does the law oppose it. In the second place it is a false and exaggerated estimate of the motives and intentions of the Government to suspect it to be capable of recklessly interfering with our religious and social rights. The history of the Indian Government is a standing rebuke to such baseless suspicions. Our correspondent adds:—"I have shown that the measure does not interfere with the social customs of either Hindus or Mussalmans. But granting for the sake of argument that it does, it must be remembered that this is not the first time that the Indian legislature has thus interfered. To those that have any acquaintance with the history of the Indian legislation it must be evident that whenever there was great good to be gained or evil to be avoided the Indian legislature demonstrated that it was fully endowed with all those powers which the exigencies of the occasions demanded. It is not necessary for me to refer to inhuman practices, which by special enactments the Government repressed; nor need I point to the Widow Marriage Act, or to the age limit prescribed in regard to a valid contract, which latter, according to the argument of Moulvi Muhammad Nizamuddin Khan Bahadur, is against the common law of Islam, inasmuch as that law fixes no such limit.

"One more observation," he concludes, "and I have done, Mussalmans generally are in practical enjoyment of the advantages which would accrue from the proposed change in the law. Thus their fortunate indemnity from the woeful experience with which the Hindu community is afflicted renders them, perhaps, in some measure, unable to make a proper estimate of the magnitude of the evil or the vastness of the resultant good. But certainly they cannot plead ignorance of the existence of the evil itself, and having this knowledge they must admit themselves fully competent to recognise that the proposed modification will doubless prove an effective remedy. We are living in a world full of misery. The plain duty of every one of us is to endeavour to make that corner of the world which we can influence somewhat less miserable. It thus behoves us Mussulmans, that far from opposing we must help those that are engaged in the laudable work of promoting human happiness and minimising human misery.'

BENGAL.

(Jan. 7.)

No better proof of the high credit of the Calcutta Corporation could be desired, writes the local paper, than the extraordinary success of the new five per cent. loan. Undoubtedly money is plentiful at present, but it is a notable circumstance that a call for Rs. 8,40,000 should have elicited tenders to the amount of upwards of sixty-five lakhs, at rates ranging as high as 106 per cent. The entire loan, with the exception of Rs. 4,000, was subscribed by the Bank of Bengal at Rs. 105-14, the rate of the small sum mentioned being Rs. 106. The Bank of Madras tendered for five lakhs, at Rs. 105-4, while tenders at over Rs. 103 for six and three lakhs, respectively, were received from the Agra Bank and the Alliance Bank of Simla and Calcutta. Although a small loan, it is an unusual piece of good fortune that it should be floated at six annas premium, to say nothing of the amount being tendered for eight times over.

THE Census Committee at Tangail in East Bengal are likely to meet with difficulties of an unexpected kind. The class of Hindus known as Chandal—the lowest in the ladder of caste system in Bengal—recently convened a monster meeting to protest against that opprobrious epithet being written against their names in the Census register. They say that they are not low-caste Hindus, that the sacred epic, Ramayan, mentions how the great hero Ram—an incarnation of God himself—made friendship with a member of their class and actually broke bread with him, and that they should be called not Chandals, which is a bad epithet altogether, but Nama Sudras, meaning a caste equal, if not superior, to the Sudras. They are raising subscriptions to fight for their nomenclature, and if the name is officially applied to them there may be some disturbances on the census night. They have engaged pleaders to prosecute any census officers who style them Chandals, and have shown a strong desire to carry their contention to the highest court of appeal. After this will any one ask, What is in a name?

THE District Board of Rungpore have unanimously resolved to move the Bengal Government to reconsider the determination, arrived at during the last régime, to withhold sanction to the important feeder-lines of railway which formed the subject of a correspondence in our columns during the month of September. That connecting the Brahmaputra at Kaliganj with the Eastern Bengal State Railway system at Hilli, now possess a greatly enhanced importance, inasmuch as the Government of India are understood to have vetoed a scheme for reaching Assam propounded by the State Railway authorities, which involved enormous viaducts over the rivers Tista and Dharla, to be constructed at a cost of sixty or seventy lakhs. The Hilli-Kaliganj railway will effect the speediest and easiest means of communication between Northern Bengal and Assam; and it has the warm support of the river steamship companies and of all interested in developing the resources of both provinces. The local Government has also ordered surveys to be carried out for the other line promoted by the Rungpore Board—that connecting the district headquarters with Bara Durga, and including an extension to the left hand of the Tista. This railway would traverse an area whence comes the finest tobacco produced in Bengal, which furnishes, in fact, the material for the best description of the Trichinopoly and Burma cigars now so much in vogue.

MADRAS.

ABOUT forty elephants were entrapped in the Kaukenkote kheddahs at half-past ten on Thursday night, Jan. 8. The moon had not risen, but the crush of elephants through the gate on their way to water sufficiently informed the watcher, in a high tree near, that a goodly number had entered, and an electric bell signal being given to the gate ahead, both gates were dropped, and the herd secured. Later in the night a second herd of about twenty passed through the other kheddah, but owing to the heat of the weather and difficulties about fodder, they were not caught, as it is considered better not to have too many on hand at one time. The kheddahs were only completed on the 26th December, so this speedy success must be gratifying to the Mysore Government and to those immediately concerned in the capture.

THE position of the employés on the South Indian Railway is at present a peculiar one. Last June they all received six months' notice from the old Company, and the notice terminated on the 31st ultimo. Meanwhile the newly-formed Company has failed to intimate its intentions as to the re-employment of these men or the appointment of others, and the line is at present being worked by the former without any ostensible authority for so doing. If the whole of them had chosen to leave the Railway in the lurch on New Year's Day, there would have been no legal remedy for preventing their doing so. Self-interest naturally prompted them to continue work, but the new Company is none the less to blame for not making suitable arrangements in time.

THE Madras Gazette announces the retirement from the Madras Civil Service of Mr. W. S. Whiteside, Second Member of the Board of Revenue. The Honourable H. W. Bliss, the First Member, is now in Calcutta, engaged as a Member on the Viceregal Legislative Council; and the Honourable Mr. Grose, Third Member of the Board, will continue to act as a Member of the Madras Executive Council, until, on the arrival of Lord Wenlock, the Honourable Mr. Garstin reverts to his seat in Council as Junior Member. It is expected that Mr. H. Clogstoun, Fourth Member of the Board, will be appointed to act as First Member; that Mr. C. S. Crole, acting Fourth Member, will be appointed to act as Second Member; that Mr. G. McWatters, Collector of Madras, who arrived in Bombay this week from England, will be appointed to act as Third Member, that Mr. W. A. Happell, Collector of the Godavery, will continue to act as Fourth Member; and that Mr. W. P. Austin will continue to act as Collector of Madras. Mr. Grose will be promoted from Third to Second Member of the Board, Mr. Clogstoun from Fourth to Third Member, and Mr. Crole will be confirmed as Fourth Member.

Grant-road Station. The train conveying the Governor and party left Godhra on Saturday night, January 3rd, arriving at Grant Road at 7.48 A.M. (local time). The arrival of his Excellency was of a private character, but several gentlemen were in attendance at the station to meet him. Amongst those present were Mr. G. W. Vidal, C.S., Acting Chief Secretary to Government; Colonel W. H. Wilson, Commissioner of Police, Bombay; Captain Gott, Commanding the Governor's Body Guard; Rissaldar Major Roopsing, Native A.D.C. to Lord Harris; Rao Bahadoor Madeorao Wassoodew Burve, C.I.E.; Rao Bahadoor Yeshwant M. Kelkur, Oriental Translator to Government; Khan Saheb Maneckshaw Dhunjeeshaw, of the B.B. & C.I. Railway Police; and his Assistant Moonshee Saheb Hoosein Mahomed. Lord and Lady Harris, after alighting from their saloon, shook hands with the party, and then drove to Government House, Malabar Point.

SHORTLY after half-past 5 o'clock on Wednesday morning, Jan. 7th, H.E. Lord Harris, accompanied by Lady Harris and a party, consisting of a lady and ten gentlemen, left Grant Road Station by the early local train on a hunting excursion to Santa Cruz. Moonshee Saheb Hoossain Mahomed, of the B.B. and C.I. Railway Police, accompanied the Governor and party. After spending a few hours in hunting their Excellencies returned to Bombay at 8 A.M. (local time).

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Rain during the week in Kurrachee, doing damage to reaped crops. Reaping of early and sowing of late crops still continue in a few districts. Standing crops damaged by locusts in 2 talukas of Kurrachee; oilseed in 1 taluka of Hyderabad, and wheat in 1 taluka of Nasik blighted; cotton diseased in 1 taluka of Surat, and blighted in 3 talukas of Bijapore, and 5 of Dharwar; prospects of cotton not favourable in parts of Broach; late crops otherwise good except in 3 talukas of Belgaum and 2 of Dharwar. Fodder scarce in 1 taluka of Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Ahmednager, Dharwar and Baroda, and 3 of Belgaum. Agricultural stock good except in 1 village of Broach and in 1 taluka of Kurrachee, Khandesh, and Ahmednagar.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES AND PUNJAB.

(Jan. 8.)

SIR CHARLES CROSTHWAITE concluded his farewell Administration Report in Burma with these words:—"In making over his great trust to his successor he ventures to express a confident hope that the order which has been established will remain unbroken, that the Government of which the foundations have been laid will be perfected, and that prosperity and happiness will henceforth be the lot of a people whose patience and cheerfulness under misfortunes brought upon them by the misgovernment of their King, and the crimes of some of their fellow-countrymen, are worthy of admiration."

As we anticipated, writes the Punjab paper, the visit of the Czarewitch to India is causing uneasy speculation on the other sides of one North-West Frontier, and bazaar rumour, of course, gives it a political character. Vague surmises are circulated as "news" with regard to the attitude which the Amir intends to take up to prevent the partition of his kingdom and Persia, which the visit of the heir of all the Russias to India is supposed to foreshadow. Lord Salisbury cannot have been left in ignorance of the probability that such ideas would be circulated; and we only regret that simultaneously with the announcement of the Czarewitch's visit it could not have been invited and had accepted the invitation to visit his Exellency the Viceroy at Peshawur after the Imperial Russian guest had departed. One correspondent, indeed, states—and we believe not without foundation for the statement—that the Amir has been sounded on the subject, and has given a favourable reply. There is hope, therefore, that before long an approaching visit from "our ally the Amir" will be formally notified. The difficulties of his Highness's position as ruler of Afghanistan, placed between two expanding empires like Russia and Great Britain, are such that the last-named Power, having assumed the rôle of ally and protector, should always give its first thoughts to lessening, or at all events not unnecessarily increasing them. Lord Salisbury has, we fear, in this business rather overlooked Asiatic—in h's care for European—sensibilities.

BURMA.

(Jan. 8.)

IT may be well, writes a contemporary, to state that the parties on the Burma-Chinese frontier under Messrs. Daly and Elliott will not go beyond the debateable land on the border. They will probably stop short considerably of Kyaing Yunyi, and their absence, it is reckoned, will be nearer three than six months.

A SUBJECT, which has been engaging the attention of the new Chief Commissioner of Burma, is the anomalous state of affairs in connection with the rates on the Burma State Railway. In order to compete with the Flotilla Company the rates to Mandalay, for instance, are much lower than the rates to intermediate stations. A new scale of rates is to be drawn up, and all anomalies done away with.

IN both the Northern and Southern Shan States there h s been difficulty in realising the tribute assessed by Mr. Hilderband. Sir Charles Crosthwaite went into the subject when at Fort Stedman in March last, and issued orders suspending the collection of part of the tribute in several States. No actual remissions have been sanctioned or recommended by the Chief Commissioner pending the result of an inquiry which has now been instituted with the view on ascertaining as fully as possible the actual resources of each State. In order to assist in this inquiry Mr. Leveson, Assistant Commissioner, has been temporarily attached to the Southern Shan States, and Mr. Saunders, Assistant Commissioner, to the Northern Shan States. They are now on tour making the necessary inquiry.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

COLONEL G. W. SAWYER will probably act for Major J A Miley as Controller of Military Accounts in the Western Circle, Bengal.

ALL the necessary arrangements have now been made for opening the new offices of the Eastern Circle of Military Accounts at Rawalpindi at the commencement of the financial year in April.

IT has been ruled that a Station Staff Officer, 2nd or 3rd class, promoted to Station Staff Officer, 1st class, will com mence his tour of five years' service from the date of assumption of the latter's appointment.

WITH a view to expedite the promulgation of orders to the Army, India Army Circulars will be published, as a tentative measure, until further orders, fortnightly, i.e., on the 1st and 15th of each month. This arrangement will be brought into operatiou with the issue of Army Circulars, dated the 1st January, 1891.

THE garrison of Chunar has been withdrawn, and the Fort handed over to the civil authorities.

AN assault-at-arms, open to the troops in the District, will be held at Allahabad on or about the 2nd and 3rd March, 1891.

THE little garrison of Gnatong had to spend their Christmas in rather a trying climate. The changes were so marked that the thermometer marked 94° in the open air at 11 A.M., and 15° of frost at night. It would seem that Gnatong will be abandoned during the course of the year, as nothing whatever is being done to keep the fort in order. Extensive repairs will be necessary if it is to be held during the next rains. Pedong has been abolished as a base, and quarters are being built at Guntok in the heart of Sikkim.

THE force will be divided into three columns—No. 1, under Colonel Bruce, 4th P.I., commandant, with Captain Pollock as Brigade-major, will consist of the 1st Sikhs, one troop of the 5th Punjab Cavalry, the Hazara mountain battery and half a company of the 5th Company Sappers and Miners, headquarters and wing of the 22nd Pioneers, the 29th Bengal Infantry, and the 1st and 4th Punjab Infantry. No. 2 Column, under Colonel Turner, 2nd Punjab Infantry, with Captain Gray, 4th Punjab Infantry, Brigade-Major, consists of one troop 5th Punjab Cavalry, three guns Peshawar mountain battery, half company of 5th Company Sappers and Miners, the 22nd Bengal Infantry, wing of the 23rd Pioneers, and the 5th Punjab Infantry. Column No. 3, under Colonel Brownlow, 1st Punjab Infantry, is composed of one squadron 5th Punjab Cavalry, three guns Peshawar mountain battery, and the 3rd Sikhs. The force will move as soon as possible.

The composition of the Miranzai field force, for the punishment of the offending claims of the Orukzai tribe, will be as follows:—General officer in command, Sir W. Lockhart; orderly officer, Lieutenant H. G. Maxwell, 16th Bengal Cavalry; Assistant Adjutant-General, Major Egerton, Punjab Frontier Force; Deputy Adjutant-General, Captain Gartside Tipping; Intelligence Officer, Captain Mason, R.E., Commanding Royal Engineers, Major Shone; Field Engineer, Captain Maclagan; Assistant Field Engineers, Lieutenants Powell and Nathan; Principal Medical Officer, Brigade-Surgeon Harvey, Chief Commissariat Officer, Captain Sandys; Transport Officer, Captain Wharry; Signalling officer, Lieutenant Evatt, R.E.; Survey Officer, Captain Wahab; Veterinary Surgeon W. A. Crow.

MAJOR-GENERAL E. F. CHAPMAN, C.B., R.A., who has been appointed Director of Military Intelligence, vice Lieutenant-General H. Brackenbury, was born November 14th, 1840, and entering the Bengal Artillery, June 12th, 1858, attained the rank of Major-General, September 20th 1889. After passing the Staff College, he joined the Staff in India as Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General, in March, 1871, and served with the department until February 17th, 1881. From June 27th, 1881, to January 3rd, 1885, he was Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief in India; and on November 24th, 1885, was appointed Quartermaster-General at Simla, which position he held until obliged to return to England some time ago, in consequence of ill-health. He served in the Abyssinian Campaign of 1867-68 as Aide-de-Camp to the officer commanding Royal Artillery (mentioned in despatches, medal); served in the Afghan War of 1878-80 as Deputy-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General, including the march from Cabul to Candahar (twice mentioned, medal with two clasps, bronze star, Brevet of Lieutenant-Colonel and C.B.).

ARRIVAL OF THE TROOPSHIP MALABAR.

Her Majesty's troopship Malabar, Captain J. G. Jones, arrived in harbour on Wednesday morning, January 7, from Portsmouth, which she left on the 11th December, calling at Malta on the 19th, Port Said on the 24th, and Suez on the 26th. From Portsmouth she took the Royal Scots to Malta, and there embarked the Bedford Regiment for Bombay. She brought 73 officers, 17 ladies, 18 children, 1,130 men, 51 women, and 100 children attached to different regiments. During the voyage Mrs. King, the wife of Sergeant King, of the Bedford Regiment, died from natural causes. The Malabar passed H.M.S. Serapis on the 1st instant, and also H.M.S. Amphion, the former bound for Portsmouth and the latter for Malta. She experienced fine weather during the voyage; but in the Red Sea a strong head wind was encountered, which caused her to arrive one day later than expected. H.I.H. THE CZAREWITCH'S TOUR.

(From Times of India Special Correspondent.)

AHMEDABAD, JAN. 2ND.

The one day set apart by H.I.H. the Czarewitch's cicerones for "doing" the interesting city of Ahmedabad, small as it appears when there is so much to be seen, has apparently been sufficient, if not more than sufficient in his Imperial Highness's opinion, since he has contented himself with paying but hurried visits to some of the lesser sights, leaving most of the important objects of interest unseen and undisturbed by his Royal presence.

After the official programme had undergone a series of material alterations, H.I.H. Prince George of Greece and the other members of the party arrived here at ten minutes past four yesterday afternoon. On the way from Bombay the party broke their journey at Vishvamitri, on the Bombay side of Baroda, which was reached about six o'clock in the morning. Here they were received by General Sir Harry Prendergast, British Resident at Baroda, Colonel Jackson, Mr. Littledale, and other gentlemen, and after a delay of ten minutes or so, during which chota hazri was served, entered another special train, and journeyed some twelve miles over the Gaekwar's State Railway to Kilanpore. Here Sir Harry Prendergast, in conjunction with Mr. Littledale, had made most complete arrangements for giving the distinguished visitors every facility for a little black buck shooting. All the shikaries took very kindly to the sport, and, although the Czsarewitch himself did not succeed in bagging one of the numerous wily buck who had turned out to do honour to the occasion, though it might be at considerable cost to themselves, the other members of the party secured no fewer than fourteen fine specimens between them in the short time at their disposal. When the fourteenth buck had fallen, tiffin time was at hand, and an adjournment was made to a spacious and cool-looking marquée, where an excellent luncheon was provided. After the party had refreshed themselves, they again took up their place in H.E. the Gaekwar's charming little special, and returned to Vishvamitri, where the B.B. and C.I. Company's special, which had been thus far accompanied by Mr. Tudball, District Traffic Superientendent, was waiting to receive them, and shortly afterwards the train in charge of Mr. W. G. Bourne, another of the Company's District Superintendents, resumed its journey to Ahmedabad.

Although the special was not expected here before twenty minutes past four, a numerous assemblage of ladies and gentlemen, including H.E. the Governor and Lady Harris; Mr. H. E. M. James, Commissioner, N.D.; the Hon. Mr. Pritchard; Mr. Lee-Warner; Mr. E. M. Fulton, judge; Col. McNaughten, officer commanding the Ahmedabad district; Colonel Rhodes, Military Secretary to H.E. the Governor; Mr. Edgerley, Private Secretary; Capt. the Hon. St. Leger-Jervis, Aide-de-Camp; Dr. Martin; Major Wetherall; Mr. Reginald Gilbert; Rev. Mr. Gillespie; Mr. F. G. Lynde; Mr. Kirby; Rao Bahadur Runchodlall Chotalall, C.I.E.; Rao Saheb Mahiputram, C.I.E.; Rao Saheb Jeewanlall, Mamlutdar; Rao Saheb Narsiram, Mamlutdar; Rao Saheb Runchodlall Kopoorehund; Rai Saheb. Mulakraj Nihalchund; Seth Seirabhoy; Khan Bahadur P. H. Dustoor, M.A., City Magistrate; Bomonjee E. Mody, M.A., District Deputy Collector; N. D. Khandalawalla, B.A., LL.B., Judge of the Small Causes Court; Furdonjee Taraporewalla, B.A.; Shapoorjee Ruttonjee, Deputy Collector; Khan Sahebs Byranjee, Framjee Vakil and Nowrojee K. Mody; Drs. Jamsetjee D. Khambatta, Nilkhunt, Doshi, Soloman, Manilall, Anubhoy, Messrs. Madhowlall Runchodlall, Harilall, Amabashunker, Chunilall, Dulputram, Jehangir Pestonjee Vakil, Framjee Pestonjee Vakil, Bomonjee Jamsetjee Wadia, Pestonjee Cursetjee Wadia, Jamsetjee Bomonjee Wadia, and many others, took up their positions on the platform some considerable time before. The station was, as is usual on such occasions, festively decorated with bunting, the platform being covered with crimson cloth, while on either side of the passage leading from the platform to the compound chairs and couches were provided for the numerous company who had assembled to accord a welcome to his Imperial Highness. In the compound, which was densely thronged with Native spectators, a hundred rank and file of the Gloucester Regiment, under command of Captain Capel Cure, who had been specially brought from Bombay, furnished a guard of honour. It was just as well that those who were to received his Imperial Highness had allowed themselves a small margin in the matter of time, for, contrary to expectation, the special arrived ten minutes before it was expected, and the distinguished guests were received, and on their way to camp by about 4.20, the time at which the train should have come in. The reception was like all such receptions. H.E. Governor and Lady Harris waited till his Imperial Highness had alighted from his saloon; then they stepped forward and shook hands with him, her ladyship dropping a low courtesy as she did so. Some of the leading officials who had not previously met the Cesarewitch were then presented, after which he, accompanied by H.E. the Governor, Mr. James, and Captain the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, took his seat in a carriage, drawn by a pair of horses in waiting at the entrance to the station, and, escorted by a detachment of Native horsemen, took his departure for the Governor's camp amidst much cheering, Lady Harris and Prince George of Greece and the other members of the Imperial party following in other carriages. On the way to Camp opportunity was taken to pay brief visits to the Juma Musjid, the Rani Mosque, and Hathising's Temple. The Imperial guests evinced considerable interest in the beautiful carving at the Musjid, while from the roof, approached by a series of dark narrow stone staircases, a fine view of the extensive city of Ahmedabad was obtained. At the Rani Mosque the visit was even shorter, for beyond a little superior marble carving, two ordinary looking marble tombs, and a fine collection of bats in the dome of the mosque, there is little of interest to be seen. By the time Hathising's Temple was reached the light was beginning to wane, but nevertheless his Imperial Highness, the Governor, and some of the other visitors allowed their boots to be taken off, and their pedal extremities encased in the velvet boots provided by the man in charge, an operation which appeared to rather amuse the Imperial personage; and thus equipped, made a rapid inspection of the exquisite stone carving, the marble-carved deities with their strange glass eyes, some of whom occupy a large portion of the interior of the temple proper, while others pass their time in dark little houses with perforated brass doors and huge fastenings, which take up nearly the entire four sides of the quadrangle, in the centre of which the temple stands. At the close of the brief visit, and after the elongated velvet boots had been removed from the Imperial and Gubernatorial feet, the Governor and his guests made their way to camp, which was reached at dark. The camp, which is on the road to and not far from Shahibag, is pitched on a large open space, and replete with every comfort and convenience. It is approached by two gravelled drives, the tents on one side being arranged for the Imperial party and those on the other for the Governor and his staff, while at the far end stands a durbar tent, which provides a tastefully furnished drawing-room and dining apartment.

In the evening a large dinner party was given in honour of the Imperial guest, and was followed by a fête at the Kankaria Tank. The entertainment at the latter place was similar to that given to Lord Harris on the occasion of his first visit to Ahmedabad in November last, and at which time a description of the tamasha was given in these columns. The extensive tank, with its shelving banks closely studded with tiny white lights, the pretty little garden and summer-house in the centre of the lake, laid out in a similar manner, and the placid pool itself lighted up here and there with pyramids of buttees borne on rafts, was indeed a pretty spectacle, and one which will not easily be forgotten by the Russian visitors. His Imperial Highness, accompanied by the Governor, made his appearance shortly before half-past ten, and having passed through the arch at the entrance over which was placed the word "Welcome," wrought in buttees in the Russian characters, proceeded along the broad gravelled path leading from the mainland to the garden, and subsequently made his way to the top of the summer-house, from which he had a splendid view of the firework display proceeding on the banks of the lake. His Imperial Highness, who seemed much pleased with the entertainment, remained till nearly midnight, when he returned to camp.

It had been partially arranged that his Imperial Highness should visit Sirkhej this morning and some of the other sights in which Ahmedabad abounds if time permitted, but it was ultimately decided to abandon the idea, and his Imperial Highness rested in camp till four o'clock this afternoon, when, after taking leave of Lady Harris, he drove with H.E. the Governor to the railway-station, from which he left in a special train at 4.20 for Jedhpore, a salute of 21 guns being fired by the R.A. immediately the train began to move out of the station.

ALLAHABAD, JAN. 5.

After leaving Ahmedabad on Friday afternoon, H.I.H. the Czarewitch and party reached Jodhpore at eight o'clock the following morning, where they were met by the Maharaja, the Resident, and other officials of the Court. The camp at Jodhpore is unanimously declared one of the prettiest ever laid out. The Maharaja and the Czarewitch exchanged visits during the day. Yesterday was spent in boar-hunting. Ten boars were got, H.I.H. the Czarewitch bagging two. The party left Jodhpore last night very much pleased with the visit, and reached Ajmere at seven o'clock this morning.

ALLAHABAD, JAN. 7.

party went in different directions for Nilgai, and after dinner left for Jeypore.

Jeypore will be left about midnight on the 8th. One day will be spent at Ulwar, and Delhi will be reached at 7 A.M. on the 10th.

NATIVE POETRY IN ITS BEARING ON THE AGE OF CONSENT.

A "Native Observer" writes to an Indian contemporary:—

I will quote and interpret certain long familiar Slokams.

They say "Poetry and woman (Kavitha and Vanitha) must come to you of their own free will. Use force and you crush the flower to enjoy its beauty and fragrance."

Again in the Ramayan, Rama, the hero, says to his spouse Seetha, "Dear Seetha, here we are passing the hermitage in the forest, where we spent so much of our exile together so happily. Do you remember that you planted that jessamine with your own delicate hands near that tall mango-tree? See that jessamine has attained her age of adolescence, and, in the luxuriance of her efflorescence, voluntarily bends towards that mango-tree, courting his embrace." Don't these exquisitely poetical sentiments imply the Native feeling that woman should not be forced, but is sweetest when she comes to you of her own will?

Were the poets that so delicately expressed themselves versed in the law as embodied in the Indian Penal Code?

A QUEEN'S JEWELS.—A very curious action has just been concluded in the Court of the Recorder of Rangoon. The plaintiff was one of the wives of Mindoon Min, King of Burma, Thebaw's father and predecessor, and is known as the Limban Queen, and she claimed, as sole heiress of her daughter, the Sawlin Princess, to be entitled to a large amount of jewellery deposited with the defendants in 1878 under unusual circumstances. The Princess, it seems, was a great favourite with her father, King Mindoon Min, who made her large presents of gems and jewellery of all kinds. In 1878 Mindoon Min was on the point of death, and it was known that confusion in the palace would follow on that event. It was apparently foreseen that his successor, Thebaw, would, as in fact he did, murder most of his relatives at once, and while the King lay dying special measures for guarding the palace were taken. The Limban Queen and her daughter, the Sawlin Princess, dreading what the near future had in store for them, concerted measures to get the jewels of the latter out of the palace to a place of safety where they would be accessible in case of need later on. For this purpose they took into their confidence certain bazaar dealers who had access to the ladies' quarters to sell their wares, and by their aid succeeded in getting out all the jewels, packed to look like sweetmeats. These dealers and one Aga Khorasani, a Mahomedan merchant, were the defendants. They absolutely denied any deposit of the kind, but the Recorder found against them on the facts, and decided that about 3,000 precious stones, which were specified by weight and value in a list made at the time in the palace, and retained ever since by the Queen, had in fact been placed in their charge immediately prior to Mindoon Min's death and in anticipation of that event. Soon after the jewels were smuggled out in the manner above described, Mindoon Min died, Thebaw ascended the throne, and opened his reign with the murders of almost every one of his father's family. The Limban Queen and Sawlin Princess were spared, though the Queen's son was murdered, but were removed from their apartments and placed in strict confinement within the palace. The Princess emerged from this only to enter a convent, where she died a few months after, but the Queen, her mother, remained in prison until the British troops occupied Mandalay in 1885, when she was, of course, released. All this time she heard nothing of the jewels, for she had no opportunity of doing so, and obviously did not desire to have them returned. The dealers with whom they were deposited left Mandalay soon after Thebaw began to reign; but on her release the Queen inquired after them, and found them in Rangoon, when, as already stated, she was met by a blank denial that such jewels had ever been deposited with them. But here the Judge found against them, largely on the evidence that nine years ago, and three years after the deposit, one of the defendants had in his possession a large ruby, cut in the shape of a wild duck, which was described in the Queen's list as having been handed over to the defendants in the sweetmeat-boxes in 1878. A decree of restitution was therefore made against all the defendants except one, in regard to whom the action was held barred by the Statute of Limitations. Subsequent to her release from imprisonment the Queen was prevented from suing for five years in consequence of her poverty.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

(Present—LORD WATSON, LORD MORRIS, and SIR RICHARD COUCH.)

HAR NARAIN SINGH V. CHAUDHRAIN BHAGWANT KNAR AND ANOTHER.

This was an appeal from a decree of the High Court of the North-Western Provinces, Allahabad, of December 16, 1887, affirming a judgment of the Subordinate Judge at Agra.

Mr. J. H. A. Branson appeared for the appellant; Mr. Lumley Smith, Q.C., and Mr. Reginald Brown for the respondents.

The respondents in 1884 instituted a suit at Agra against the appellant, among others, for the recovery of certain valuable property of various kinds and for money. By agreement the matters in dispute went to arbitration, and the respondents were awarded, as against the appellant, 29,431 rupees payable in instalments. Both parties filed objections to the award, but the respondents afterwards withdrew their objection. On the hearing of the matter the Subordinate Judge, and afterwards the High Court, upheld the award, and gave judgment against the appellant with costs. The question raised by the appeal was whether, in the circumstances, the award was a valid one, it being alleged that it was not made within the period allowed and limited by the Court, and that the arbitrator resigned his office during the progress of the arbitration, and had no power to act further in the matter.

Their Lordships, in the result, said they would humbly advise her Majesty to reverse the judgments of both Courts below, and to direct the suit to be proceeded with. Neither party was to be entitled to costs in either Court below from and after the date of the first of the said judgments, but costs prior to that date would abide the issue of the cause. The respondents must pay the costs of the appeal.

HER Majesty's Government has decided that it is not expedient to admit foreigners to the privilege of acquiring land in so small a colony as Bermuda, which has been converted at vast expense into an Imperial fortress and coaling station, as the defences of the islands might be materially affected thereby. The local legislature is memorialising against this decision.

A RANGOON paper trusts that Burma may be spared from any fresh legislation as a result of the labours of the Factory Commission. The labouring classes in Burma, it states, have things so much their own way, and are so completely masters of the situation, that they certainly do not need any protection. Least of all, do they need protection in the matter of allotted periods of rest, for most of them already enjoy a superabundance of holidays.

THE Secretary of State for India has decided that no recovery will be made from the estate of a deceased officer in respect of any advance of pay drawn by him from the India Office on return to duty in India. Following the principle of this decision, no recovery should be made in similar cases from warrant officers, regimental warrant officers, non-commissioned officers or men, nor should recoveries be effected from the estates of those who may die on service, after receiving the advance sanctioned under the regulations to those proceeding on service.

BABU COURAGE.—There is a revelation in the opening sentences of a leader in a Native paper on the late Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal:—"Now that Sir Steuart Bayley has retired from the Indian Service and Sir Charles Elliott has been installed at the Belvedere we mean to express our honest convictions and conclusions in regard to the late Administration of Bengal." After criticising the Administration it says:—"We, for one, are not one of those who 'welcome the coming and speed the parting guest,' and we hope we shall not be judged severely for this our free expression of our mind. Like the midnight bell of the New Year's Eve we suddenly turn to welcome most heartily and unreservedly Sir Charles Elliott to the satrapy of Bengal, and we hope he will adopt a wise and sympathetic policy and earn for himself the proverbial Indian gratitude."

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1891.

THE INDIAN ARMY OF THE FUTURE.

IT was not likely that the recent reductions and changes in the Madras Army would be allowed to pass unquestioned by the Madras Press. The history of British rule in India shows how much credit was due to the Madras sepoys for their loyalty to their English masters during the early period of the English settlements—a loyalty which still remains unshaken—and for their great and unflinching courage on many battlefields. They fought well and faithfully for us, and it is but natural that the Madras Press should protest against the scheme which has now found favour in high quarters, by which the "fighting" Madras soldier is to be no longer recognised, except in the disguise of a policeman. The Madras Mail has been always the staunch upholder of the Madras Native army, and in its latest issue to hand to day it again sounds a note of warning against the recent military policy of the Government of India, which, it says, is tending to substitute an army of aliens for an army of its own subjects. It deprecates the attempt which is being made to confine the recruiting for the Sepoy army almost exclusively to the Punjab, Nepaul, Afghanistan and Beluchistan, for, though the first-named is our own province, and the last-named under our protection, the second and third are independent, and may some day be hostile. And it holds that if the Rajput, the Mahratta, and Tamil are no longer to be retained as soldiers, and the bulk of the British possessions in Hindustan are to be relegated to the same category as Lower Bengal, which does not furnish one recruit to the army, the Government of India is committing a grave mistake, and is "playing with edged tools." It points out that the two hundred millions of the population in British territories in India may, perhaps, furnish from ten to fifteen millions of men capable of bearing arms, but it declares that no reliance is to be placed upon them :—

"The Government is throwing away its chances in refusing to cultivate the whole field available for recruiting operations. The Russians, to take but one example from many, make no distinction between warlike and unwarlike races in their empire. They know well enough that a soldier can be made, though a general must be born. The Indian Government, on the contrary, wants none but born soldiers; and, on the other hand, tries to make all its officers into generals. It is now bent on making the same mistake that was made of old in the Bengal Army before the Mutiny, of restricting the military service to one or two classes of men. In those days it was Brahmins, Rajputs, Hindustanis, Musalmans, or none at all; now it is Sikhs, Goorkhas, and Pathans, or none at all. The Pandy whom it is now sought to get rid of was in those days the model of all military virtues; the Madras and Bombay Sepoys were only tolerated as an inefficient substitute for him. But the Mutiny too tardily opened the eyes of his admirers. He was probably a finer man and a better soldier than the average Madras or Bombay Sepoy, taking the latter all round. He was simply spoiled by bad management; and, above all, by being made too much of, and being told that he was the only Native soldier in India on whom the British Government could rely. The Punjabi has succeeded him as the object of admiration, and the idol of a former generation of Simla 'statesmen' is now to be pensioned off to allow of the enlistment of a superior soldier who is warranted to really possess all the military virtues with which Pandy was so long credited the monopoly. The Bengal Army had one fair chance of extinguishing the growing greatness of the Indian Empire, and that it failed in its blow was through no fault of its own; and now it is apparently on the high way to be favoured with another chance. A Sikh, or a Afghan, is a finer and a braver man than a Tamil or a Telugu. But the Government has millions of Tamil and Telugu subjects against thousands of Pathans and Sikhs. When England is engaged in a contest with Russia on the confines of Afghanistan she will not then think of restricting her recruiting to warlike races. She will want to treble the existing strength of the Native Army, and to put every race of all the heterogeneous masses of her subjects under contribution for men. It is not surprising that the strategists who thought that an army of seven thousand men was sufficient for the conquest and annexation of Upper Burma should imagine that the present Native Army is large enough for the defence of the Indian Empire. But in the former case thirty thousand men were in the end found none too many, and the error in the latter may be estimated in a similar proportion."

There is much that is deserving of attention in this argument, although we fear that it has been advanced more from a feeling of sentiment than from any stronger reason. Indeed, the writer boldly puts forward, towards the conclusion of his article, the sentimental basis. It will be comparatively easy, he says, in the future for a Russian secret agent, an emissary of a disaffected Native Prince, or an enemy of British rule in India, to say to British Native soldiers, "Look how the English have served the Poorbeas and Telingas; they needed them to conquer India, and now they have flung them aside. If they win the victory by your help they will serve you in the same manner. They think only of their pockets, and care nothing for loyalty and fidelity."

There was, perhaps, a time in the past history of our rule in India when such an argument would have carried weight, and would have been a danger to be guarded against; but we are strong in the belief that it is an argument which can have no power to-day. What would the writer have the Government of India to do? Surely not to seek for recruits merely from people who have numerical numbers to boast of, but no warlike spirit or qualities. On such grounds the Native Army might be drafted from Lower Bengal alone. We think it a wiser policy to seek for soldiers amongst those who have an aptitude for the soldier's calling. And we believe that in the day of trial, should it come, the Afghan and the Beloochee soldier in English ranks will prove as faithful to their salt as the Madras Sepoy. The better argument would be to show that the latter has not deteriorated as a fighting material. That is the crucial test to try the action of the Government by.

THE rumours which prevail of the opposition likely to be encountered by the expedition on the Kabul frontier are, the Lahore paper trusts, exaggerated. It is said that resistance by the offending section of the Miranzais may be taken for granted; that the other section beyond will probably join in; and that it is not impossible that in the general excitement the Afridis may also go on the warpath. This would be a big business; but the Afridis have so much to lose by breaking with the British Government that the last contingency ought to be most improbable.

SIR JAMES LYALL has found it necessary to rap the officers of the Forest Department in the Punjab over the knuckles for the slovenliness with which they prepare their district reports. A few years ago annual reports were abolished for triennial in the hope, not only that officers would be saved unnecessary worry, but that they would be able to furnish clearer and more reliable reports. Sir James Lyall, however, "regrets to notice that in the majority of cases this expectation has not been realised," and he tells us that, in perusing the review of the Conservator, he has been "struck with the numerous instances of negligence and inaccuracy brought to notice." District Officers, whether in the Forest Department or any other, should be bothered as little as possible with the preparation of returns; but in three years a district forest officer ought to be able to find time to do all that is asked of him in this respect, and to do it thoroughly.

INDIAN AFFAIRS.

(The Times.)

Sir Charles Elliott's reply, as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, to the Native deputation at Calcutta deserves attention, for it marks a stage in the official recognition of that growth of parties which forms the most remarkable feature of Indian society at the close of this century. A deputation of Native gentlemen had waited on the new Lieutenant-Governor to present a congratulatory address. Sir Charles Elliott deemed it right, at the outset of his administration, to declare his views in regard to popular movements in India. He said, according to the Times telegram, "he wished to correct the mistaken impression that the Government was hostile to the Congress. The Government had no bias for or against the Congress. They considered it a movement which private persons were perfectly free to follow and encourage; and, if there was any danger of the younger and more headstrong members being run away with by ideas which were too advanced for the present state of society, the Government trusted that such representatives of the varied sections of the community as the present deputation would moderate these opinions, with their sagacity and experience."

The importance of Sir Charles Elliott's remarks is to be found in the explanation of the Government attitude to the popular movement represented by the Congress—for that attitude has been, notwithstanding one or two exceptional episodes, consistent throughout—but in the recognition that a popular movement in India consists not of one, but of two or more parties, which are often essentially opposed to each other. We speak in England of the Congress movement in India, or of the Anti-Child-Marriage movement, or of the Widow Re-marriage movement. But the distance from which we here look at those movements blurs over the fact that each of them is made up of parties of many shades of opinion; parties which disclose differences almost in fundamentals as soon as the touchstone of legislation is applied. If this were not so superficial observers who fail to appreciate the genuine character of the new movements in India would be fully justified in misunderstanding what is now going on in that country. It is because those movements represent, and truly represent, many sections of the Indian population, and not merely a small class educated under special conditions, that they have been able to attain the dimensions which they have now reached, and to enforce that attention to their wishes which they are now receiving.

It will be found that this growth of parties is the really essential and permanent factor in Indian history during the past thirty years. The first stirrings of popular movements in India, under the awakening influences of British rule and of Western education, took a religious direction. From the Punjab to Calcutta, and from the North Western Provinces through Bombay and down to Southern Madras, various societies sprang up with a view to religious reform. Of these movements the best known representatives in England were the Rajah Rammohun Roy and Keshab Chandra Sen. But in every province of India some sabha or samaj was at work with a view to restoring the Hindoo faith to its primitive theistic purity. Such societies gradually diverged into more practical forms of activity, and began to deal with the social institutions and domestic life of the people. This divergence was distinctly marked during the last years of the East India Company, and give rise to the memorials, publications, and other forms of popular support which strengthened the Government in passing the Hindoo Widow Remarriage Act of 1856. The same form of social activity has again reached high-water mark in the agitation against child-marriage, with which Mr. Malabari's name is most prominently connected. It is only within the past ten years that popular movements in India have assumed their most recent development as organisations with a view to political or administrative reform.

Each of the three classes of popular movements in India under British rule—whether religious, social, or political—started with the idea of a return to older and uncorrupted institutions rather than with the projects for the introduction of new ones. Thus the religious reformers desired to restore the Hindoo faith to its theistic primitive purity in the Veda. The social reformers, in their support of the Hindoo Widow Remarriage Acts of 1856, made the same appeal back from modern or mediæval custom to the ancient sacred texts. The political or administrative reformers at first said little about the English elective system, but aimed at reviving rural representative institutions, on the basis of the Hindoo village commune and its council of five. It has thus happened that Indian popular movements, religious, social, and political, started on strictly conservative lines. The common central idea of them all at their commencement was the restoration of the old rather than the introduction of the new.

In order to appreciate the true character of the present movements in India, this common conservative basis must be clearly understood. But it must not be exaggerated. For, one by one, each class of reformers in India began to find that basis inadequate to modern needs. The religious reformers practically diverged into two bodies, one of which declared their principles to be founded on the Veda, while the other admitted side-lights from Christian inspiration and Western thought. The social reformers are now drawn up into two hostile arrays, one of which limits its programme to marriage or domestic reforms sanctioned by the earlier Hindoo texts; the other bases its demands on the ideas of modern civilisation, and the physical facts of child-life.

This was the state of parties with which Lord Lansdowne has to deal, in his attempt to regulate by British-made law the age of consent in India. On the one hand, he has to meet the plain facts of Indian child-life—facts scientifically set forth by Dr. Chunder Sen, of the Campbell Medical School in Calcutta, in his recent monograph "The Nubile Age of Females in India, Physiologically Treated." On the other hand, he has to encounter the opposition of those reformers who, while willing to advance to the utmost length that can be justified out of the sacred texts, resolutely refuse to move one step further, and who claim that the Government is solemnly pledged to the Hindoo races not to force changes upon their domestic law from outside.

The two most important representatives of this latter class are the Hon. Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter and the Rajah Peári Mohan Mukharji. The former gentleman, after a distinguished career at the Calcutta Bar, became one of Her Majesty's Judges of the High Court, and retired, having acted as Chief Justice of Bengal—the highest judicial office in India. Since his retirement from the Bench he has been appointed a member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. Throughout a long life of public usefulness Sir Romesh was identified as a fearless, although cautious, man of progress. The opposition of such a man in his place in Council, to the Bill for raising the age of consent is a fact that no Viceroy can afford to disregard. Yet, when the fullest weight has been allowed for the authority and judicial sagacity of the late acting Chief Justice, his opposition appears, from the telegrams, to be mainly based upon legal grounds. But in India, as elsewhere, lawyers differ. For, while the late acting Chief Justice of Bengal refuses to advance further than the practices sanctioned by the sacred Hindoo texts, the former Chief Justice of the great Hindoo State of Indore has published a pamphlet strongly advocating an advance far beyond what is contemplated by Lord Dufferin's measure. The late Chief Justice of Indore thus sums up his position, quoting the words of an eminent Brahmin statesman:—"The cause depends upon justice, upon the Hindoo Shastras, upon civilisation, upon common sense." The truth is that, however eminent may be the legal authorities opposed to raising the age of consent in the case of child brides, a mass of legal opinion in support of that change, including interpretations of the law by Brahmans of unquestionable learning, has grown up, and is now arrayed on the other side. It would be presumptuous for English laymen to attempt to pronounce between these conflicting set of opinions. Different developments of Hindoo law regulate the domestic life of the Hindoos in different provinces. It should not, however, be disguised that the opinion of the late acting Chief Justice of Bengal is the most authoritative single opinion which can be given on purely legal grounds

The opposition of the Rajah Peári Mohan Mukharji is more serious from a political point of view, for it means that the leaders of the high-caste section of the landed gentry in Lower Bengal are ranking themselves against the measure. The Rajah is still in the early prime of life. He received every advantage which English education could give, and he so amply profited by those advantages as to become one of the model landholders in Bengal. He, too, has been heretofore identified with the party of progress in India. One of the last acts of his father, a venerable Brahman, who had been present at the siege of Bhurtpore, in 1826-27, was to welcome the Indian National Congress, at Calcutta, exactly 60 years later. The present Rajah threw the weight of his authority into the same cause. In the Viceroy's Council he sprang forward to the leadership of the landed proprietors of Bengal, during the long discussions upon rural economics which preceded the passing of the last Tenancy Act. On his own estates he is known as a munificent promoter of education, female not less than male. Like his father before him, he throws open his unrivalled library of Indian literature to the public—a storehouse of books and periodicals which ranks first among the free libraries in the districts of Bengal. The fact that a great landowner so public spirited and so enlightened should find it his duty to oppose Lord Lansdowne's measure is, again, one which no Viceroy can disregard.

But precisely as with regard to the opposition of the late acting Chief Justice, it is a fact which must not be overestimated. There can be little doubt that the Rajah Peári Mohan does truly represent the conscientious scruples of the higher caste landowners in Bengal. There can be equally little doubt that his authority, both as a Brahman and as an enlightened advocate of Indian progress, will carry great weight. But against the authority of this influential and honoured Rajah of Lower Bengal, Lord Lansdowne has set the conflicting authority of influential and honoured Rajahs in other provinces. For example, the Rajah Harbans Singh, in a memorable address to the "Raises and gentlemen of the Punjab," started by declaring himself to be a Hindoo, indeed, "more than an Hindoo," whose work in life had lain almost exclusively among the Hindoos. Yet this Rajah would go not only as far as Lord Lansdowne proposes, but he practically accepts the much more advanced programme associated with the name of Mr. Malabari. The fact is that the Hindoo aristocracy, like the Hindoo doctors of law, are divided as to the question now before the Indian Legislature. Among both classes the weight of strictly orthodox authority is possibly against Lord Lansdowne's measure. But the majority of educated Hindoos are in favour of it; and the Mahomedan member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council declared that, having consulted the leaders of the Mussulman community, he was prepared to support it.

The present situation brings out strongly the fact indicated by Sir Charles Elliott's speech, that the reforming movement in India owes its impulse not to one but to several parties. All the gentlemen mentioned in this article have long been identified with the movement of progress in India. But as soon as an attempt is made to put their wishes into legislative language, the deep-seated differences between their views become apparent. Exactly the same thing took place last year in regard to the Indian political movement. The Congress had adopted a hasty paper constitution for all India, and Mr. Bradlaugh put it into the form of a draft Bill. Almost in a moment the conservative element in the Congress asserted itself. An aged statesman like the Rajah Sir Madhava Rao might send in his protest and resignation. But in such a juncture men in the prime of their vitality and conscious of their power, like the Rajah Peári Mohan Mukharji, do not resign—they control. The cut-and-dried elective scheme of the less cautious reformers was withdrawn, and a rupture was avoided. In the present case Lord Lansdowne has practically acted as arbiter between the more conservative and the more liberal sections of the social reformers. He has refused to go nearly as far as Mr. Malabari and his friends desire. At the same time, he has determined to go further than the more cautious reformers think right.

The explanation is that the Government rests its policy on mixed considerations, equally distinct from the philanthropic arguments on the one side or the purely legal arguments on the other. The old basis of Indian reform, as a return to older and better institutions rather than the introduction of new ones, has practically broken down. The Government accepts the necessity of adjusting the juristic conditions of female child-life, not to what was prescribed in the past, but according to what is right and needful in the present. The case is admirably set forth by Sir Steuart Bayley, in the State paper which he left behind when he laid down the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal last month. The legal aspect of the case he disposes of by admitting the religious obligation among the Hindoos that their daughters shall go through the marriage ceremony before reaching puberty; and, at the same time, by denying that the Hindoo religion contemplates actual marriage before that age. He then takes up the grievous physical objections to the latter practice, and the cruel price which has to be paid for it, alike by the immature mothers and their feeble offspring. He dwells on the growing disfavour with which that practice is regarded by the educated classes. He declares that in certain parts of Lower Bengal the practice exists on a large scale, and he asks, as a remedy, that the age of consent shall be raised by law to twelve years as between husband and wife, and to fourteen years in other cases. It is a matter of regret that Lord Lansdowne did not see his way to adopt in its entirety this fair and moderate proposal.

RUPEE PAPER FROM A CONTINENTAL POINT OF VIEW.

The Financial Times has received from Mr. Ottomar Haupt the following exposition of the rupee question, which is now of general interest both in Europe and America.

Paris, 26th January, 1891.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "FINANCIAL TIMES."

SIR,—After the great trouble I had taken, in the course of last year, to explain in all its details the intrinsic value of the Indian Silver Loans, and the great chances they were carrying along with them, as well for speculative purchases as for investments, I scarcely thought I would be called upon to take once more the pen up again in their defence. But the excellent article you have published yourself on the subject lately, and the desire expressed by you to get a view of the ideas prevailing on the Continent as to the appreciation of Rupee Paper there, engage me to revert to it to-day, be it only to destroy the erroneous assertions spread in the Press of the three nations, who have for the past six months taken so lively an interest in the stock.

Digitized by Google

For not only the French commercial and financial community, but the German and even the Austrian Bourses have madeg reat purchases of Rupee paper, that is to say, up to a certain date, exclusively in the Four and a-Half per Cents., which, in point of fact, form the matter of your comment as well. But allow me this remark, it is not this stock which ought to be recommended now; on the contrary, it should be avoided; and, on the Continent, everybody has, indeed, exchanged it already against the Four per Cents.

For this is how the matter stands. The said loan, which you quote at 84 in London, is called in for repayment at par on the 15th September, 1893—that is to say, holders will have to get it cashed in India at 100. Now, at the price of 84, which you mention, and at an exchange of 1s. 6½d., which likewise forms, in your article, the basis of calculation, the Indian parity would work out at nearly 108, and as much as 8 per cent. would therefore be lost in the shape of depreciation of the Indian currency, against a set-off of a-half per cent. per annum gained on the interest. To tell you the truth, I cannot even conceive how the 4½ per cent. loan can be quoted as high as 84 in the London market. To me and to others here it appears to be a draft on India due on Sept. 15th, 1893, and carrying interest at the rate of 4½ per cent. along with it. What the Indian exchange at maturity will be nobody can say. You dwell at some length on the future of silver, and you come to the conclusion that the actual price of the metal must be considered, so to say, a normal one.

With you, I admit, a price of, say, 48d. per ounce for silver and a sight exchange of 1s. 6½d. per rupee on India. What I ask, now, will be the position of a holder of 4 per Cent. Rupee Paper in the near future? Why, at 82, or if interest alone play the main part in the calculation, more correctly at about 82½, against 84 for the Four and a-Half Cents., the investment will yield him nearly 5 per cent. in silver at par, or nearly 3¾ per cent. in sterling at the present rate of the Indian Exchange. Should silver once more reach the price of 54½d., quoted in August last, the interest would come to 4⅝ per cent.; on the other hand, should it fall to the lowest level known, to 42d., the income in sterling would still be 3⅜ per cent. Even then it would represent a better investment than India Three and a-Half per Cent. Sterling Loan, which you quote at 109, and which, therefore, only yields 3¼ per cent.

But, suppose the worst comes to the worst, silver tumbles down another fifteen or twenty per cent. and rupees, as some writers will have it, are according to the price of the metal intrinsically not worth more than, say, one shilling, what would the position of things then be?

Why, simply this: The English Government would never allow the unit of the monetary system of its great Colony to be depreciated to an extent which would be tantamount to a complete demolition of the whole Indian currency and to all the wealth appertaining to or built upon it. Long before such an event might have to be anticipated the English Government would step in and stop the coinage of silver in the Indian Mints on private account. It would, by doing so, simply follow in the footsteps of other nations which have had recourse to the same measure, especially Austria-Hungary. It likewise had adopted the single silver standard, and in 1879, when the metal had seen its worst days, it suspended the coinage of silver florins generally, reserving to the Government alone the right of transforming the output of their proper mines into money. As is well-known, from that date the Austrian currency was all of a sudden disconnected from the very metal its monetary system was based upon, but an improvement of as much as 20 per cent. took place in the valuta of the country, and the same effect would be produced on the Indian currency.

Far from creating a panic, such a tremendous fall of silver—if unforeseen circumstances should bring it about—would rouse the action and the intervention of the Government, and thereby do a deal of good, as far as the Indian Exchange and the yield of the Rupee Loan were concerned. But, as I said before, I quite share your opinion that silver is not likely to go down much below 44d., while a strong improvement in the course of time is even more likely. Anyhow, holders of Four per Cent. Rupees have nothing to fear, and, all things considered, the stock is as good a speculation in the long run as a safe investment for all times.—I am, &c.,

REPORT OF THE FACTORY COMMISSION.

The Rast Gaftar remarks:—The Factory Commission's report is published with commendable promptness, and it will generally be regarded satisfactory in this country, as, in fact, everywhere outside Lancashire. We hope it will put a stop to the fallacies, exaggerations, and pseudo-philanthropy of persons interested in the Lancashire industry. The Commissioners recommend the raising of the age of juveniles from the age of twelve to fourteen, limiting their hours of work to nine per day. The half-time system for juveniles enables them to evade the Act by working half-day in one mill, and the remaining half in another. The English Factory Act recognises of the class of young persons as standing between juveniles and adults, in order that the transition from the light hour of juveniles to the heavy full-time work of adults may not be abrupt. In this country the transition period from boyhood to maturity is neither so marked nor so slow as in cold climates, and consequently there is here no great necessity for any special provision in regard to young persons. The Commissioners unanimously favour Sunday closing of the mills. All the mill-hands who have given evidence before the Commission have earnestly prayed for Sunday rest. There is reason to believe that if the Commission had been permitted to take the evidence of masters as well as of men there would not have been any serious conflict of evidence on this subject. The Commissioners arrive at the deliberate conclusion that it would be a great calamity if, by any injudicious recommendation or unnecessary restrictions, the prosperity of the textile industries of India were endangered. Over this sentiment Mr. Holt-Hallet, and others who are like-minded with him, may pause and ponder. We should think that Government have now sufficient materials before them to work into a legislative enactment, and to pass their long-deferred Factory Act.

The Kaiser-i-Hind observes:—The celerity with which the Factory Commission has submitted its report to the Government of India is most commendable. It bespeaks well of the energy of its individual members and the complete grasp they had of the subject which they had to investigate. It is also clear on the face of the report that the enlightened criticism of the Press has its educating influence on those deliberations. There is a complete absence of that personal prepossession or prejudice on the subject which the more prominent members are well known to entertain. In justice to them, it must be acknowledged that the Commissioners have dealt with the various questions in a manner remarkable as much for the spirit of fairness as for the strong common sense displayed in their treatment. With a singleness of purpose they have consciously endeavoured to weigh impartially in the scales the evidence of the operatives themselves and the evidence recorded by the two previous Factory Commissions on behalf of the mill-owning interests.

The Gujerati says:—The Factory Commission which was appointed in September last by the Government of India, or rather the Secretary of State, at the instigation of the philanthropic merchants of Lancashire, commenced its work in Bombay on Oct. 4, and then visited Ahmedabad, Cawnpore, and Calcutta. It held 28 meetings, visited 34 factories, and examined 96 operatives, 69 of whom were selected by the Commissioners themselves from among the workmen actually employed at the time of their visit to the different factories. The Commissioners seem to have set about their work in a thoroughly businesslike spirit, as is amply borne out by the fact that they were able to present their report within a month and a-half, as required by the resolution constituting the Commission. The report is, on the whole, so satisfactory that people who looked upon the constitution of the Commission and its method of investigation, with a good deal of suspicion, will find to their agreeable surprise that the recommendations therein made are of an extremely moderate and reasonable character, and have received almost the unanimous approval of all the members on the Commission.

The Indu Prakash observes:—Few Commissions within our memory have made their inquiry, finished their report, published it, and circulated it with such rapidity as the Factory Commission has done. The resolution appointing the Commission was issued on September 25th; the Commission began its work on October 4th, submitted its report on November 12th, and here we have early in December the whole report and evidence published in full. The resolution of the Government is yet to follow. Meanwhile the public is in possession of the materials on which to form their judgment. There were six issues specifically referred to the Commission. The Commission return categorical replies. We shall content ourselves for the present with observing that the Factory Commission has performed the work entrusted to it with commendable promptness, and furnishes a praiseworthy example to like workers in the future.

On SATURDAY, January 31, will appear,

THE FIRST NUMBER OF THE ANTI-JACOBIN.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF POLITICAL AND SOCIAL AFFAIRS.

Under the Editorship of Mr. FREDERICK GREENWOOD, by whom the PALL MALL GAZETTE was conducted from its foundation in 1864 till 1880, and the ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE from 1880 till 1888.

The spirit in which this journal will be carried on is sufficiently indicated by its title. There is no pretence, and there could be no hope, of emulating the brilliant little sheet for which Canning, Pitt, and Frere wrote; and it is quite understood that to take the name of such a journal in our day is an invitation to humorous and satirical remark. But Jacobinism did not expire with Canning's wit. It has made a second appearance in English politics; and the signs of the times declare that it is likely to thrive for many a day on the natural impatience of the poor, a kindly but erring sentimentalism, and the corruptions and confusions of the older parties in the State. The first purpose of the New Journal will be to fight against this intrusion in all its disguises; and therefore no more appropriate name can be found for the paper than THE ANTI-JACOBIN.

Political affairs, however, will occupy a comparatively small space in the pages of THE ANTI-JACOBIN; which, it may be well to add, will be written in no high Tory vein, but in the spirit of true Liberalism. THE ANTI-JACOBIN will have much to say about all that interests, amuses, or scandalises society—that does it good or that does it harm.

THE ANTI-JACOBIN will be a handsome sheet, not unlike the weekly reviews in appearance. But the price will not be 6d. A variety of considerations have decided the Editor to try the experiment of publishing a first-rate weekly Review at a price which, while it will content the richer classes, will not be prohibitive to any member of the middle class. The price of THE ANTI-JACOBIN will be TWOPENCE.

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA,

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, une 23, 1872.

The Calcutta R view has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

JEOPARDY OF LIFF, THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, "ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.

"A DEVONSHIRE LADY.—Jan. 25, 1889."

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose Without it Life is a Sham!—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); one cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced cases they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm."

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL.

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . . It is the sort of book that every mess in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 17th January; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 15th January; and from Bengal to the 14th January.

H.E. THE VICEROY had recovered from his fever, but was suffering from a severe cold, and when the mail left Calcutta he had gone to Barrackpore for a change.

THE MARCHIONESS OF LANSDOWNE and a small party from Government House dined with their Highnesses the Maharajah and Maharani of Kuch Behar on Jan. 12th.

THE State Ball at Government House, Calcutta, on Jan. 14th, was a brilliant function.

THE CESAREWITCH was accorded an enthusiatic reception at Lahore, where he spent several busy days.

A SPECIAL day's racing was to be provided in Calcutta on Jan. 31st for his benefit.

A DISASTROUS fire took place in Poona on Jan. 9th, when eighty houses, besides fourteen timber depôts, were burnt. About five hundred persons have been rendered homeless.

THE staff for the Black Mountain Field Force are chiefly drawn from the Rawalpindi Division. The troops will number between 7,000 and 8,000.

THE Miranzai Field Force was expected to cross the frontier on Jan. 15th, while the Black Mountain Field Force will begin their little campaign on March 1st.

It is understood that the opening of the Khojak tunnel will be performed by H.E. the Commander-in-Chief in March.

IT is announced in the Gazette of India that the Secretary of State for India has accorded sanction to the Revised Estimate, amounting to Rs. 15,39,867, of the cost of constructing the high level line in the Bolan Pass between Hirok and Kotal.

MR. O'CALLAGHAN, during his tour in Burma, will examine the alignment of the Katha branch of the Saigain-Mogaung Railway, with a view to the work on that section being commenced from Katha itself.

No magazine rifles will reach India before the conclusion of the current financial year, but 75,000 Martinis will be received to complete the re-armament of the Native Army.

THE committee appointed to consider the question of simplifying the system of State railway accounts has completed its work. A preliminary report embodying suggestions for discussion by railway officials will be sent in shortly by Mr. Macdonald, who then proceeds on furlough to England.

A TELEGRAM from Fort Tregear states that Captain Hutchinson and a party of the 2nd Goorkhas arrived at Bowaria on January 10th, having met with no opposition. The last complete submission has been made, in spite of all the boasting, the fine has been paid in full, and the captives surrendered.

MR. T. C. WILSON, Settlement Officer, Jubbulpore, has been transferred to Burma to take up the appointment of Director of Agriculture there.

BABU CHUNILAL PANAHLAL, a wealthy jeweller of Bombay, has offered to Government a lakh of rupees for a sanitarium for the Jain community.

IT is likely that formal sanction will shortly be announced to a considerable rise in the pay of the Silladar Cavalry all over India, the monthly stipend of all ranks entitled to draw compensation for dearness of forage being increased by Rs. 4. Sowars will thus draw Rs. 31, instead of Rs. 27.

THE pay of the Silladar Cavalry of the Bombay Presidency, which is already Rs. 30 per month, will be raised to Rs. 31.

UNDER the provisions of Article 7 of the convention between Great Britain and China, relating to Sikkim and Thibet, Mr. Paul, Deputy Commissioner, Darjeeling, is appointed to be Commissioner on the part of the British Government for purposes of Articles 4, 5 and 6 of the said Convention.

MR. HART, who will assist Secretary Chi on this Commission, is now on a visit to Calcutta, but returns to Darjeeling shortly, thence probably going to Gnatong to meet Secretary Chi.

SECRETARY CHI is, however, reported in a weak state of health, so his journey from Lhassa to Gnatong may be delayed for some time. He could scarcely cross the passes into Sikkim just now, as snow lies ten feet deep.

THE projected running of regular weekly special trains between Bombay and Calcutta, to leave the former place five hours after the arrival of the mail steamer, has again been revived. The Postal Department have made proposals to the several railways concerned, and in a few weeks hence their replies should be received.

THE Delhi-Kalka Railway will not be opened for traffic until the 1st of March.

MR. HILL, Officiating Inspector-General of Forests, will go on from Burma to the Andamans, where the exploitation of valuable Padouk timber is slowly but surely progressing.

THE Secretary of State has directed the Government of India to sanction the payment to Mr. Robinson, late Chief Engineer, Madras Railway, the equivalent of one year's salary by way of recognition of his long and honourable services. He had been for thirty-one years with the company.

THE following precedent has been established since the last Black Mountain Expedition:—Colonel Lockhart and Major-General Elles have complete political control, through civil officers, and will be attached to each force.

MR. BARKER and Mr. Thomas will be in charge of the telegraph with the Expedition. A line will be laid from Abbottabad, vid Oghi, to Darband, and thence to Hairpur.

CAPTAIN J. C. TYLER, R.E., who was sent on special duty to Gilgit to examine the defensive position marked out by Colonel (now Sir William) Lockhart, has returned to India, and is now engaged in writing his report at Simla. All is perfectly quiet in the Khanates beyond the Kashmir frontier.

MR. A. W. FANSHAWE will return to India, and resume charge of the postal Department in April, when the present officiating Director-General will proceed to Vienna as the representative of the Government of India at the Postal Conference. Some extremely important questions of postal finance are to be discussed at the Conference, where Mr. Kisch may be trusted to safeguard Indian interests with judgment and ability

COLONEL A. M. BRANDRETH, Principal Thomason Civil Engineering College, Rorki, retires in May on his attaining the age of fifty-five, but possibly will take leave three months prior.

COLONEL F. D. M. BROWN, V.C., present officiating Superintending Engineer, Agra Circle, will be his successor.

A RANGOON telegram states that the Thetta village was attacked by the Goorkhas on Jan. 2nd. Lieutenant B. R. Jones, R.E., Burmah Sappers and Miners, and two Goorkhas, were killed. The Chins submitted, and a fine was inflicted. The force then returned to Haka.

THE Nizam was presented with a daughter on Jan. 20th last, but the child only lived two days.

ADMIRAL FREEMANTLE left Calcutta for Rangoon on board the Boadicea on Jan. 11th.

THE Poona Saavajanik Sabha has sent a memorial to Government, asking that the additional impost of eight annas by which the salt tax was increased three years ago should be removed when the next budget arrangements are made.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL MELLISS proceeds to Kattywar to inspect the Bhownugger and Junaghad forces.

THE Bank of Madras has declared a dividend for the past half-year of four and a half per cent.

THE Honourable Sir A. Scoble formally introduced the Merchandise Marks Amendment Bill in the Viceregal Council on Friday, Jan. 10th.

THE Bill to amend the Hindu marriage laws by raising the protected age from ten to twelve years was also introduced in the Legislative Council. H.E. the Viceroy spoke at length upon the objects of Government, and the Bill was ordered to be printed.

THE following notice appears in the Gazette of India :—"His Excellency the Governor-General in Council desires to place on record his sense of the loss which the public service has sustained by the sudden and premature death, on Jan. 1st, of Mr. E. J. Sinkinson, Secretary to the Government of India in the Finance and Commerce Department. Mr. Sinkinson entered the department in June, 1877, and for the last three years he had held the responsible office of Secretary to the Government of India in that department. The Government confidently anticipated for him a future career of personal distinction and public utility, and deeply regrets his untimely death."

NOTES.

IT will be seen from the papers to hand by the Overland Mail, and by the telegrams of latest date, that public opinion in India has been chiefly exercised with regard to the Bill which the Government of India has brought in for the protection of Indian child-wives. The measure has not met with the opposition which some of the very orthodox Hindu Conservatives declared would assail it. The Native Press which has any position amongst the educated classes is rather in favour of it, and Mr. A. O. Hume has done good service to the Government in committing his friends of the National Congress to its adaption. We have referred to the action of the Government of India in another column.

MR. CAINE may be a prophet having honour in his own country, contrary to the usual experience of prophets, but he appears to be having a hard time of it in India amongst the penmen of the Press. He and the Madras Mail and Times of India have been giving each other something a little stronger than "the retort courteous." The former journal says :—"We do not regard Mr. W. S. Caine as a serious politician, though we may admit that he is animated by good intentions. He has the appearance of a man in the enjoyment of excellent physical strength, but the greatest of great minds may be occasionally overstrung, and the memory then proves unreliable. Mr. Caine's memory has been overburdened, and hence, perhaps, it is that, although he is, by his own account, a constant reader of the Madras Mail when he is in England, he is unable to quote its name."

THE Times of India devotes a leader to the same effect, and the Indian Daily News winds up the journalistic amenities :—"Mr. Caine has been exchanging compliments with the Times of India, and appears to have had the best of it in a similar sense to that in which Mr. Parnell had the best of the competition in political Billingsgate between himself and the supporters of Sir John Pope Hennessy at Kilkenny. Mr. Caine makes no secret of the fact that he is pleased to entertain a very poor opinion of Anglo-Indian newspapers and their editors—for the patent (and no doubt to Mr Caine, sufficient) reason that the Anglo-Indian papers and their editors do not think very highly of Mr. Caine."

CONSIDERING the rubbish that is often written about Russian spies in India, it is not, thinks the Saturday Evening Journal, a matter for surprise that some Native journals have detected the prospect of an early change of rulers in this country, as a result of the Czarewitch's tour. When the rulers of European nations pay visits to each other on the Continent, there is much speculation as to the why and wherefore ; and in India, therefore, where there can be only one possible object, what need even for speculation. Besides, it is always pleasant to impress the necessity for cultivation the love of the people, by dangling the terrors of foreign invasion. To all sober-minded persons, however, the Russian Prince's tour is nothing more than a very gratifying sign of that increasing international cordiality which is, by very slow degrees, lessening the likelihood of war over all the world. Supposing it to be possible, moreover, that the Russian Goverment is ignorant of the true position of affairs in India, what more likely to open its eyes than the ample evidence which will everywhere be afforded to the young Prince of the peace and contentment that prevail, and the cordial relations that exist between the ruling Power and the independent Native States. There is not a State which will be visited by the Czarewitch which will not show, by the cordiality of the hospitality it extends to him, the progress it has made under British rule.

THE Congress of 1890, says the Pioneer, has made one discovery, which has, perhaps, more foundation than most of its novelties. India is governed by the telegraph wire from the India Office. Then let us go, they say, to the other end of the telegraph wire and help the Secretary of State to put right-minded messages upon it. The proposal was received with acclamation, and a resolution passed for the assembling of a Congress of at least 100 members in London in 1892. The prophets who have no honour in their own country mean to go across the black water to get it, and they have taken a first step in supporting the Social Congress in their resolution that the journey on the dark ocean ought not to have any effect on the social standing of a high caste passenger, whatever it may have on his personal feelings at the time.

Reis and Rayyet says, warmly :—"This is what that unlicked cur with a leonine prenomen, Ashburner, writes of our poor sainted widows :—'The real reason why the Indian widow declines to be reformed by philanthropic legislation is that she is a chartered libertine. She is allowed greater latitude of conduct. Society is very tolerant of her frailties ; they are ignored and condoned, and she is by no means inclined to relinquish the Bohemian freedom of an amateur member of the demi-monde.' The foul-fancied, well-clothed Pict ! And this is what comes of seeking foreign interference in our social and domestic institutions. Certainly, it is writings like these that put back the dial-hand of progress far more than irrational conservatism. These unauthorised sharp-shooters—brigands of controversy—simply make for anarchy without helping in the war. They cause pain, but do not contribute to the struggle."

THE last report on the Administration of Upper Burma contains further information about the oil and coal-fields, the working of which has not yet been taken in hand on a large scale. Petroleum is found in the four districts of Magwe, Minbu, Pokoko, and Myingyan, all in the Southern Division. Magwe is richest in oil, as within its limits lie the Yenanyoung wells. The oil-bearing tract is about eighty square miles in area. This has been carefully surveyed and mapped out into blocks of one square mile each, which will be leased on application to the Government.

REGARDING the coal-fields, the Upper Chindwin District and the country between the Myittha and Yu rivers have been examined. The total area is 175 square miles. The seams are officially described as numerous, though the majority of them are of small thickness, but few exceeding three feet and one only measuring ten feet. The coal, however, is of first-rate quality, hard and bright, and makes excellent fuel. A syndicate has been granted a lease of six square miles, and will begin mining this cold weather.

THE recent visit of the Indian Marine Lascar-manned troopship Clive to Portsmouth recalls, says a military contemporary, the dispute between the home and Indian Governments as to who should pay the cost of the necessary repairs to the Jumna, which ended in this comparatively fine, and certainly comfortable, trooper being left to rot in Portsmouth dockyard. The short-sighted policy of this course is now very apparent, as not only is there the loss of the Jumna to be reckoned with, but the cost of employing ships belonging to the Indian Marine, which will soon of itself mount up to the sum required to rehabilitate the Jumna, while the miserable accommodation afforded by the Clive and her kindred contrasts very unfavourably with the interior arrangements of the former ship. It is not too late now to take the Jumna in hand, and the recent breakdown of the Crocodile, and her consequent elimination from the trooping programme, accentuate the necessity of not being short-handed in this direction.

MR. J. M. MACLEAN, M.P., will take an early opportunity in the House of Commons to move a resolution in reference to the report of the Indian Factory Commission. He considers that the recommendations are not nearly so strong as the evidence justifies, and he complains that such as they are, they have not been acted upon. His object is to get such hours of labour fixed as were agreed upon at the Berlin Conference last year.

WE can quite believe that the delegates of the Indian National Congress regret the death of Mr. Bradlaugh. They thought to make a cat's paw of him, and for a time succeeded. But there is every reason to think that had he lived he would have outgrown the errors about India by which he was at first led away—as he outgrew other errors of older and stronger growth.

He would have found out the Babú.

COLONEL HASTED, R.E., has consented to read a paper before the Indian Section of the Society of Arts on the Persian project on the 30th of April. Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff, who as Governor of Madras took a great interest in this important engineering scheme, will preside. The next lecture of the Indian Section on "The Economic Development of Siam" takes place on Thursday, the 26th inst., at half-past four. The lecturer, Mr. Robert Gordon, M.Inst.C.E., who has recently returned from Bangkok, will probably have something to say respecting the alleged intrigues of Germany in the Malay Peninsula. Sir Charles Bernard, K.C.S.I., of the India Office, will preside. Mr. S. Digby, Secretary Indian Section, Society of Arts, Adelphi, W.C., asks us to state that he will always be glad to supply cards of admission to any of our readers who may be desirous of attending these interesting and instructive meetings.

THE services of Lieut. H. W. Graham, 5th Lancers, have been placed at the disposal of the Egyptian Government for duty with the Egyptian Army.

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, JAN. 30.

The three columns of the Miranzai force effected a junction at Gwada on Wednesday.

Owing to the severe winter in Beloochistan, the progress of the Khojak tunnel has been impeded, and it is feared that the opening of it will be somewhat delayed.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 1.

The opposition to the Age of Consent Bill, which threatened to cause a split in the ranks of the Congress party, has received a serious if not a crushing blow by the publication of Mr. Hume's letter mentioned in my telegram of January 28th. Although he states expressly that he writes in his private capacity, and not as Secretary of the Congress, still his influence with that party is so great, and his denunciation of the social custom which Sir A. Scoble's Bill aims at is so unsparing, that the leading agitators for political privileges will probably hesitate before they identify themselves with the opponents of the Bill. The vernacular Press throughout Bengal continues to attack the measure, but during the last few days nothing more has been heard of the proposed mass meeting to protest. On the other hand, an advertisement has appeared calling on Hindoos to sign the petition in favour of the Bill. A meeting of the Mahratta community of Bombay has passed a resolution approving of the measure. The opinion of the Bengalee pundits, that the Scriptures treat neglect to consummate marriage on the first indications of puberty as a deadly sin, has been met by the opinions of equally learned pundits in other parts of India, who either deny the position altogether, or assert that the sin is a venial one, carrying no worse penalty than a trifling fine. On the whole, the prospects of the Bill passing quietly look much more hopeful than a week ago.

As some of the Congress organs are attempting to make political capital out of Colonel Ardagh's recent letter to Mr. Hume by representing it as an official recognition of the movement by the Government of India, it may be well to point out that it amounts to nothing of the kind. Had it been an official act of the Governor-General in Council it would have been communicated through the regular official channel—namely, the Secretary of the Home Department. As a matter of fact, it is simply a letter from the Viceroy's private secretary explaining why Government servants should not participate in political meetings.

A committee of engineers will shortly assemble at Calcutta to report on the condition of the new docks at Kidderpore. The Indian and Bengal Governments and the Chamber of Commerce will each nominate a representative.

The annual report of the Bombay Chamber of Commerce states that the Chamber has informed the Government that it approves generally of the recommendations of the Factory Commission, with the exception of the suggestion that in some cases women be allowed to work more than eleven hours.

The news of the death of Mr. Bradlaugh has been received with unfeigned regret throughout India. The Congress Press describe it as a national calamity, while the organs of the opposition party pay a tribute of respect to his ability and honesty.

THE AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 1.

The Pioneer states that the Ameer's recent severe illness was due to the fact that the Native doctors insisted on bleeding him freely when the gout had reached an acute stage. They took a large quantity of blood from him in a few hours, thereby reducing him to a state of extreme exhaustion.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 1.

There is no change in the condition of affairs in the Chin country. The columns which will occupy Thetta have not yet started. The last of the reinforcements for Captain O'Donnell's force has left Bhamo. It was intended that Captain Smith, R.A., who is senior to Captain O'Donnell, should take command of the whole force, but it was finally decided that Captain O'Donnell should remain in command.

A body of Kanlaing's followers has appeared in the Sikawsin district, south-east of Bhamo, and has attacked a village. The body is likely to give some trouble.

The Rangoon Gazette states that Lord Lamington has joined at Muangsat Mr. Archer's party of the Siam Boundary Commission, which was about to proceed eastward towards Me-Kong Valley. Lord Lamington intends trying to reach Tonquin when the commission breaks up.

The construction and improvement of roads throughout the province will, it is understood, form a prominent feature of Sir A. Mackenzie's administration. Means of communication are sadly wanted in most of the districts.

The Rangoon Times states that during the 65 years that we have held the Araccan province only 46 miles of metalled roads have been constructed in that district.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

THE CZAREWITCH'S TOUR.

(Bombay Gazette, Jan. 17.)

The special train from Jodhpore arrived at Ajmere at 7.30 on Monday morning. There were present on the platform, to meet his Imperial Highness, Colonel Trevor, Governor-General's Agent, Colonel Norman Stewart, commanding the Merwarra Battalion, Colonel Loch, Principal of the Mayo College, Colonel Biddulph, Mr. Kemball, and others. The party drove to the Residency and breakfasted, and at about 11.30 the Czarewitch drove round the town, and afterwards visited the Mayo College. The afternoon was spent in duck shooting on Saugor Lake by the Residency; a fair bag was made. In the evening there was a dinner at the Residency.

Tuesday morning was spent quietly, it being Christmas Day according to the old style still observed by the Russians. After lunch, at about two o'clock, the party went in different directions for a drive for nilgai. None, however, were bagged, only cows being seen; but a mixed bag of smaller game was secured. After dining at the Residency the party left for the station, and went to Jeypore next day.

The whole party is enjoying the Rajputana visit and the scenery and sport immensely. All the members are keen sportsmen, and a prettier place than Ajmere, especially all round the Residency, would be hard to find. Jeypore was to be left about midnight on Thursday, one day will be spent at Ulwar, and Delhi will be reached at 7 o'clock this morning.

The Czarewitch arrived at Ulwar at 8 o'clock on Friday, being received at the station by his Highness the Maharaja and Colonel Abbott, the Political Agent. A guard-of-honour of the Ulwar State troops was at the station. The Maharaja escorted his Imperial Highness to the summer palace, which had been prepared for the reception of the guests, and his Highness then took leave. The Czarewitch with a few members of his suite and Prince George are living in the palace, the remainder of the party being in tents pitched in the palace grounds. It is an exceedingly pretty and well-kept place. After breakfast the usual ceremonial visit was paid by his Highness the Maharaja, and returned later by the Czarewitch. In the afternoen the Czarewitch and most of the others went shooting. His Imperial Highness shot a fine black buck.

In the evening the Maharaja entertained the Czarewitch and suite and the Resident at dinner in the summer palace, and there was a display of fireworks afterwards.

On Saturday morning the party breakfasted at nine o'clock and started at ten o'clock in carriages for Silisir, about eight miles distant. Here the party mounted shooting elephants, and after going four miles a beat was arranged for howdah shooting for six guns, viz., the Czarewitch, Prince George of Greece, Prince Kotchubey, Prince Obolensky, Captain Volkoff and Prince Bariantinsky. It proved the unluckiest day yet had. The beat was in a line, about four miles long and only two or three shots at nilgai were had. After lunch at three o'clock a drive was arranged for sambhur, but the luck was no better, and the party returned to Ulwar, which was reached at 7.30, having had their first blank day. The party leaves soon after midnight for Delhi, which will be reached at eight o'clock on Sunday morning.

The old station at Delhi was reached before seven on Sunday morning, and the usual halt was made for tea. About an hour later the train steamed into Delhi. There were present on the platform inside the station Major-Gen. Sir John Hudson and staff, the Commissioner, Col. Gray, Col. Pennington, Commanding at Delhi, Captain Wilcocks, Station Staff Officer, and others. A guard of honour was furnished by the Royal Irish Fusiliers. Having inspected the guard his Imperial Highness proceeded to his carriage, the staff driving in a drag, both carriages being drawn by teams of artillery horses. The party drove straight to Ludlow Castle. After breakfast the party drove round the town, and went some distance on foot. A drive along the Ridge had been arranged for the afternoon, but was postponed, and the afternoon was spent quietly. A small dinner party was held, those present being Sir John Hudson, Col. Gray, Commissioner, Colonel Pennington, and a few others.

The special train was received at Jeypore station at seven o'clock on Wednesday morning by the Maharaja, the Resident, Colonel Peacock, Dr. Hendley, and other officials. A start was made in carriages, in the usual order, the party driving as far as the city. Everyone alighted here and mounted elephants, which formed into procession and marched through the city. Elephant riding was much appreciated, especially by those who had never tried it before, strongly reminding them of a sea voyage. Leaving the city, the party again took their seats in the carriages, and drove to the Residency. The Maharaja here was received by his Imperial Highness, on a formal visit. He sat a short time, and atar and pan having been distributed, the Maharaja drove away to his palace. During breakfast news was received of a kill last night, about ten miles away, by a tiger. A formal return visit had already been arranged, but the intended visit to Ambar in the afternoon was postponed. At eleven o'clock his Imperial Highness and suite drove to the palace on a return visit to the Maharaja, and then returned to the Residency, changed into shooting clothes, had lunch at 12.30, and started at about one o'clock for the ground on which the tiger had been marked down. The place was reached after about a four miles' drive and six miles' ride, and was near where the Duke of Connaught on a previous occasion bagged a tiger. Three machans had been built at right angles in the general direction of the beat. The left was occupied by Prince Kotchubey and Captain Volkoff, the centre by the Cesarewitch and Prince George of Greece, the right by Princes Bariatinsky and Obolensky. The centre machan also held the Resident and Colonel Gerard, and the rest of the staff were divided between the left and right machans. The beat commenced at about four o'clock, and about half-an-hour later the tiger was seen opposite the centre machan, but, unfortunately, out of range for the Czarewitch. Going on towards the right, the animal was shot by Prince Bariatinsky. A second tiger had been seen, and after about another half-hour's beating it broke just opposite the right machan, and was again shot by Prince Bariatinsky. The first proved to be a cub about eighteen months old, and the second was a full grown tigress. The return was then made; the Residency was reached in time to change, and drive to the palace, where his Imperial Highness was entertained by the Maharaja. After dinner the Dewan, on behalf of the Maharaja, proposed the healths of the Queen Empress, the Czar and the King of Greece, the Czarewitch and Prince George of Greece. He spoke well in English, congratulating his Imperial Highness on the day's sport.

His Imperial Highness proposed the Maharaja's health. After dinner there was a nautch and a display of fireworks. This morning a small party from the Czarewitch's staff went pig-sticking. Sir Mackenzie Wallace showed how it is done, getting two first appears. There were some good runs, but owing to the many nullahs some pigs got away.

At ten o'clock the Czarewitch was entertained by some boar fighting. Small parties are going black buck shooting this afternoon, and the museum will be inspected by the Czarewitch. He will dine at the Residency to-night, and leave at one o'clock for Ulwar, which will be reached at seven to-morrow morning.

THE CENSUS OF INDIAN LEPERS.

(Pioneer.)

English curiosity as to leprosy has waned of late. Here in India, however, we have the lepers always with us. The number enumerated in 1881 was 132,000; and as no returns were received from Baroda, Rajputana, Travancore, and Central India, the actual number ten years ago was probably about a lakh and a-half, or about sixty to every hundred thousand of the population. It was ascertained that among males leprosy was three times as prevalent as among females. The disease is rare among children; in the whole of India there were not 3,000 cases of leprosy among children under ten years of age, and in three instances out of four the leper had passed the thirtieth year of life. The proportionate number of lepers was high among the Buddhists chiefly in Burma, and was very low among the aboriginal population throughout India. In Berar and Bengal again the numbers were very high, and they were above the average in Burma, Assam, the Central Provinces, and Bombay. The prevalence of the disease was very marked in Khandesh and in the neighbouring districts to the east and west. In these Provinces the disease is most prevalent in Almora and Garhwal, hilly districts like those of Assam; in Banda, a district which in the character of its soil resembles Khandesh, and in Moradabad. It is in some cases possible that white leprosy, or discoloration of the skin, was confused with the black leprosy of the true devouring type; but the distinction between the two kinds is so patent and so well known that very little error can be assigned to this cause. In one part of India it was noticed that the number of lepers had been increasing twice as fast as the ordinary population; and even in these Provinces the rate of increase among lepers was considerably in advance of the rate for the ordinary population. Dr. Deakin, in reviewing the returns, mentioned several analogous cases: "In the Sandwich Islands the disease was unknown forty years ago, and now a tenth part of the inhabitants are lepers. In Honolulu, at one time quite free, there are now not less than 250 cases; and in the United States the number is steadily increasing." Dr. Evans, in noticing the greater prevalence of the disease among males, suggests that the hereditary taint may be more strongly marked in the male progeny thad in the female; but inclines rather to the explanation that males so much more frequently expose themselves to the risk of contagion. It cannot, however, be said that the statistics collected in India at the Census of 1881 established anything conclusively beyond the two facts that leprosy is much more prevalent among males than among females, and that there are comparatively few lepers under the age of thirty years.

BURMA AND MILITARY RECONSTRUCTION.

(Mandalay Herald.)

The suicidal policy of disbanding regiments of the Madras Army is to extend to the Bengal troops, the 38th Bengal Regiment, for some time doing duty in the Kah Valley and at Fort White, being the first selected disbandment. Why it should be thought expedient to effect further reductions in the Native Army at this particular juncture—a juncture fraught with threatened troubles is not imminent danger—is one of those things which no fellow can make out, and cannot be too severely condemned. Independent of the fact that the Native Army is, in point of strength, at an unusually low ebb, the policy of throwing a large number of homeless and disaffected men on the streets is open to serious question, and which, at the present moment, is being painfully illustrated in Madras, where the men of the disbanded Madras regiments are begging for their daily bread. But is it not strange that the whole of the regiments hitherto selected for disbandment have served in Burma—the mere fact of such service alone seeming to qualify them for the purpose. And to what end does this wholesale system of disbanding point? Not upon economical grounds, we are requested to understand, but for the purpose of organising those Burma Battalions which, eventually, are to take the place of regular troops in maintaining that peace and order which only really exists in the imagination of those whose interests it is to hoodwink the public. No doubt these battalions will be able to give a good account of themselves in the very remote future; but if Burma is to be denuded of regular and tried troops in the meantime, and the "thin red line" still further thinned to furnish room for the new idea, all we can say is that a more mischievous and dangerous policy was never initiated and so incautiously carried into effect.

THE SHAN STATES.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The story of the progress and further pacification of the Shan States constitutes a large proportion of the Burma Administration Report which has just been issued. Taken upon the whole the reports from all the States are satisfactory, and their redemption is being surely if gradually wrought out. In the Southern and Eastern States British authority has been firmly established, and guerilla warfare, at one time so great a strain upon the resources of District Chiefs, are now unknown. The people are recovering from the effects of the disorder which for years prior to British annexation had prevailed; the chiefs have been permanently established, pretenders having withdrawn or abandoned their claims; and States which had been laid desolate by marauders are by degrees recovering their prosperity and becoming repopulated. In March last year the Chief Commissioner of Burma paid his first visit to the States, and held a general durdar, when he impressed upon the chiefs the advantages which doubtless they had already appreciated, of the introduction of law and order into their country. The barriers of reserve and distrust built up by long-standing dissensions and intrigues have been or are rapidly being overcome, and in addition to the sentimental intercommunication of States, which the Chief Commissioner advocated, it is gratifying to find that means of intertribal commercial communication are being provided by the construction of roads. Excellent progress is reported to have been made with the cart-road from Meiktila to the Shan plateau, and this road, connecting as it does the Shan States with the plains of Burma, is already much used by caravans, which promise much for the development of trade and the augmentation of the traders' well-being. Reference is made in the report to the visit which Mr. Scott, the Superintendent of the Shan States, paid to Kyaignton relative to the proposal to make its Sawbwa a feudatory of the British Government. It was then decided that Kyaington should be treated as a State in subordinate alliance with the British Government, preserving its independence as regards its domestic administration, but agreeing to regulate its external policy in accordance with the advice of the Superintendent of the Shan States. A sanad has been granted to the Sawbwa on these conditions, and these negotiations are pronounced to have been among the most important events of the past year. Sawlawi, the chief of the Eastern Karreni, has continued to carry out loyally his engagements with the British Government, and has found it greatly to his advantage to do so, for the Government of India has remitted £10,000 of indemnity which he had agreed to pay, and given him an extension — possibly an interminable extension — of the time in which to pay another £10,000. Nothing of especial note is reported from the Northern Shan States since the abortive risings of some months ago. The attention of the Superintendent has for the most part been occupied in the Northern States with the idea of improving internal administration. One of his most important measures has been the initiation of a system of arms registration. The only State in which this has met with any marked success is Thibaw, where 2,500 muskets have already been marked and registered. Elsewhere the work has been slow, and Mr. Scott is doubtful whether the Sawbwas will be able to maintain or even effectually introduce the system into their territories without extraneous help. Some cause for satisfaction is, however, found in the fact that much success has been achieved in the suppression of public gambling, which was and is still so great a stumbling-block to progress. From all parts of the Shan States is the Superintendent able to record some progress; and there is little doubt that another year will bring reports of a still nearer approach to that ideal after which Mr. Scott and successive Chief Commissioners have for so long striven.

THE LATE MR. J. H. STEEL.

(Bombay Gazette, Jan. 17.)

The death of Mr. J. H. Steel, Principal of the Bombay Veterinary College, which we announced yesterday, is a serious loss to veterinary science and to the college over which he so ably presided. Born in 1855, he received his general education at the London University. Having gained his diploma as a member of the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons, he was appointed an assistant professor in the Veterinary College, London; and on resigning the post some time later, was presented by his pupils and the professors of the College with an address and a gold watch. In July, 1873, he was appointed Irish Government Portal Cattle Disease Inspector. Two years later, he served as veterinary surgeon with detachments of the 12th Lancers, 7th Hussars, and the Royal Artillery at Manchester and Woolwich; and in the following year was appointed Demonstrator and Lecturer on Anatomy at the London Veterinary College. Later on we find him acting as Lecturer on Veterinary Science at the Agricultural Schools of Glasneven and Cork, under the Government of Ireland. He afterwards served as Veterinary Surgeon in the Army Veterinary Department at Woolwich, Ipswich, and Norwich. In January, 1882, Mr. Steel came out to India on a tour of foreign service, and in the following month served with the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, &c. In January, 1884, he was in veterinary charge of the Base Transport and Anthrax Camp in the camp-of-exercise under Sir Frederick Roberts, then Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army. Mr. Steel also served at Bangalore in veterinary charge of the 1st Madras Light Cavalry and the Bangalore Transport, and was in temporary charge of the Royal Artillery, Mysore Division. In October, 1884, an epidemic having broken out among the horses of the British Army, Mr. Steel was sent to Burma on special duty to inquire into the causes of the epidemic, and worked with the Transport at Rangoon, Thayetmyo, Tounghoo, and Moulmein. His report on the epidemic was officially published; and he received on the occasion the special thanks of the Madras Government. In March, 1885, Mr. Steel served as a member of the Purchasing Committee for Transport Animals and other general duty at Bangalore. In the following month he was transferred to the Bombay Presidency, and rendered valuable service at the Army Veterinary School in Poona, besides doing general duty in connection with the veterinary charge of the Divisional Staff Mountain Battery. In May, 1886, Mr. Steel was appointed Superintendent of the Bombay Veterinary College and Hospital, the designation being afterwards changed to that of Principal. His failing health compelled him to go on a long furlough to Europe; and on his return to Bombay in March, 1889, he resumed charge of his duties as Principal of Veterinary Science. His zeal and ability were strikingly shown in connection with the Horse Show at the Victoria Gardens during the stay of Prince Albert Victor in Bombay; and it cannot be doubted that the success of the show was mainly due to his exertions. Last month, the liver affection, from which he had been suffering for a long period, compelled him to go on sick leave to Matheran; but having got worse, he returned to Bombay and entered a few days ago the European General Hospital, where he died on Thursday evening. Mr. Steel was a prolific writer on professional subjects, and had published several standard works treating of the diseases of horses and cattle. He was the outhor of "Outlines of Equine Anatomy;" "A Manual of Bovine Pathology;" "A Manual of the Diseases of the Elephant," and other works. He established and conducted with marked ability the "Quarterly Journal of Veterinary Science in India," the first veterinary journal published in this country. The Pathological Laboratory of the Veterinary College at Parel, now approaching completion, will also be the result of his labours. At his suggestion, we believe, Government have sanctioned the establishment of a Civil Veterinary Department from April next. He was also the founder of the Bombay Veterinary Association. In all matters relating to veterinary science, Mr. Steel, whose professional ability was widely known, was consulted by the local Government as well as the Government of India. Mr. Steel was buried yesterday morning at the Sewree cemetery, and the funeral party was largely attended by friends and students of the Veterinary College. He leaves behind him a widow and two children now in England.

INDIA SIXTY YEARS AGO.

(BY A SEPTUAGENARIAN.)

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

India sixty years ago! How few are left in the country who were at that time of an age to note passing events, and are now alive and able to relate them for the wonder and amusement of the present generation!

Sixty years ago, I remember, a reply to a letter sent to England could not be received in a shorter period than twelve months. Parents in England felt as if they had parted with their sons for ever: sons never hoped to live in this scorching climate long enough to enjoy the happiness of being once again clasped in a loving mother's arms. I remember a very amusing incident that arose out of this uncertainty as to the fate of their children on the part of parents in England. Sir Henry Fane, Commander-in-Chief in India in 1836, received a letter from the father of a soldier serving in India, the words of which ran as follows:—

"Your Honour's Excellency. I live in——at the sign of the——. My son listed for India, and embarked from Portsmouth to join the 18th Royal Irish Regiment on the——. I am his father, which is thrue as Holy Writ. Your Excellency's sarvint to command has written many letters to my son, and to the commanding officer of his regiment, asking how my boy is, but have not receaved a reply to any of them. I now send a letther for my son to your Honour's Highness, requesting that you will give it to him dead or alive, and send me an answer. May the saints protect you, and may your Excellency live for ever and hereafter."

Postal communication in those days between Calcutta and the Upper Provinces was by "runners," sometimes on foot and sometimes mounted on ponies. The time in which a letter from Calcutta reached Simla was about half a month; the postage being 14 annas for a letter weighing from 8 annas to 1 rupee; those under half a rupee in weight, 7 annas. Those were not the days when sweethearts could exchange letters daily, and also it often happened that letters reached their destination in a state of pulp.

Kurnal was then the frontier military cantonment, and the sanitarium of India. Take up the General Orders of the period, and you will find entries like the following:—"Leave of absence, at the recommendation of a medical board, is granted to Captain —— of the —— Light Dragoons, for six months (or one year), to proceed to Kurnal for the benefit of his health. He will report his arrival to the Officer commanding the station." The cantonment was abandoned some years afterwards for its extreme unhealthiness, caused by the overflowing of the Jumna Canal. When the cantonment of Umballa was built, the beams, doors, windows, &c., of the Kurnal church were transported to Umballa, but the steeple was left standing, as it was not erected at the Government cost, but by public subscription; and there it still stands as a sign that Kurnal was once inhabited by Christians.

Go back one decade further, and you will be told that there were but a few houses then at Simla, just sufficient for the Governor-General and Staff, and for the Commander-in-Chief and his staff—never both in the same year. The offices and clerks were located at Subathu, and head clerks with their portfolios and office boxes travelled up to Simla once a week by jampan, to obtain the signatures and orders of secretaries, &c.

The mode of travelling up from Calcutta was by river craft as far as Allahabad, which occupied about three months, and thence either by daily marches, or for private individuals, palki dak, arranged by the post office, and costing, to Umballa, Rs. 500 for one palki. Dak bungalows were built on the "Grand Trunk Road" at distances of about ten miles.

There were river merchants then plying up with boats loads of liquors and English stores, and selling them at river stations. Tempora mutantur.

THE CONGRESS.

(Times of India.)

Now that full reports of the Sixth Indian National Congress have been received from Calcutta, it is evident that any very general interest in the movement is dying out. There were, it is said, some 1,400 delegates; but the huge meeting hall is described as being half empty, while the audience is said to have been mostly of the schoolboy type. The delegates were welcomed by Mr. Munmohun Ghose, who maintained that the National Congress represented the thinking portion of India, and was not as a body opposed to social reform. There had been some difficulty this year in finding a President. Finally, the honour fell upon Mr. P. M. Mehta, probably because he is a Parsee; and as the Parsees as a body have now withdrawn from the movement, a prominent Parsee is precious. We have printed the chief points of Mr. P. M. Mehta's long speech elsewhere. It is moderate in tone, and suggests nothing new. His advice to the Parsees to sink their remarkable individuality as a race in the mass of the new "Indian Nation" is, however, hardly likely to be followed That a people scarcely numbering 100,000 souls, all told, should play a foremost part in Western India, in politics, in civic life, in commerce, and socially, is one of the most curious facts in Oriental history, and must be due to strong racial characteristics. They will scarcely consent at Mr. P. M. Mehta's bidding to efface themselves and become an infinitely small fraction of the 200,000,000 inhabitants of British India. Their present position is as unique as their influence, and they would be very foolish to dream of changing it. This, however, is a matter between Mr. P. M. Mehta and the Parsees. The first Resolution passed by the Congress, without referring to the extraordinary Bill Mr. Bradlaugh drew up as the result of the Fifth Congress, approved of his modified Bill about the substantial expansion of the Imperial and Local Legislative Councils, and empowered the President to send a petition to the House of Commons to pass it into law. The second Resolution confirmed the following Resolutions passed at previous Congresses, namely, complete separation of executive and judicial functions; the expediency of extending the system of trial by jury; withdrawing from the High Courts the power of setting aside acquittals by juries; the necessity of a fundamental reform in the police system; the expediency of establishing military colleges for the training of Natives of India for a military career, and authorising volunteering for Indians raising the taxable minimum to rupees one thousand under the Income Tax Act; increasing the expenditure on education, especially technical, and appointing a mixed Commission to inquire into the present industrial condition of the country; reduction of the military expenditure of the country; holding simultaneously in England and in India the Civil Service examinations; modifying the Arms Act, and that licenses to possess arms shall be generally distributed wherever wild animals habitually destroyed human life or cattle. The third and fourth Resolutions deal with matters of details, and by the fifth the Viceroy is to be asked to devote the surplus expected in the next Budget to the reduction of the Salt Tax. Finally, the members denounced the circular of the Bengal Government prohibiting Government servants attending the Congress, and determined to address the Secretary of State on the subject. The Congress this year seems to have excited very little interest even in Calcutta. The next meeting place is fixed at Nagpore.

FURLOUGH.

A PANTOUM.*

(Pioneer.)

Brightly your first cold weather shines
When you think of the fog and the frost at home,
Under amethyst skies one seldom pines
For Piccadilly and Paul's grey dome.

When you think of the fog and the frost at home,
The next cold weather, your thoughts are gay,
For Piccadilly and Paul's grey dome,
And the crowded streets seem farther away.

The next cold weather, your thoughts are gay,
When the snipe rise fast in the sunny bheel,
And the crowded streets are further away,
You forget the fog and the skies of steel.

When the snipe rise fast in the sunny bheel,
Your hand is steady, your aim is true,
You forget the fog and the skies of steel,
And the breeze blows fresh and the skies are blue.

Your hand is steady, your aim is true,
For many cold weathers after the first,
The breeze blows fresh and the skies are blue,
And walking for snipe yields a healthy thirst.

For many cold weathers after the first,
The Indian life is as good as can be,
And walking for snipe yields a healthy thirst,
But at last you long for a whiff of the sea.

The Indian life is as good as can be,
You wouldn't exchange with poet or peer,
But at last you long for a whiff of the sea,
You lose you liking for bitter beer.

You wouldn't exchange with poet or peer,
But at last your liver will have its say,
You lose your liking for bitter beer,
You ask for furlough some sultry day.

At last your liver will have its say,
You think hard thoughts of the land of the sun,
You ask for furlough some sultry day;
Before you know it, your leave has begun.

You think hard things of the land of the sun,
When the steward brings you your muddy tea,
Before you know it, your leave has begun,
You hate the waves and the swells of the sea.

When the steward brings you your muddy tea.
You think of your absent khidmatgar,
You hate the waves and the swells of the sea,
You loath the odours of bilge and tar.

You think of your absent khidmatgar,
Of toast and eggs on a snowy tray,
You loath the odours of bilge and tar,
As you toss on the waves of the troubled Bay.

Of toast and eggs on a snowy tray,
Of a perfect cup of tea you dream,—
As you toss on the waves of the troubled Bay,
Of yellow butter, of luscious cream.

Of a perfect cup of tea you dream,
Of home-made bread, and bacon and eggs,
Of yellow butter, of luscious cream.
You hate the remotest hint of—pegs.

Of home-made bread, and bacon and eggs,
Your thoughts are full, as you haste ashore,
You hate the remotest hint of pegs,
You vow you'll never touch whiskey more.

Your thoughts are full, as you haste ashore,
Of an English breakfast, plentiful, good,
You vow you'll never touch whiskey more,
You start in search of good English food.

With an English breakfast, plentiful, good,
Furlough's delights may well begin,
You start in search of good English food,
You take your ease at the nearest inn.

Furlough's delights may well begin
With a good rump-steak and a cup of tea;—
You take your ease at the nearest inn,
But what the repast which at last you see?

With a good rump-steak and a cup of tea,
You'd rest content though the tablecloth's soiled
But what the repast which at last you see?
The steak is leather,—the tea is boiled.

You'd rest content though the tablecloth's soiled,
But the spoons are dirty, the plates not clean,
The steak is leather, the tea is boiled,
The eggs less fresh than they might have been.

The spoons are dirty, the plates not clean,—
Ah, furlough, father of doubts and debts,—
The eggs less fresh than they might have been,—
And—do you regret the Land of Regrets?

Ah, furlough, father of doubts and debts,
Thou art wrapped in mists. But a blue sky shines
When winter time brightens the Land of Regrets,
When summer time gilds Himalayan pines.

BENGAL.

(Jan. 14.)

ON Saturday night some twenty-two officers of the Telegraph Department met together at a pleasant social dinner party at Bansard's Hotel, Calcutta, with Mr. W. R. Brooke, Director-General of Telegraphs, presiding. There were no speeches, but the health of the Queen was duly honoured, and the réunion was one of a thoroughly enjoyable character.

A CALCUTTA paper, in the course of a long review of the Bengal Branch of the Dufferin Fund, remarks:—"Successfully, however, as the scheme was started, beyond even the most sanguine hopes of its promoters, it is not too much to say that even yet its footing is, in Bengal, not altogether secure. The donations received, though large, are not sufficent in themselves to form a fund to carry out to any great extent the philanthropic objects in view, unless largely supported by yearly subscriptions from public bodies and private individuals. The fear is that public interest in the movement may be allowed to diminish, so that its vitality will ebb away until the progress made hardly keeps pace with the mistakes and failures which, in one form or another, are inevitable. Last year's operations of the Dufferin Fund in Bengal show good work done, but they also show the need for vigilance."

THE Bengal Iron and Steel Company are proving what success can be gained by private enterprise in developing the mineral resources of the country. When they took over the concern from the Government of India there were two blast-furnaces on the old-fashioned "open-top" plan. A third and larger blast-furnace of better design, and with all the recent improvements which can be thought of is now being erected. When this new furnace is completed it is intended to remodel the old ones. The company are also putting up two new blowing engines, and in other respects making the blast-furnace portion of the works equal to meeting modern requirements. The foundry is being extended with a view to the manufacture of cast-iron pipes suitable for waterworks, which are now being so widely carried out in many cities. The management are showing such energy and enterprise that the Government must congratulate themselves on having practically entrusted to the company the task of developing the native iron industry of India.

The acquittal of the Native cashier in the Chartered Bank case at Calcutta some three months ago, writes a correspondent, "is beginning to have the effect, which was foreseen, in demoralising men of his class serving the large commercial firms in India. We now learn that a Native cashier in one of the most important houses in Calcutta has been found to be short of Rs. 1,80,000 in his accounts. He worked under the bantan, who disclaims all responsibility, while the defaulter himself contends that he cannot be punished as he is protected by the ruling of the High Court. Here, then, is the first result of the interpretation of the law, which, at the time, gave such grave dissatisfaction to the whole commercial community. The sooner a second case can be brought before the Courts the better will it be both for employers and employed. It is obvious that so long as the ruling in question stands unchallenged cashiers will be tempted to dishonesty, while their masters will always be uncertain as to what legal remedy is open to them. Those who are responsible for the framing of the laws, it is said, that the provisions of the Penal Code, if interpreted correctly, are sufficient to meet all cases of embezzlement, and that no amendment is therefore necessary. This being so, the earliest opportunity should be taken to bring Mr. Justice Prinsep's ruling under review, so as to obtain an authoritative exposition of the law which will be binding on all the Courts."

MADRAS.

(Jan. 15.)

THE quantity of gold despatched from the Kolar gold field during the past week is valued at Rs. 20,000. The gold was sent by rail to Bombay for shipment to England.

THE dividend declared by the Bank of Madras for the past half-year, of 4½ per cent., being at the rate of 9 per cent. per annum, will doubtless be considered very satisfactory by the shareholders, when the state of the money market is taken into account. For several months past money has been abnormally cheap, the Bank of Madras official rate not having been above 3 per cent. since August; and Indian banks have found great difficulty in finding employment for their funds even at that price, as the heavy balances at the three Presidency banks abundantly testify. It will be observed that the net profit for the half-year amounted to only about one lakh, being at the rate 4 per cent. per annum on the capital; but, thanks to the wise policy of the Directors, having for its object the equalisation of the dividends, a sum of two lakhs had been brought over from the previous half-year's profits, and this precaution has prevented the full effect of an exceptionally dull period being felt by the shareholder. The Bank now has before it the period of the year most favourable to a high rate of interest, and we may reasonably look forward to the usual dividend next July, towards which Rs. 80,000 has been carried forward. The reserve fund has not been increased, but it alreadystands at a high figure, viz., 14 lakhs, and shareholders are not likely to quarrel with the Directors for preferring to add to the fund in bumper half-years.

THE Ootacamund Municipal Council, in reference to a suggestion made by the Government that it should raise another loan for improving the water supply of that station, says it cannot at present undertake to do so. It has already a debt of Rs. 58,575 which it is liquidating, and that the repayment of the further loan proposed by Government would necessitate increased taxation to the extent of Rs. 4,500 per annum. The Council does not see its way to repay the loan without the imposition of further taxation, which it is not prepared to recommend.

BOMBAY.

(Jan. 17.)

AMONGST the passengers who arrived here by the mail steamer on Monday were Sir R. and Lady Beauchamp, Lieut.-Colonel Sir Fleetwood and Lady Edwards, Sir J. Gladstone, Mr. Yorke Smith, solicitor, and Mr. Samuel Hoare, M.P. Sir R. and Lady Beauchamp are the guests of H.E. Lord Harris. Prince Alexander Scherbaloff and Princess Olga Scherbaloff were also passengers from Brindisi by the same boat. They are at present staying at the Esplanade Hotel, and will start on their Indian tour on Thursday next.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Light rain in two talukas of Upper Sind Frontier. Reaping of early crops still continues in parts of five districts; sowing of late crops progressing in parts of Kanara, and harvesting commenced in parts of Ahmednugger. Standing crops damaged by locusts in four talukas of Kurrachee; wheat in one taluka of Hyderabad attacked by rust; cotton diseased in one taluka of Surat and blighted in two talukas of Bijapur, and in parts of Belgaum and Dharwar; prospects of cotton not favourable in parts of Broach; late crops otherwise good except in three talukas of Belgaum and Dharwar, where they are suffering from drought. Fodder scarce in one taluka of Nassik, Poona, Ahmednugger, and Baroda, two of Satara, and three of Dharwar. Agricultural stock good except in one taluka of Nassik and Ahmednugger.

IT will be remembered that at the beginning of November last Mr. C. W. Richardson, the Acting Third Presidency Magistrate, sentenced Kamtasing and some seven other Hindoos connected with a gang of noted swindlers to a term of two months' hard labour on a charge of attempting to rob Mr. Kursondass Chabildass Laloobhoy, Barrister-at-Law, of his cash-box containing currency notes and cash valued at Rs. 125. Since the passing of the sentence, the Appellate Court, consisting of Mr. Justice Birdwood and Mr. Justice Parsons, of their own motion have issued a rule calling upon Kamtasing and his seven confederates, who are now undergoing their term of imprisonment in the county jail, to show cause why the sentence passed on them by the magistrate should not be enhanced. The rule, which was served on the prisoners in the jail on Saturday last, will come on for argument on the 31st instant.

"HAPPY BOMBAY," exclaims the Allahabad paper, and then goes on to say:—"In a discussion the other day in the Bombay Corporation on a proposal to raise the grain tax from two to four annas per candy, Mr. Cotton, in urging that the poorer classes ought to bear some share of the taxation of the city, said he had a great deal to do with the working classes in Bombay, and he considered that 'they were much better able to pay a small share of the taxation than a good many ratepayers.' The working classes were much better off in Bombay than any in the world; the average wages they earned were sufficient to provide for the necessaries of life and leave at least thirty or forty per cent.; and, finally, he offered a premium to 'any gentleman present who would find him 500 able-bodied men and women who were unable to find work.' It would be hard to find a muncipality in Europe where such an offer could be ventured without serious damage to the pocket of the man bold enough to make it. There would certainly be a sensation in a British muncipality were any councillor to propose a tax on the necessaries of life; but there 'we've got no work to do' is unfortunately a common motto on the banners of the great unwashed."

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES. PUNJAB AND OUDH.

(Jan. 15.)

PUNDIT SALIG RAM, editor of a vernacular paper published at Lahore, publishes in the Civil and Military Gazette an apology to the Punjab Government for a seditious article published in his paper representing that the authorities at Rohtak during the Bakra Id festival had grossly ill-used the Hindus, and outraged their religion. The Government gave the Pundit the option of advertising a humble apology in the papers or standing a criminal prosecution. He has prudently adopted the former alternative.

IN the Pubjab the views of local bodies on the subject of physical training in schools have been found to differ considerably. There is less desire for athletic exercises among the people of the southern districts than among the more energetic population of the Punjab proper; but even in the lower parts of the Delhi division much has been accomplished through the exertions of individual officers. In the Delhi district, however, the little that has been brought about has been effected by the direct intervention of Government, and the district is said to be the most backward in the Delhi circle if not in the whole province, as regards arrangements for physical training.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned a proposal submitted some time ago by the Punjab Government for increasing the pay of the Government Advocate. The pay of the appointment has hitherto been Rs. 1,000, rising to Rs. 1,500. It is understood that in future the minimum scale will be Rs. 1,200 a month, and the maximum Rs. 2,000, the officer holding the appointment, if a member of the Indian Civil Service, receiving, between these limits, the same salary as that drawn by the officer next junior to him in the regular line. The new scale will certainly widen the field of selection in case of future necessity, and the duties of the office have increased so rapidly of recent years that an increase of emoluments could hardly have been postponed much longer.

A SERIOUS riot is reported at Bezwada between the Hindu inhabitants and the Punjabi coolies, imported for employment on the Kistna bridge works. Hindu jealousy of the Punjabis is believed to be at the bottom of the row, but the ostensible cause was the Hindus' belief that the Government ordered a human sacrifice at the commencement of the work, and the fact that a Punjabi workman while talking to a woman in the street took up her child in his arms. An alarm was immediately given, and the whole town rose. The police locked up the Punjabi to save his life, and all his countrymen came with sticks to rescue him. The magistracy and police eventually laughed the Bezwada people out of their craze, released the prisoner, and made other Punjabis stroll through the town for a day or two to accustom the people to the sight of them.

THE latest rumour circulated in the Punjab is that the Amir of Kabul "proposes to strengthen his position towards Peshawar by the erection of a fort with artillery near Landi Kotal, and a cantonment in its rear; the latter is to be situated at Haftcha, and the fort at Kafir Kila." The Lahore paper states that as the new position would serve as a good basis of operations against refractory Mohmands on the north and Shinwaris on the south, its utility is quite evident enough to render any conjecture of distrust on the part of the Indian Government unnecessary; but at the same time it points out that, in case of another Afghan war, a force advancing from Ali Masjid would find the fort an obstacle. This might be so, but experience has shown that Afghans fight best behind sungahs, and have little liking for being cooped up within four walls, with the chance of their retreat being cut off. But there is not the least chance of such a fort being built, for Kafir Kila happens to lie beyond the Afghan border line. The question as to whether it was within the territory under British control arose some time ago, and the decision then arrived at, that it did not pertain to the Amir, is not likely to be disturbed. The Shinwaris would be in arms at once if any attempt were made by the Governor of Jellalabad to station troops at this particular point.

GOVERNMENT AND THE CONGRESS.—One signing himself "Junius" writes to a Calcutta paper:—"Sir Charles Elliott, he says, has not begun well. The very first step of his official career as Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has been to come into direct collision with the National Congress. Whether the Congress were justified or not in sending his Honour and his household a cordial invitation to their meetings, is immaterial. I believe it was an act of pure good will on their part; nor does it seem from the report of the proceedings that the Congress people were aware of the existence even of the Government order prohibiting its servants from taking part in political meetings. What did Sir Charles Elliott do? In the first place he, or his Private Secretary for him, was guilty of the gross bêtise of returning the cards of invitation to the Committee. He rakes up and publishes this precious circular of the Government of India, that ought never to have been permitted, and flinging it in the face of the Congress, warns every Government servant, from the gold-buttoned secretary to the humblest baboo-clerk, against being present, in any capacity whatever, at the deliberations of that wicked Congress! On the contrary, it will serve but to hasten the time when all bureaucratic rule of this order will be made to give place to just and enlightened Government, more in accord with the sentiments and convictions of the great body politic, to register whose decrees and perform whose will every civilised Government exists." Of course!

MR. RUDYARD KIPLING.

Hard her service, poor her payment—she in ancient, tattered raiment—
India, she the grim Stepmother of our kind.
If a year of life be lent her, if her temple's shrine we enter,
The door is shut—we may not look behind.

So sings Mr. Kipling in one of his poems. And the words are true of ninety-nine in a hundred who, in search of fortune, enter the gate of India; but they are not true of the author of "Departmental Ditties," and of "Soldiers Three" and the "Gadsbys," and "Black and White and "Wee Willie Winkie," and diverse other wondrous tales in prose that are favourites with every European from Cape Comorin to Peshawur, and widely known in England and America. To Mr. Rudyard Kipling, anyhow, India has not been a stepmother. She has been his foster-mother, and, in the proper sense of the word, his educator, for, young as he is—and bouncing—has she not drawn out of him, besides a book of sunny rhymes, some six or seven volumes of extraordinarily witty, humorous (and often pathetic) short stories, which in Anglo-Indian literature, at least, are of unexampled range and versatility?

The Fates ruled that Mr. Kipling, the younger, should be the Bret Harte, or the Mark Twain, of India. In other circumstances, the Fates might have reserved that distinction for Mr. Kipling the elder, for he too knows India well, and is a writer of exceptional accomplishments and grace. If there be anything in heredity, Mr. Rudyard Kipling is an example of it. Who is the "wittiest woman in India," to whom he dedicates one of his books? Why, of course, his mother, as everybody from Bombay to Lahore and Simla is well aware. It is not filial love and ambition alone that have prompted the words we have quoted.

Mrs. Kipling's contributions in prose and verse are amongst the brightest things in Anglo-Indian journalism. She comes of a clever family—one of her sisters is married to Mr. Burne-Jones. The creator of Terence Mulvaney was born and brought up in an atmosphere of literature and art. Bombay was his birthplace—twenty-five years ago. At that time the future story-writer's father was one of the masters in the Bombay School of Art. Before going out to India, Mr. John Lockwood Kipling had studied both here and in Paris, had become a first-rate draughtsman, and an expert in architectural design. The fine art of pottery also occupied him for a while, and, but for his choice of the East, might have absorbed him altogether. After nine or ten years of Bombay life he was appointed to the Principalship of the School of Art in Lahore, where he is still. But long before this change of residence, Rudyard Kipling, not yet emerged from childhood, was sent home, to the more merciful climate of England. Anglo-Indian life, in spite of its too general hollowness, selfishness, and vulgarity (all which characteristics were to be vividly set forth by the future story-writer), has its incidents of pity and pathos, and this separation of child from parent is one of them. 'Tis bad enough if one can afford the expense; worse if one can't.

In a few years more the Chota Sahib ("little master," as his Hindustani attendant would have called him) found himself in Westward Ho! the West of England School that is so esteemed of the English of the East. He was no bookworm, young Kipling. But he had barely entered his teens when it became apparent that he was a boy of no ordinary gifts. If he did not diligently imbibe wisdom from the Pedagogue, he worshipfully cultivated the Muse, and some of his verses, printed when he was fourteen, manifested an extraordinary command of language, and a precocious—too precocious, some thought—insight into the recesses, not always the most pleasant, of the human heart. His future path was clearly marked out for him—and not by the red tape of the "Indian Civil" or any other form of officialism. He made for ink as naturally as a duck for the water. Literature was his field, and the course of things had ordained that he must enter it through the door of India. To India he went in 1882, and the "cold" season of 1882-3 saw him in Lahore, the picturesque capital of the Punjab. There he became a journalist. But there's journalism and journalism. For the everyday journalism of British India—the dry croak about pensions and appointments and the Government Gazette, young Smifkin, B.C.S.'s, report on the Gangetic porpoise, the fracas in cantonments, and the scandal about the subaltern's wife—Mr. Rudyard Kipling had no stomach. That is to say, he had no stomach for treating these themes in the orthodox manner of the British Indian "We;" but he treated them non-journalistically (if one may use such a horrible word), and the "Departmental Ditties" are to the files of the Indian papers as the gold is to the sand. Most, if not all, of his verses and sketches first appeared in the Lahore, Calcutta, and Allahabad newspapers; and if one pleases to call them journalism, or literature put into the columns of a journal, why it is a matter of definition. Some unamiable souls will draw a distinction between journalism and literature. If there is any, whose fault is it? Why should there be any?

For the seven years' work that lay before him he could not have been more fortunately situated than in London. First, there were the parental presence, knowledge, talent, guidance. Where could there have been found a more valuable guide and adviser, a more charming companion among the bazaars and narrow streets and lanes of Indian towns, one better acquainted with the characters, the habits, the ideas, the shrewd sayings of the people, one of more kindly sympathetic insight into Native life, than the versatile and widely accomplished head of the Lahore School of Art?—whom the writer of these lines knew well. Then the locality, Lahore is the rendezvous of more nationalities, races, castes, tribes, than can be counted on one's fingers. Merchants from Kashgar and Samarcand, fruit-sellers and horsedealers from Cabul and the border, Panthan troopers and bagmen, suave Hindoos, Moslems with their more pronounced air of independence, bearded, proud Sikhs, and other divisions and cross divisions of the Asiatic population all meet in the big town by the Ravee. And three or four miles off, in his patent barracks at Meean Meer, is Private Thomas Atkins, whom the soul of Mr. Rudyard Kipling loveth—as, indeed, doth the soul of the present writer. So that Lahore, to say nothing of the numerous localities besides which Mr. Kipling must have visited in the course of his Indian life, must have afforded him about as many types of men as he cared to study. Good use has he made of his opportunities. The author of "Pandurang Hari" has left us many vivid pictures of Native Indian life. So has Mr. Allardyce in the "City of Sunshine," a tale too little known. And, of course, so has Meadows Taylor. But the united efforts of these and other writers whom we might name have produced nothing like the array of types of men and women that, as it were, live and breathe in these seven or eight little volumes of Mr. Kipling's. Many critics have been saying that Mr. Kipling is incapable of this and that. We are not just now concerned with what he is going to do, but with what he has done. But even Mr. Kipling has not yet exhausted the Indian mine; and we trust he has not forsaken it; the mine is limitless. He is one of the most dramatic of story writers; in which sense he is more French than English. The great achievement of French fiction is the self-revelation of character. Your first-rate French novelist does not tell you—does not assure you—that his characters are such-and-such; he makes them reveal themselves in their talk and deeds; he himself is impersonal. But even the best English novelist too often preaches too much, puts himself outside his characters, and, Barnum-like, talks about them and about them. As for the ordinary story-writer, we have constantly to take his word as to what his characters really are. Mr. Kipling has sometimes been accused of "coarseness" and "cynicism." But whatever coarseness there is is not of the writer but of the characters whom he faithfully paints. There is "cynicism," as it is commonly called, but it is on the surface, non-essential evanescent; and beneath it all there lies the sense of the pathos and the greatness of human life.—Echo.

THE REDUCTION OF THE DUTY ON SALT.—The Sarvajanik Sabha of Poona deserves public thanks for their representation to the Government of India, urging a reduction of the duty on salt to the level at which it was left by the Ripon-Baring administration. The Sabha makes out a case which it will be impossible for the authorities to meet; and we only hope the usual sense of infallibility may not come in the way of the latter doing justice. Nothing can check the extravagance of a Government so well as a watch oh unjust or demoralising taxation.—Indian Spectator.

INDIAN GOLD MINING SHARES.—Business in these shares yesterday was active, and this is regarded as a "coming" market. The demand continued far into the afternoon, and prices closed at the best points. There was a rise of 1-16 in Nundydroog, Champion Reef, and Nine Reefs, and of 9d. in Mysore Reefs and South-East Mysore Preference. Indian Consolidated and Mysore West also met with inquiry. The only unfavourable change was a relapse of 2s. in Gold Fields of Mysore. Mysore shares were last quoted 6⅛ to 6¼, Nundydrog 1¾ to 1 13-16, Indian Consolidated New Company (9s. paid), 4s. 3d. to 4s. 9d., Balaghat-Mysore (New) 10s. to 10s. 6d., Champion Reef 1⅛ to 1¼, Ooregum Ordinary 2 9-16 to 2⅝, ditto Preference 2 11-16 to 2 13-16, Devala-Moyar 9d. to 1s. 3d., Nine Reefs New (fully paid) 4s. 6d. to 5s., Mysore Reefs (£1 paid) 6s. 6d. to 7s., Mysore Wynaad (19s. paid) 2s. 6d. to 3s., South-East Mysore 6d. to 1s., Indian Glenrock New 2s. 6d. to 3s., Gold Fields of Mysore 29s. 6d. to 31s. 6d., New South-East Wynaad 1s. to 2s., and Mysore West (18s. 6d. paid) 3s. to 3s. 6d.

INDIAN CHILD WIVES.

IT is possible that when the full report of the debate in the Viceregal Council at Calcutta on Sir Andrew Scoble's Bill for the protection of Indian child wives is read in England it will disappoint the expectations of many of the ardent reformers, male and female, who had interested themselves in the matter. No more difficult or more delicate question has for many years past been submitted for the consideration of the Government of India, and we quite agree with what an Indian contemporary says, that in pressing upon that Government the series of resolutions passed in England by an influential committee it was scarcely fair for Viceroys who had felt the difficulty of social reforms when they themselves were in power to urge this one so strenuously upon their last successor. Sir Andrew Scoble's measure, which was supported in an exhaustive speech by Lord Lansdowne, falls no doubt considerably short of the recommendations of that committee and the expectations of its members; but his Excellency justified the course taken on the grounds that the Government of India being more in touch with the opinion of the Native community in India are in a better position to judge of the delicacy and difficulty of their task when it is a question of legislative interference with Native customs than the English committee. The reformers at home would, with the very best intentions of course, have had the Government of India to deal with the matter in a wider way which would have embraced the question of infant marriage itself, the marriage of widows and other matters connected with Hindu social life and customs. This the Government of India declined, and we think wisely so, to do. It was not prepared to enter upon a crusade against Hindu religious caste by going into the whole question of Hindu marriage reform. "Our object," said the Viceroy, "is simply to afford protection to those who cannot protect themselves—protection from a form of physical ill-usage which I believe to be reprobated by the most thoughful section of the community, which is, to the best of my belief, entirely unsupported by religious sanction, and which under the English law is punishable with penal servitude for life, without any exceptions or reservations."

The Indian Press generally supports this view. The Pioneer, acknowledging that the whole Bill is summed up in the above lines, says :—

"There is no sentimental grievance to be redressed, and no vague aspirations to be satisfied; there is an evil to be remedied which has thrust itself in all its vileness upon the public sight, and the criminal law is to be amended to meet the requirements of the case. Under the circumstances Lord Lansdowne was surely not too sanguine when he expressed the hope that a measure so limited and restricted would receive the support of public opinion."

The Times of India follows in the same strain :—

"Ardent reformers will, no doubt, be disappointed. The Bill introduced by Sir Andrew Scoble has nothing whatever to do with their philanthrophic schemes. But by-and-by the vexed question as to the restitution of conjugal rights will be considered, while the Governor-General himself sees signs that the more enlightened classes of the Hindoo community are preparing for a change in the direction of widow remarriage. In the meantime our social reformers must console themselves with the thought that by raising the age of consent from ten years to twelve a step in advance, small and almost accidental as it is, will assuredly be achieved."

The Bombay Gazette, however, is of opinion that the Government of India should have acted with greater boldness and more in accord with the recommendations of the English Committee submitted to it by the Secretary of State. "It is sufficient," says that journal, "to point out that the Committee is in the main constituted of men of long Indian experience—an experience of India and of Native customs and habits of thought which can bear comparison with that of Lord Lansdowne and his colleagues of the Government of India. The Earl of Northbrook and the Marquis of Ripon as Viceroys were in sympathy and in touch with Native opinion. They and Lord and Lady Reay are amongst the members of the Committee. So are Sir Charles and Lady Aitchison, Mr. and Mrs. Ilbert, Professor and Mrs. Max Müller, Mr. Samuel Smith, and many others whose names are guarantees that the Committee will be guided in these matters by due regard for Native susceptibilities. It could be wished that the Viceroy having finally resolved to make some concession to the public conscience, deeply offended by the story of wrongs of which the recent scandal in Bengal was but a type, had spoken in a more uncompromising tone. A deprecatory and apologetic attitude is the less necessary, seeing that the Government of India have behind them the consensus not only of English but of all civilised opinion."

This is all very well; but according to this argument legislative interference might be properly brought to bear against every Native custom, or social or religious prejudice which did not accord with English or "all civilised" opinion.

We think that the Viceroy and his colleagues in Council have taken a wiser course. If they have aroused no enthusiasm amongst Indian reformers at home they have excited no alarm amongst Conservative Hindus in India. They trust to Time—and Time will in the end justify their action.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

BRIGADE-SURGEON E. C. MARKEY, C.B., has, in anticipation of promotion, been appointed an Administrative Medical Officer on the Indian establishment in succession to Deputy Surgeon-General Collis, whose tour of service is about to expire.

THE following additional Artillery Reliefs, to be carried out this cold weather, have been sanctioned owing, to sickness among the batteries at Mian Mir:—8th Field Battery, Rawal Pindi to Ferozepore; 39th, Ferozepore to Mian Mir; 60th, Mian Mir to Rawal Pindi; 65th, Jullundur to Mian Mir; 68th, Mian Mir to Jullundur.

IT is likely that formal sanction will shortly be announced to a considerable rise in the pay of the Silladar Cavalry all over India, the monthly stipend of all ranks entitled to draw compensation for dearness of forage being increased by four rupees. Sowars will thus draw Rs. 31 instead of Rs. 27—a substantial benefit.

THE expedition against the Samil clans on the Miranzai border should be over long before the troops begin to concentrate for the Black Mountain affair in March, unless unforeseen complications occur with the main body of the Orukzais. A month at the outside, from the time the frontier is crossed, should be sufficient to bring the Samil headmen to a sense of the hopelessness of holding out. This being so, the military authorities will be able to give General Lockhart a second opportunity of showing how punitive expeditions of the kind should be really carried out. His methods will be very different from those of general officers combined with a big Staff and with Brigadiers and Colonels enough to stock a small Army Corps. The Frontier Force are certainly fortunate at this juncture, when there is once more a chance of a brush with the tribesmen, in having as their Commandant a soldier who laughs at the old bugbear of "responsibility," and will do his work in the thorough manner that men of his type are given to.

THE Native Army boasts many distinguished soldiers in its ranks, but none with a worthier record than Subadar-Major Mauladad Khan, C.I.E., late Subadar-Major of the 20th (D.C.O.) Punjab Infantry, who died some days ago. Mauladad Khan was a Kuki Khel Afridi of Gudar, a small hamlet situated about two miles from Fort Jamrud, in the direction of the Lashora Valley, and his house, placed on a small hillock, was easily seen by all who have ever used the Khyber-road. Mauladad Khan served in the Indian Mutiny of 1857, receiving the medal, clasp and 3rd class Order of Merit. He was wounded in the Mahsud-Waziri campaign of 1860, and other N.W. frontier expeditions prior to 1863. The Ambeyla campaign of 1863 gave him a medal and clasp. He was in the Lundkhwar campaign, 1866; Hazara, 1868, clasp Aimal Chabootra, 1876; Jawaki, 1877-78, clasp, 1st class Order of Merit; Afghan War, 1878-79-80; medal clasp, 2nd class Order of British India; Waziri, 1881, 1st class Order of British India; Egypt, 1882, medal, clasp, bronze star and Order of the Indian Empire, 5th class order of the Medjidie. From Egypt he has one of the officers selected to proceed to England, and later on went with the Afghan Boundary Commission. Gentle and retiring in private life he was brave as a lion on the battle-field; a good soldier, loved and respected by all who knew him, and a true friend.

UNGENEROUS TREATMENT OF MADRAS SEPOYS.

A "Fly on the Wheel" writes to the Madras Mail:—"You have often drawn attention to the unfairness with which the unfortunate Madras sepoy is treated by the Chesne-Roberts gang. As the latest instance, however, seems to have escaped you, allow me to bring to your notice the better terms given to the men of the Bengal Regiments about to be disbanded as compared to those given to the Madras Regiment to be disbanded at the same time. The comparison applies equally to those Madras Regiments disbanded last year:—

BENGAL.	MADRAS.
Men of 14 and less than 25 years' service, ordinary pension and a bonus of 1 month's pay, including good conduct pay, for every two years' service.	Men of 15 years' service and less than 25, ordinary pension. No bonus.
Men of more than 10 and less than 14 years' service, two-thirds ordinary pension and a bonus of three months' pay, including good conduct pay.	Men of more than 10 and less than 15 years' service, two-thirds ordinary pension. No bonus.
Men of 5 and less than 10 years' service, a gratuity of one month's pay for each year of service, with a bonus of 3 months' pay as above.	Men of 5 and less than 10 years' service, a gratuity of one month's pay for each year of service. No bonus!
Men of less than 5 years' service, a gratuity of six months' pay.	Men of less than 5 years' service, transfer to other Regiments or to the Reserve. No option of gratuity!

"Why should there be any difference in the terms of disbandment? The disastrous effects of the policy (?) will too certainly be seen when the next so-called 'Mutiny' takes place, as some day it will, a 'Mutiny' for which the Government of India is preparing the way by throwing broadcast over the only part of India which remained thoroughly loyal to it, thousands of justly discontented men, living monuments of the injustice, illiberality, and breach of good faith towards its servants of the British Government, and by carefully training the troops of the Feudatory Native States so that they may have a better chance of success than they had thirty-three years ago. The recent article in 'The Supplement to the Gazette of India published at Allahabad' showed that the two Simla gangs spoken of above anticipate (and let us hope correctly) that they may no longer have it all their own way, and that a little dispassionate unprejudiced judgment will be brought to bear on their schemes. Unfortunately some short time must elapse before this desirable event can happen, and the Madras Army must be prepared to see during that short time three more regiments certainly—five probably—wiped out."

HOUSE OF COMMONS.—JAN. 30.

—:o:—

APPREHENDED FAMINE IN MADRAS.

Mr. HUNTER asked whether the Government had any information that certain districts in Madras, with a population of about twelve millions, were threatened with famine.

Sir J. GORST: The latest reports that have reached the Secretary of State are dated Madras, Jan. 6th. Failure of the late crops was then feared in parts of the seven districts named. No fear of famine was expressed, and prices of grains consumed by the poor were said to be well below scarcity level. Plans for opening relief works, and for dispensing other relief, are ready if necessity arises. The partial failure of the harvests has been due to the scantiness of the later rains or the north-east monsoon. Irrigated crops have also suffered in parts, though not so seriously as the dry crops. The Secretary of State has asked for fortnightly telegrams from Madras stating the condition of affairs and the steps taken to relieve distress if it occurs. These telegrams will be published. The Government has been also asked to furnish a statement of the general outturn of crops in the threatened districts.

IN the Madras Government's notification issued under the Indian Census Act, 1890, it is proposed to confer on Tahsildars and Deputy Tahsildars in independent charge, as also on Executive Engineers in charge of navigable canals, the power to appoint census officers. Such a power is required in their case in order to avoid the delay that might otherwise occur in the appointment of these officers, especially if at the last moment the agency employed is found to fail and fresh appointments have to be made.

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 28, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 24th January; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 22nd January; and from [Bengal to the 21st January.

THE annual Convocation of the University of Bombay for the purpose of conferring degrees on the graduates of the University was held on Tuesday, under the presidency of the Hon. Mr. Justice Birdwood, the newly-appointed Vice-Chancellor, and in the presence of a large gathering of Fellows and the general public, who were admitted by cards.

IN addressing the Senate, the Vice-Chancellor alluded to the absence of certain members of the Senate, either on account of death or retirement from this country, and in doing so he paid a well merited compliment to his worthy predecessor, Dr. Wordsworth, of whose influence and example, he said, they could never be unmindful.

FOR the first time, he proceeded to say, in the history of this or any other University, a lady (Dr. Pechey-Phipson) had been appointed to be a member of the Senate. For more than six centuries ladies had held office as professors of medicine from time to time in the ancient University of Bologna; but never, so far as he (the Vice-Chancellor) knew, had ladies been admitted to share in the responsibility of the administration of a great University.

AT yesterday's meeting of the Legislative Council a Select Committee was nominated to consider and report upon the Age of Consent Bill within a month. The Committee consists of Sir A. Scoble, Mr. Hutchins, Mr. Bliss, Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, Mr. Nulkar, and Mr. Mahomed Ali Khan.

THE Central Mahomedan Association, Calcutta, which controls many branches throughout Bengal, approves of the Bill. The British Indian Association will petition the Viceroy to postpone consideration of it for six weeks.

THE Borah Ghar Kshatri Sabha, Lahore, has passed a resolution that the lowest age of marriage be sixteen years for a boy and twelve years for a girl.

THE latest reports from Cabul state that the Ameer is still very weak after his late attack of gout, which was the most severe he has suffered from.

INFORMATION has lately arrived from Khost to the effect that the Ameer had sent four regiments from Cabul and Ghazni to Khost to establish his authority on that part of his frontier, and to punish the Mangal tribe.

IN a few weeks the Sikkim Commissioners will meet to arrange the details of the Treaty agreement. A frontier mart will have to be chosen for the trade with Tibet, and the grazing question also remains to be settled.

DURING the past year, from April 1st to November 15th, 255½ miles of new railway were opened for traffic in India. This includes forty-five miles on the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, and fifty-seven on the Tirhoot line, and sixty-three on the Southern Mahratta, Bellary-Kistna section.

A TELEGRAM from Katha reports the surrender of the notorious Nga Hmat, an official of the ex-Wuntho, who attacked and burnt Kainggyr last year. Nga Hmat was the only remaining dacoit leader of importance in Katha.

THE new telegraph line from Calcutta to Bombay, viâ the Bengal-Nagpur Railway, will be opened for traffic at end of February.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned the appointment of a Revenue Commissioner for Beluchistan, Mr. Barnes being the first incumbent.

THE question of establishing a Central Record Office in Colcutta for the ordered arrangement and preservation of papers of the Government of India is to come up for final disposal by the Viceroy very shortly.

THE annual meeting of the Lady Dufferin Fund will be held in Calcutta on February 9th.

THE Bengal-Nagpur Railway will probably be opened about February 12th.

INFLUENZA has again appeared in Calcutta. Attacking, it seems, the Fort in the first place, the microbe has been touring about the public buildings of the city seeking its victims, and with success.

THE official rate of exchange in transactions between the Secretary of State and the Government of India for the ensuing year has been fixed at 1s. 6½d.

EARLY in March Mr. Lyall, Commissioner of Chittagong, proceeds to England, and will be succeeded by Mr. Oldham.

WE are glad to learn that Sir Henry Harrison is pronounced to be out of danger.

THE Telegraph Department will complete their new telephone exchange at Cawnpore next month. It is intended also to open a similar exchange at Mandalay.

EXTENSIVE repairs are to be carried out this year in two cables which link Ceylon with India. There are numerous faults which require to be repaired, particularly in the older cable, which was laid a quarter of a century ago.

MR. HARE has just returned to Mandalay from Lashio, having reconnoitred the country to the north-east of the capital of Upper Burma for a telegraph line. This will be laid in due course, as it is important to have quick communication with the Northern Shan States.

MR. VAN SOMEREN, Superintendent of Post Offices, Pindi Division, will be in charge of the postal arrangements with the Black Mountain Expedition.

MR. O'CALLAGHAN during his tour in Burma will examine the alignment of the Katha branch of the Sagain Mogaung Railway with a view to work on that section being commenced from Katha itself.

THE Committee, composed of Mr. R. G. Macdonald, Colonel Coaker, and Captain Browne, which was appointed to consider the question of simplifying the system of State Railways accounts, has completed its work. The preliminary report, embodying suggestions for the discussion by railway officials, will be sent in shortly by Mr. Macdonald, who then proceeds on furlough to England.

THE starting of the Miranzai expedition has been hindered by the weather, rain having fallen heavily in the neighbourhood of Kohat. The first column is at Kohat, the second at Ibrahimzai, and the third at Shenkot.

THE orthodox Hindus of Calcutta intend, it is said, holding a mass meeting to protest against the Age of Consent Bill.

IN connection with the announcement made as to the raising of the Native Cavalry, the pay of the Silladar Cavalry of the Bombay Presidency, which is already Rs. 30 per month for the sowar, will be raised to Rs. 31.

MORE retirements are about to take place among officers of the "blocked" years in the Indian Telegraph Department, Mr. Laughlin, Superintendent of Stores, and Mr. H. Maclean, officiating Superintendent of the Allipore Workshops, having accepted the higher rate of pension offered. Mr. J. J. Allen takes up the work of Government electrician at Calcutta on return from leave early in April.

IT is now believed that no Magazine Rifles will reach India before the conclusion of the current financial year, but 75,000 Martinis will be received to complete the re-armament of the Native Army.

NOTES.

WITH the exception of the telegrams from Rangoon, which tell of further disturbances in Upper Burma and its frontier, the latest news from India refers chiefly to the Government Bill for the protection of Indian child-wives, which is being made the cause of real or pretended agitation amongst a large portion of the Native community, possibly at the instigation of certain interested wire-ullers.

ON the evening of January 22nd a public meeting protesting against the Bill was held in Calcutta, at the premises of Maharaja Karnal Krishna, when it is reported that three thousand persons representing all sections of the Hindu community were present, besides representatives from the Mahommedan community. Letters or telegrams were received from all parts sympathising with the objects of the meeting—amongst others from Sir Jotindra Mohun Tagore, her Highness the Maharanee Surnomoye, the Maharajas of Durbhanga, Dinagepore, Krishnagore, and Nattore, besides from a number of Zemindars and other Native gentlemen of position.

The gist of the resolutions passed may be summed up in the preamble to them—that the meeting, "while thanking the Government for its benevolent intentions, deprecates all social reforms by the Legislature as at present constituted, and is of opinion that, under present circumstances, any reform affecting our Society to be useful and permanent must come from within, and not be forced by the present system of legislation."

THIS appears modestly reasonable enough, but what says the Hindu, a leading organ of Native public opinion? It candidly admits that it is vain to trust to the spontaneous action of the Hindu community in the direction of social reform. "Such spontaneous action," it says, "has been in progress for the last fifty years, and the result is too sadly obvious to require definite reference. That millennium of enlightened Hindu society, which has worked its own regeneration unaided by an external force, we fear, will remain for ever in the imagination of well-meaning friends of Indian progress."

IN the meantime, it is satisfactory to learn that the Government of India had decided to publish in the official Gazette the information upon which it has appeared necessary to legislate for the purpose of raising the age of legal protection for married children from ten years to twelve. By taking this course "there will be no doubt possible," says the Bombay Gazette, "to honest minds as to the urgent necessity for recognising the existence of the evil and taking some steps to check it, by affixing to practices unfortunately too prevalent in Bengal—and not in Bengal only—the stigma of criminality."

ANOTHER kind of conference for the reform of a social evil has been held in Calcutta—a conference to put down the vice of gambling. But there was a difference of opinion amongst several of the reverend gentlemen who spoke as to what constituted gambling. One at least thought that whist at two anna points did not come under that evil definition, but should rather be encouraged as a mild and innocent solace in the evening for the cares and worries of an Indian day. But the discussion widened, and a Bengali speaker informed his audience that among the Natives it was not uncommon for a bet to be made on the quantity one could eat. "Sometimes a bet was laid that a man would eat at one sitting three or four seers of flesh or sweetmeats. Was this gambling?" Without pretending to answer the question, we agree however, in the comment of the journal from which we quote the story, that to legislate for men of this sort would be removing a natural means for the gradual extirpation of fools.

HERE is an instance of the difficulties attending census operations in Bengal. A "Handi"—that is, a family—is the present unit of the Census system, but the word also means a cooking pot. An enumerator received instructions to count the "handis" in his block, and he accordingly walked into a house and began to count the cooking pots of the alarmed householder under the idea that he was thus forwarding the Census operations. This is an actual incident, vouched for by a Census officer.

A DANGER, says the Englishman, which remotely threatens the Indian tea industry, is that the Chinese Government may wake up to the suicidal policy of crushing their trade by heavy export duties. Great as the success of our tea cultivation has been, the fact should not be overlooked that many gardens are now worked at a loss, and that some of the successful ones are not doing what might be accomplished if quality as well as quantity were made a factor in the preparation of tea. The planters deserve all praise for what they have done, but they have been greatly assisted by the action of the Chinese Government. But the Chinese have become well alive to the loss of trade, and are now doing what they can to improve the quality of the tea exported. The next step will probably be the substitution of other taxation. The condition of the industry has, in fact, become a burning question, and in face of what the Celestials may any day do to relieve the grower and exporter it would be prudent for us in India to produce the best qualities of tea, and cure it so thoroughly as to remove the present complaint of its uncertain keeping qualities.

IT is assuring to learn that the builder of the last large house that collapsed in Bombay is to be put on his trial for manslaughter. But the Bombay papers think it is not so well that the Municipal inspectors are to be left to enjoy the wages which they did not earn. The Executive Engineer to the Municipality told the coroner, at the inquest on the victims of the late disaster, that jerry-building could only be prevented by appointing two inspectors to take turns all day and watch at each house under construction. This is theoretically true; just as it is true that to prevent crime a policemen would require to be night and day at the heels of every possible criminal.

THE Civil and Military Gazette says the visit of his Imperial Highness the Czarewitch to Lahore is specially interesting from the fact that this is the capital of the Province which, only a year or two ago, the misguided Dulip Singh pretended that he was going shortly to take from us with Russian aid. Dulip Singh, penitent and pardoned, and Lahore en fête to-day—and lined with Sikh soldiers—to greet the Czar's son as the honoured guest of the British Government, afford a curious sequel to such vain imaginings; and perhaps we may be allowed to hope that the whole page of history to which such ideas belong will soon be turned down, put away and forgotten. At any rate, we may feel confident that the Imperial guest of our Government will not carry away any other ideas of Lahore than such as are suited to the picturesque and hospitable centre of a prosperous, populous, and contented province of the British Empire; and a province which may, when H.I.H. in the fulness of time ascends the throne of all the Russias, be joined by friendly and direct railway communication with his own Asiatic possessions."

THIS is good; but what a change has come over the Civil and Military Gazette since the days of its "Cory"-Russo-phobism!

(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 8.

The standing committee appointed at the Calcuita meeting of the opponents to the Age of Consent Bill has published a number of medical opinions which it has collected. The writers are, with one exception, Native practitioners. They all assert that puberty is frequently attained before the age of 12, and that they have never seen a case of injury to a child-wife from premature cohabitation; whence they draw the inference that such cohabitation is rare, and that therefore the Bill is unnecessary.

The opposition to the Bill continues to be active throughout Bengal, but its tactics appear somewhat changed, and most of the meetings, instead of asking the Goverment to drop the Bill entirely, suggest the modification of it by the substitution of attainment to puberty for the age of 12. Notwithstanding Mr. Hume's letter, the Congress seems resolved to adhere to the policy of not taking up any social question, for it has not issued any official expression of its views on this subject, and some prominent members of that party, who have been openly stated to be opposed to the Bill, have not denied the statement. On the other hand, Mr. Monomohun Ghose, one of the leaders of the advanced party, has published a paper in which, while arguing that the measure is not the best or most effectual remedy for the evils which undoubtedly exist, he urges the Government to pass a law declaring no marriage to be valid if either party to it is under the age of 12.

The Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces made a striking speech when laying the foundation of a zenana hospital at Lucknow last week. Nothing in India, he said, was so remarkable as the low standard of individual comfort with which the Natives were satisfied. This was mainly due to the absence of public order and security during long centuries, and in recent times to indifferentism. It was, he added, one of the greatest duties of the English in India to attack this citadel of indifferentism, and to introduce an elevated standard of comfort.

For some days the traffic of most of the railways has been disorganised owing to the great rush of pilgrims towards the Ganges and its tributaries. This is due to the fact that to-day is what is called the Audhody Jog festival, which occurs at irregular intervals, and is believed to be a particularly auspicious occasion for bathing in the sacred stream. It last occurred in 1864, and will not happen again for fifty years. The authorities are taking precautions to prevent outbreaks of cholera, which so often follow these festivals.

A portion of the Black Mountain force, consisting of the 4th Sikhs, the 32nd Pioneers, and a company of Sappers, will concentrate at Darband on the 22nd inst., and will commence improving the roads towards the frontier.

THE AMEER OF AFGHANISTAN.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 8.

The latest news from Cabul states that the Ameer is making steady progress towards recovery.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 7.

Some fighting has taken place in the Shan State of Momeik. On January 28th the troops under Major Kelsall surprised the lower village belonging to Kahon Tsawbwa, driving out the enemy, who made a determined stand. Kahon's brother and five others were killed, and many wounded were seen being carried away. The village was burnt. Our loss was one private of the Devonshire Regiment killed, and one military policeman dangerously wounded.

Next morning Kahon's upper village was occupied after a slight resistance. Captain O'Donnell's reinforcements have reached him. Both the columns sent against Thetta arrived there on the 5th inst. without experiencing opposition. The Thetta Chins promise payment of the balance of their fines.

The column marching to Thetta from Gangaw camped en route at two villages hitherto unvisited.

The Chin frontier continues to be disturbed. It is now being worked from three separate centres, independently of the force sent to Thetta. The Chin bohs, who have been raiding and who recently carried off six captives, are being attacked by a force from Yawdwin. The Boungshes are being dealt with by columns from Haka and Gangaw. The Kanhows are being visited by a force from Haka and another from the Tammu Valley. If the Kanhows agree to restore their captives and pay a heavy fine, their submission will be accepted. If their reply be unfavourable, Tingzang, their principal town, will be attacked.

The troops on the Chin frontier have been reinforced. The disturbed condition of the Chin country is largely due to the unsatisfactory arrangements made for the discharge of political duties prior to Sir A. Mackenzie's arrival. Mr. Ross the Political Officer left in charge of the frontier, is an Assistant Commissioner of four years' standing who was previously engaged in the timber trade in Burma. During Mr. Ross's lengthened absences from Haka, the most important station, the political affairs were left in the charge of a semi-educated Burman clerk. There was no Chin interpreter at Haka, and Mr. Wetherell, assistant to Mr. Ross, who was recently killed, was very young.

The mismanagement of the first movement against Thetta and the general disturbance on the frontier show that a change of Political Officers is urgently required. Some senior and tried officer ought to be appointed to take charge of the Chin frontier, which for some time will remain in a critical condition.

Sir A. Mackenzie has left Mandalay to visit Bhamo.

FEB. 8.

Another successful skirmish is reported from Momeik. A detachment of Goorkhas, commanded by Lieutenant Tighe, attacked the Kyusa village, killing 13 of the enemy. One Goorkha was killed. The enemy is now at Soikon.

INFANT MARRIAGE REFORM.

CALCUTTA, Feb. 8.

Mr. Manamohun Ghose, Advocate of the High Court, who acted as chairman of the reception committee of the recent National Indian Congress, has published an elaborate note upon the Age of Consent Bill, discussing that measure in all its bearings. The writer holds that the Government is justified in interfering in social and religious customs when necessary for the repression of crime, or a practice which so shocks civilised man as to be regarded as a crime, and expresses the opinion that legislation is desirable for suppressing the evils of child-marriage. Nevertheless, Mr. Ghose finds fault with the present Bill on many grounds, and in support of his contention refers to English law under which a husband is held to be incapable of certain offences against his wife. The present anomaly is, he observes, introduced into the Indian code, contrary to Macaulay's views, without discussion, and he argues therefore that the whole question should be reopened and the anomaly removed, its effect being to render the position of a husband in India worse than that of an ordinary felon in England under the statute of 1885. Mr. Ghose considers the present Bill if passed into law will either be mischievous in its effects or will remain a dead letter, and concludes by urging the Government to disallow marriages under twelve by a civil law, which he believes would strike at the root of the evil, and meet with no greater opposition on religious grounds than the proposed measure, which, while penal, is ineffectual. The writer advocates the extension to India of the British criminal statute for the protection of unmarried girls and child-widows.

THE QUEEN has commanded that the grant of the India medal, 1854, with a clasp inscribed "Chin-Looshai, 1889-90," shall be extended to all troops and others who between Nov. 15, 1889, and April 30, 1890, "served with the Burma column, including those employed on the lines from Gangaw to Yezagyo and the garrisons of Fort White and intermediate posts to Kalemyo, from the date of concentration at Gangaw, and to all who served with the Chittagong column from the date of leaving Demagiri." A bronze medal and clasp of similar pattern is to be given to all authorised Government followers who accompanied the troops so engaged. Officers and men who have the medal already will receive the clasp only.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

EMIGRATION TO NATAL.

(Pioneer.)

The demand for Indian emigrants in Natal is steadily on the increase. Within the last few years numbers of the coolies who had worked out their indentures, and did not wish to return to India, left the coast and obtained work on the railways up-country at considerably advanced rates of wages, while not a few set out to try their fortune in the Transvaal gold-fields. The consequence is that the demand for fresh coolies has been increasing, and last year ten vessels with emigrants, eight from Madras and two from Calcutta, left India for the colony, as against four in the year preceding. Since the first immigrants landed in Natal over thirty years ago over forty thousand have found their way there, and over eight thousand children have been born in the colony. Deducting those who have died, or returned to India, or left the colony in search of employment elsewhere, there remained at the close of last year an Indian population of over thirty thousand. Some idea of the earnings of the immigrants may be got from the fact that a sum of £368 was remitted last year to friends and relatives in India; while at the end of the year £3,700 was at the credit of Indian depositors in the Government Savings Bank. The greater adaptability and general intelligence of the Madrassi coolie, as compared with emigrants from Northern India, is brought out strikingly in these returns. Not only were the shipments far more numerous from Madras than from Calcutta, but also, though the two shiploads from the latter port are said to have consisted of fine able-bodied men and women, the Protector of Immigrants at Durban states that he was considerably disappointed in their capacity for work. "Almost all employers of Indian labour on the coast," he remarks, "prefer the Madras men; they are more active and intelligent, and adapt themselves better to the work required on a sugar estate, and in the management and working of machinery." On the other hand, there is no reason why the up-country men should be discouraged. They are preferred for farming in the interior, where the methods of agriculture are apparently different from those in vogue on the coast, and where stock-farming is more common; and, as is natural, they stand the cold of the uplands far better than the Madrassi. The statement of the Protector of Immigrants at Durban is unnecessarily diffuse; but that of the Agent-General at Demeraraerrs is in the opposite direction; it is a mere collection of statistical tables, and gives no information as to the condition of the immigrants or their earnings. This is the more to be regretted as British Guiana is a far more important centre of attraction for the Indian emigrant than Natal, and those who go thither make excellent wages. Altogether the total number of immigrants intoduced into the colony last year amounted to 3,432. Since the first shipment was sent in 1883 there have been no less than 264,447.

THE RACE OF HAILEYBURY MEN.

(Pioneer.)

A departing Lieutenant-Governor announces with a touch of pathos to an audience composed almost entirely of competition wallahs that he is the last of the race of Haileybury men who will ever rule over the great Province which he leaves with a mixture of regret and relief. He surrenders his post in accordance with his own desire, and, perhaps, feels that the times are out of joint for him and his like. His associations with the Hertfordshire College are probably purely literary. He is still something of a scholar, and his love of Horace and Virgil was fostered and reached its pleasant culmination at Haileybury. His audience has nothing but respectful sympathy for a sentiment so respectable. They are not Haileybury men themselves, but the power of names is great, and they are willing to believe, in the words of a previous speaker, that there is nothing better than a good Haileybury man. The departing ruler's successor would not be the strong and good man he is if he did not feel that good men with other beginnings were at least equally good. He, too, has his Alma Master. He has discoursed with dons, and sipped port in Oxford common rooms. It was a long while ago, almost as far back as the period to which the Haileybury reminiscences of his predecessor extend, but a faint flavour of academic culture clings to him yet, and it rejoices him to know that the young civilians of to-day have had their training at Balliol or Oriel, at Trinity or John's. He yields them a half conscious precedence over the men of an intermediate time, the unmitigated products of crammers' classrooms and London lodging-houses. These, again, probably find academic reminiscences wearisome. If they have been educated at some great public school, the idiosyncrasies of their headmaster are more interesting to them than anecdotes of the most autocratic and whimsical of college tutors. If they have been bred at some Scottish University, they rake together the pawky and richly Doric utterances of some bygone Professor. If they have lacked even that advantage, they have stories of the humours of private schools which recall Dotheboys Hall. There is something touching in the fidelity with which the successful Indian official's memory goes back untravelled to the days when he was not yet sold to India. Reminiscences of the school or college where he learned the Latin and Greek, which he has all but forgotten, appeal more vividly to his imagination than memories of the District where he acquired the elements of administration, where he was inducted into the rudiments of excise, the true meaning of the Penal Code as applied to Asiatics, the practical working of European jurisprudence in the sunny and lethargic East.

THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

(Bombay Gazette.)

One misses the thrilling stories which the Central Provinces Administration Report has been wont to furnish at Christmas time of the previous year's escapades of Tantia Bhil. That which has just come to hand is the first for many years which has not contained a startling narrative of a brush with or a hair-breadth escape from the Robin Hood of the Central Provinces, whose power for mischief certainly eclipsed that of his English prototype. The Report for 1889-90 contains what, perhaps, those who had a close acquaintance with Tantia forced upon them will regard as much better—the account of Tantia's capture. It is more briefly told than it might have been. Details of the "successful operations" would have been interesting. Tantia, as was reported at the time, has been executed. Bondrya, one of Tantia's principal lieutenants, essayed to take his place and defy the authorities after the manner of his old leader. But with two of his assistants he was mortally wounded in an attempt to resist capture, and the districts which these dacoits used to harry are now secure. This is a consummation which is officially declared to be chiefly due to the energy with which the present Agent to the Governor-General for Central India has insisted on the co-operation of the Indore authorities with the police of the Central Provinces, in marking down and surrounding the dacoit gangs which when hard pressed had found sanctuary in the Native States. Of course many dacoities which were attributed to Tantia were the work of others, but the gang of Mahomedan Bhils who had been carrying on wholesale robberies, for which the more notorious leader received the credit, has also been broken up, and the Chief Commissioner claims that order has been restored in the only portion of the Central Provinces in which organised dacoity has obtained a footing. From Burma, too, come reports of the decline of dacoity. In Lower Burma the principal work of the past four years has been the restoration of the order and the suppression of the gangs of dacoits which remained in many districts after the close of the war in Upper Burma. There are now, we are assured, no organised bands of dacoits in any district of Lower Burma, except one or two numerically insignificant, on the borders of the Thayetmyo district. In Upper Burma, too, organised dacoity is stated to be partially extinct. There is not now a single dacoit leader with any considerable following. Such leaders as have not been either killed or captured are in hiding, deserted by their former adherents. Large numbers of released or surrendered dacoits are living under surveillance, but otherwise unmolested, engaged in peaceful pursuits. So successful have been the operations against dacoits in Upper Burma that it has been found possible to reduce the military police, and still further reductions are in contemplation. Dacoity will ere long exist only in history—disorganised dacoity becomes mere larceny, and a thin partition only divides this from petty theft. This is shown by the reports of the Central Provinces which with the decrease of the dacoity report a heavy increase of minor pilferings. Combinations may be effectually broken down, but the thieving instinct remains, and will assert itself.

THE CONGRESS.

(Indian Daily News.)

People who are not very considerate of the feelings of others are often peculiarly sensitive themselves. This characteristic is noticeable in the Congress, and is strikingly manifested by the speeches, more than by the resolution itself, referring to the action of the Bengal Government in giving effect to the order of the Government of India against officials attending political meetings. With the resolution as framed and passed no particular fault is be found, but the hysterical attitude of the proposer and seconder—particularly the seconder—was quite uncalled-for, and not a little ridiculous. After all, the action of the Government is only the natural outcome of the Congress's own youthful indiscretions. It set itself, or some of its more prominent members set it, very distinctly and decidedly against the Government, which was treated with scant respect, to say the least of it, in certain Congress manifestoes. That the Government, under such circumstances, should object to the further attempt that was made to parade certain of its officials against it was unavoidable. The Congress, at one stage of its history at least, was not an assemblage in which any servant of the Government could take part with a feeling of self-respect that could accord with his duty as a loyal servant. Officials, no doubt, are servants of the public in the sense that they are paid with public money, but they are in a more definite sense servants of the Government, and the discipline necessary to good administration would soon be seriously disturbed if they were to acquire the habit of attending and taking part in meetings at which the policy and acts of the Government were criticised from a resolutely hostile standpoint. As for the advice that officials would do well not to attend Congress gatherings even as spectators, it is obviously difficult to draw the line between spectator and sympathiser on such occasions; and if the Congress merely wishes to have the point conceded that the few officials who might be drawn to their assemblages by a feeling of idle curiosity can visit them if they choose without fear of Government's displeasure, it is surely a matter scarcely worth all the indignation wasted on it. Such strength and importance as the Congress possesses or is destined to attain does not and will not depend on the amount of sympathy and support it can command amongst Native officials. It is only worthy of attention as a popular movement, a means of giving expression to sentiments and aspirations of a section of the public, which, though so numerous and important as the Congress itself asserts is still a considerable section, and one entitled to a hearing when it submits any representation affecting questions of public interest and concern in a proper manner. Consequently, there is no real injury to the Congress in the prohibition, and the Congress-wallahs might fairly be satisfied with the liberty they enjoy to talk and write as they please, without seeking to make a grievance out of the prohibition against Government servants taking part in their movement.

DIFFICULTIES OF FIELD TELEGRAPHY.

(Times of India.)

A painful story of the difficulties connected with field telegraphy is told for the first time in the Administration Report of the Indian Telegraph Department in connection with the Chin-Lushai Expedition. Mr. E. O. Walker's splendid services were very gracefully acknowledged in Brigadier-General Tregear's despatch in March last, and the C.I.E., by which these services have been still further recognised. was well deserved. It remains for Mr. F. E. Dempster, the Assistant Superintendent of Telegraphs, in charge of Party No. 2, to relate some of these difficulties in detail. Work commenced, Mr. Dempster tells us, on the 3rd October, 1889, and by the 19th December 123 miles of line had been completed to Kan, and offices opened at that place, Thilin, and Gangaw. By the 15th February the line had been extended to Haka, a further distance of sixty-three miles, and an office opened, making a total length of line from Pauk of 186 miles. "The circumstances under which this work was carried out were trying in the extreme, and the party suffered considerably. Mr. J. Cress, Sub-Assistant Superintendent, and one lineman died; Mr. W. Hopkins, Sub-Assistant Superintendent, Telegraph Master T. Johnstone, and five linemen were invalided. Out of a total strength of 110 workmen, twelve died, and sixty were rendered unfit for work." The trials of the party was well illustrated in Mr. Dempster's report. The road to Yeydu over the ghaut between Pauk and Thilin was in an almost indescribable condition. Elephants sank in to their girths, and carts had to be dragged through the mud with their axles resting on the surface, the wheels not nearly touching the comparatively firm surface below. Carts took from two to four days going from Yeybeyu to Yeydu, seven miles, and many bullocks died of exhaustion. "Fever simply raged, and, in addition, the men suffered from sore feet. The line in the mud attacked the flesh between the toes, which gradually opened out and in many cases the main joints in the foot were exposed, the toes looking as long as fingers." From Amybaw Mr. Dempster sent back two linemen and seven coolies for treatment. The fever increased daily, however, and the rain kept on so persistently that they could only work for an hour or two, till one day at Acheeban every man in camp was ill, and only about ten were able to stand. After this the health of the party gradually grew worse till it eliminated in a general breakdown at Minywa. "I was very ill; I did not dare to move Mr. Johnstone, he was so weak. Two of the sub-inspectors, all the linemen but one, nearly all the mahouts, and about eighty per cent of the coolies, were put entirely hors de combat. I could only muster one sub-inspector, one lineman, and about fifteen men for work. The wire reached Gangaw on the 26th November, and of my original party of over a hundred, twenty-six comparatively fit men came in." We shall return to the Departmental Report on a future occasion.

MEDICAL AID TO THE WOMEN OF INDIA.

(Madras Times.)

It is now well known to the public that Lady Dufferin's good intentions, although they have borne much fruit, have not led to anything like such important results as might have been expected from the influence of her prestige and that of Lord Dufferin, if not from the importance of the subject to which she asked Indians to devote attention. Without liberal supplies of money, no great advance can be made in the direction of supplying reliable medical aid to Indian women; but the fact appears to be that many Hindus are averse to any changes in this matter. They appear to fear that the lady doctor will bring about a revolution among their women folk. Perhaps Mrs. Peechey Phipson's vigorous remarks have not tended to allay this fear, but, at any rate, Hindu gentlemen have manifested a surprising amount of reluctance to contribute, and the natural result is that the progress made has been slow, and that the future is not by any means so bright as could be desired. The fifth annual report of the Madras Branch shows this, and yet through the gloom of depressed finances there shines forth evidence of good work done and good seed sown, that should in time bring about a complete change in the prospect of the improvement of the quality and quantity of medical aid available to the women of this country. The donations and subscriptions in Madras were less in 1890 than in 1889. In the earlier year they only amounted to Rs. 6,830; in the latter even this small figure was now maintained, collections aggregating only Rs. 41,182. "Subscriptions," the Honorary Secretary observes, "have come in very slowly. The amount of donations and subscriptions received during the year, irrespective of contributions from Local and Municipal Boards, which amount to Rs. 4,102, is Rs. 80." This is proof positive of the indifference of the public, and, in the face of these figures, but poor hope indeed can be gathered from the Honorary Secretary's statement that "there are, however, indications that the men of this part of India are beginning to recognise the association as a long felt want." Mr. Rees puts forward only a very feeble instance in support of this remark, and it may be doubted whether from that, or from what few instances we believe to be available, he is justified in generalising as he has done concerning the attitude taken up by the men of Southern India in regard to this matter.

If the Hindu's help be secured or even his resistance withheld, the prospect of progress will become greater; yet in the face of his opposition, work has been done that must bear good fruit in time if it is found possible to keep steadily attempting to make progress until the seed sown has had time to fructify. Take, for instance, the work of Miss Pauline Root, M.D. In the Madura Hospital for Women and Children 18,189 cases were treated during the year. In the course of a medical tour in the remote country lying along the Gulf of Mannar, 10,037 were treated, the majority of whom have never seen a doctor before. This gives a total of 19,526 cases treated by Miss Root. Mrs. Small, practising in Madras, finds work chiefly among Gosha Mahomedan women, and a few Brahman ladies of good family. She thinks the Native community fear that Europeans always use the knife, but she has succeeded in abusing the minds of those of most of those whom she has visited. Miss Palmer has dealt with some 7,394 cases. From these few instances alone it will be seen that many Native women have received medical aid. Miss Root's patients came from 349 villages and seventeen districts. It is fair to assume that most of the patients derived some advantage from her treatment; and if this be so, in the course of a few years there should be manifested on the part of many Indian women a desire for skilled medical aid, a desire which should grow until it presses with irresistible force upon the obstinate conservatism of those among the men who refuse to allow their women to be medically tended by Europeans and Eurasians. No matter what attitude the Hindu and Mahomedan may assume, the good work that is in progress must expand if the means can be found to keep it going. That is the first essential, and then it becomes increasingly neeessary to offer inducements to Native students, so that as the demand for skilled medical aid increases, as we trust it will increase, the opposition of the males may be undermined and perhaps stultified by the fact the Indian women are ready to attend upon the sick, taking the place of the Europeans and Eurasians who have trained them, and for whom there will still be work available among the more enlightened of the Natives of this country. If money cannot be obtained in large sums, even small donations and contributions may suffice to keep the work going until the time of justification arrives and the resistance of Conservatism is overcome.

Digitized by Google

It is pleasanter to study other sections of the report, however, than the part which treats of finances. The most promising feature of the year's work, we are told, is the exhibition of a strong desire on the part of Eurasian ladies to avail themselves of the scholarships belonging to the fund. This certainly is not much, unless it is supported by something else, for what is wanted is not only medical aid, but an opening for its admission into the homes and households of Indian women, and a desire for it on their part, together with permission from their husbands, &c., to make use of it. Against this encouraging feature, indeed, must be set one that is very discouraging. "Native ladies as yet do not, however, come forward, which is much to be regretted. One Brahman lady took up a scholarship, but resigned it subsequently." After all it is among Native ladies that work has to be done, and from among them that the most determined efforts must be made to increase the ranks of the women who devote themselves to the medical profession. The aspirations of the Eurasians are praiseworthy; the ladies who set a noble example to their Hindu and Mahomedan sisters, deserve the thanks and the gratitude of the public, but it is no disparagement of their efforts to say that until Native ladies are induced to come forward more freely to work in the field of medicine, the prospect of getting skilled medical aid supplied to Native women in general will be far from brilliant. If, as we believe to be the case, the sullen opposition of the Hindu takes its rise in his fear that the Hindu religion will be undermined, it is from Native ladies that we must expect to get relief. In the first place, students must be trained by Europeans and Eurasians, but when this has been done, the Native students may in turn train their sisters; the "contamination" of association with Europeans, the risk of propagandism, and any other evil that may be dreaded by the Hindu will be lessened; and gradually in place of the male quacks he may get skilled female practitioners to attend upon his women-folk, to watch and protect their health, with a minimum of anything calculated to offend his religious or social prejudices. If he can be made to realise this, there may be a chance of convincing him that he runs but little risk in trying to give his family the chance of receiving more care and better medical help than has been available in the past.

THE NEW GOVERNOR OF MADRAS.

ARRIVAL IN BOMBAY.

(Times of India.)

H.E. the Right Hon. Beilby Lawley, Baron Wenlock, the newly-appointed Governor of Madras, Lady Wenlock, and his Excellency's Staff, consisting of Captain the Hon. R. T. Lawley, of the 7th Hussars, Military Secretary to his Excellency, Mr. J. D. Rees, C.I.E., Private Secretary, and Captain the Hon. A. Baring, A.D.C., arrived in the mail steamer Assam, which reached here at noon on Monday, January 19th, and landed at the Apollo Bunder about 12.30, or nearly five hours beyond the time at which they were expected. A Government notification had been issued, intimating that his Excellency would land at the Apollo Bunder at 7.45 A.M., and that he would be received on landing with the honours due to his position. Consequently 100 rank and file of the 2nd Gloster Regiment, with band and regimental colours, were called upon to furnish a guard of honour, and a proportion of officers of that regiment were requested to parade at the Apollo Bunder to receive his Excellency. In consequence of the notification a Government deputation—consisting of Mr. W. Lee-Warner, C.S., Secretary to Government, Political Department, Captain John Hext, R.N., C.I.E., Director of the Indian Marine, Colonel Rhodes, Military Secretary to his Excellency Lord Harris, and Captain Cox, A.D.C. to the Governor—proceeded to the Bunder shortly after 7 A.M., and a few minutes later the guard of honour mentioned above, under the command of Captain Tufnell, followed. It was then intimated that the steamer conveying Lord Wenlock would not arrive here until 10 o'clock, when the deputation retired to the Yacht Club to await her arrival, while the guard of honour was kept waiting for about three hours and a-half, and then ordered to return to their barracks. At 11.15 A.M. three signal guns were fired announcing that the mail steamer was sighted, and about 12.15 P.M. she came into the harbour, and dropped anchor off the Apollo Bunder. Mr. Lee-Warner, C.S., then proceeded in a police launch to the steamer, followed by the Government deputation in the steam-launch Wrenn, and about three-quarters of an hour later they returned with Lord and Lady Wenlock to the Bunder, where on landing Mr. Lee-Warner introduced the new Governor of Madras to the gentlemen present, who included Brigadier-General Budgen, D.S.O., commanding the Bombay District; Mr. G. W. Vidal, C.S., Acting Chief Secretary to the Government; Mr. J. M. Campbell, C.S., C.S.I., Acting Collector of Customs; Colonel Rhodes, Military Secretary to his Excelleney the Governor; Captain Cox, A.D.C. to Lord Harris; Colonel W. H. Wilson, Commissioner of Police, Bombay; Captain Gott, commanding the Governor's Body Guard; Mr. W. C. Hughes, Secretary to Government; P.W. Department; Captain Steele, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General; Russildar-Major Rupsing, Native A.D.C. to Lord Harris; and Mr. Shivajee Dhurmajee. Seven Native servants attached to Government House, Madras, who came to Bombay last week to await the arrival of the new Governor, were also in attendance at the Bunder. A telegram received by General Budgen from Sir George Greaves from Poonah requesting to know on what day Lord Wenlock would leave Bombay for Madras was then handed by Captain Steele to Captain Cox, who informed the former that the right hon. gentleman would in all probability leave Bombay on Wednesday night. After the ceremony of introduction was over, Lord and Lady Wenlock, accompanied by Colonel Rhodes and Captain the Hon. R. T. Lawley, entered a State carriage drawn by four horses, and, escorted by thirty-two men of the Governor's Body Guard, drove away to Government House, Malabar Point, where they are being entertained by T.E. Lord and Lady Harris during their brief stay in Bombay. A salute of seventeen guns was fired from the Land Battery, announcing the arrival of the new Governor. In the evening a dinner and dance were given in his honour at Government House, Malabar Point. With regard to Lord Wenlock's landing, it may be added that the police arrangements in the harbour under the supervision of Superintendent Ingram, and at the Apollo Bunder under the direction of Superintendent McDermott of the A Division, were, as usual, admirably carried out.

DEPARTURE FOR MADRAS.

On Wednesday night H.E. the Right Hon. Beilby Lawley, Baron Wenlock, the Governor of Madras, accompanied by Lady Wenlock, Mr. J. D. Rees, C.I.E., Private Secretary to his Excellency, Captain the Hon. R. T. Lawley, of the 7th Hussars, Military Secretary to the Governor, and Captain the Hon. A. Baring, A.D.C., left for Madras by the Raichore mail train from the Victoria Terminus at about 8.30 P.M. A few Government officials assembled at the station to see Lord Wenlock off, amongst whom were observed Brigadier-General Budgen, D.S.O., Commanding the Bombay District; Mr. G. W. Vidal, C.S., Acting Chief Secretary to Government; Mr. J. M. Campbell, C.S., C.S.I., Acting Collector of Customs; Colonel Rhodes, Military Secretary to Lord Harris; Mr. W. C. Hughes, Secretary to Government, P.W.D.; Captain Steele, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General; Mr. W. Lee Warner, C.S., Secretary to Government, Political Department; Captain Forbes and Captain the Hon. St. Leger Jervis, Aides-de-Camp to H.E. Lord Harris; Mr. Shivajee Dharmajee, and Risaldar-Major Roop Sing, Native Aide-de-Camp. A few minutes before the departure of the train H.E. Lord Harris drove Lord and Lady Wenlock to the station, where on alighting they were received by the gentlemen present. Lord and Lady Wenlock having shaken hands with those present, Lord Wenlock, in company of Brigadier-General Budgen and Captain Steele, inspected the guard of honour, and afterwards entered a saloon that had been specially sent from Madras, and the train soon started on its journey. The guard of honour of the 21st Regiment Marine Battalion, consisting of 100 rank and file, with regimental band and colours, which was drawn up on the platform, presented arms on the train leaving, and the band played the National Anthem. A salute of seventeen guns was fired at sunrise on Thursday announcing Lord Wenlock's departure.

BENGAL.

(Jan. 21.)

AMONG the new arrivals in Calcutta is Mr. Smith, son of the leader of the House of Commons, who is making a short tour in India.

THE Viceroy will give an evening party at Government House, Calcutta, in honour of the Cesarewitch on the night of the 26th inst., and the Lieutenant-Governor will follow with one at Belvedere on the next evening. His Imperial Highness will proceed to Darjeeling on the 28th, returning in time to attend the race meeting on the 31st. He will spend only some four days in Calcutta itself, leaving for Southern India en route for Colombo on the 2nd February.

THE Englishman says:—"Of the various questions discussed by the Diocesan Conference last week, by far the most important, the most practical, and that from the consideration of which the most good seems likely to result, was the relief of European and Eurasian poverty in Calcutta. Although the effectual relief of distress is a large and difficult problem, it is not by any means hopeless to attempt it; on the contrary, it is one of those labours in which no effort is altogether thrown away, and in which if proper organisation could be secured, a great amount of success might be hoped for." And our contemporary arrives at the conclusion that "there is no reason to doubt that a good deal can be done if the matter is taken in hand on a large scale. First of all it is necessary that complete information should be collected and suggestions formulated, and this might, perhaps, be more efficiently done by a Government Commission than by a private Committee. When it has been done the Government can be applied to for educational and monetary assistance and for the introduction of a Poor Law. The matter was very ably discussed at the Conference, and any effort that is now made is likely to receive public sympathy and support.'

(Jan. 22.)

A MEMORIAL, signed by ten thousand people, has been sent to the Maharajah of Travancore, praying that a larger proportion of Natives of that State be entertained in the higher grades of the public service. The memorialists aver that Travancoreans are "inevitably drifting towards political and material degeneration."

THE Madras Governmont is of opinion that the census of the Javadi hills in North Arcot is likely to be more efficiently carried out if undertaken in the healthy season, that is in the rains, and accepts a recommendation of the collector to that effect. The risk of double remuneration will not be materially increased.

COLONEL T. GRACEY, the Acting Consulting Engineer for Railways, Madras, has gone to inspect the portion of the Villanuram-Guntakui State Railway between Tiruvanamalai and Tirupatti, which has been completed.

MR. DESRAJ URS, of the Mysore Province, and a jagirdar of the Mysore Province, who enlisted in the British Service as Subedar, 3rd Madras Light Cavalry, to acquire a thorough knowledge of military tactics and discipline, has submitted his resignation through the British Resident. While in British Service he distinguished himself with his regiment in Upper Burma, and received a medal and clasp. On returning from Burma his services were lent to the Mysore Government, and he was appointed Aide-de-Camp to the Maharajah of Mysore. It is believed that in future he will hold the position of Assistant Military Secretary to the Mysore Government.

THE elective principle, which has been in operation since 1885, having proved a failure in the Calicut Municipality, says a local correspondent, the council meetings being constantly adjourned for want of a quorum, the attendance at meetings when held being 50 per cent. of the total strength, and the affairs generally of the municipality being neglected, Government has resolved to abolish the elective system there, keeping the appointment of the councillors and chairman in the Government's own hands. Government is prepared to appoint a paid chairman to remedy the existing defects. This has roused the Calicut community, who have just held a mass meeting, which resolved to petition Government for a reconsideration of the order.

THE Military Budget Estimate of the Madras Presidency for the year 1891-92 is remarkable chiefly for the decrease in expenditure which it shows when compared with the Budget Estimates of the present and recent years. It is less by about Rs. 3,87,000 than the sanctioned estimate for the current year; and it falls short of the sum actually spent last year by some Rs. 3,40,000. Still the total amount of money required according to the "estimate" is somewhat large. It amounts to about Rs. 3,35,00,000 for the year. Considering the reductions that have lately been made in the Madras Army, and the large saving to be effected in other ways, it is at first surprising that a greater decrease in the cost of the army is not shown. Under the grants for "malt liquor," &c., and for Burma, there is a decrease of over Rs. 11,00,000 shown. But, on the other hand, the British force in the Presidency has been augmented by a regiment of European Infantry and a Battery of Mountain Artillery, which, of course, cost money. Then a liberal allowance has been made for the purchase of transport animals and remounts, for better accommodation for the troops, and for several other very necessary improvements, all of which mean additional expense. The Military Department is to be congratulated upon being able to show that such additional expenses can be incurred while during the same period a very respectable saving is also being made.

BOMBAY.

(Jan. 24.)

MR. ACKWORTH, the Municipal Commissioner of Bombay, has received, through Mr. W. Allen, C.S., the Collector of Broach, the sum of Rs. 687-8, which has been subscribed in Broach city and district towards the Homeless Leper Relief Fund.

THE nomination for the vacancy caused in the Bombay Municipal Corporation by the resignation of Dr. E. F. Underwood closed on Thursday afternoon. As Mr. Hormusjee Cursetjee Coorlawaha was the only gentleman nominated, he was duly elected.

THE REV. W. W. BAILLIE, B.A., Chaplain of Devlali, has been granted privilege leave for one month. The Rev. H. T. H. Rowntree, on duty at the Presidency and outstations, will officiate as Chaplain of Devlali, in addition to his own duties, during his absence.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR, accompanied by Colonel Rhodes, his Military Secretary, Captain Cox, and Subedar Rupsing, visited on the 16th inst. the Veterinary College and the Bai Sakarbai Dinshaw Petit Hospital for Animals. His Excellency and staff were received and taken round the College and Hospital by Dr. Nariman, officiating Principal of the College. The Governor made inquiries about the sanitary condition of the place, and inspected the resident students' quarters.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season reports for the past week:—Slight rain in parts of Sind. Harvesting of early and late crops progressing in a few districts. Standing crops damaged by locusts in 3, and by blight and insects in 6 talukas of Kurrachee; cotton diseased in 1 taluka of Surat and blighted in 3 talukas of Bijapur; wheat in 2 talukas of Nasik and Poona, and late crops generally in 2 talukas of Satara blighted; crops otherwise good except in 3 talukas of Belgaum, where they are suffering from drought. Fodder scarce in 1 taluka of Khandesh, Nasik, Poona, Ahmednagar, and Satara, and 3 of Dharwar. Agricultural stock healthy, except in 1 taluka of Khandesh and Nasik.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, PUNJAB AND OUDH.

(Jan. 22.)

The Punjab Government is again taken to task by the Government of India for dilatoriness in producing a settlement report. As with the Gurgaon Settlement, whose appearance after many years had passed almost entitled it to rank with certain "posthumous papers" well-known in literature; so the Ludhiana Settlement Report gives an account of the assessment which took effect in 1881, which the Financial Commissioner did not report to the Local Government till 1886, and the Local Government did not send up for sanction to the Supreme Government till 1889. As the Government of India mildly remarks: "To interfere after so long an interval with arrangements which were announced under official authority, and have since remained undisturbed, would entail much hardship on the proprietors, and the delay, which could hardly have been unavoidable, puts it out of the power of the Government of India to take any other course than to sanction the proposals of the Punjab Government as they have been reported." Besides the delay in bringing out the report of the Ludhiana Settlement, the Government of India also finds fault with methods of assessment employed. While, however, says the Lahore paper, pointing to the beam in the eye of the Local Government, the Government of India may be fairly reminded of the note in its own official eyesight; which prevented the report, sent up for sanction in April, 1889, being replied to before June, 1890. Fourteen months leave an ample margin of time for the purpose.

OTHER visitors besides the Cesarewitch have been in Lahore during the last few days. Mr. Bruce, Commissioner of Derajat, who brought the Nawabs of Debra Ismail Khan and the Beluchi tumandars to meet the Cesarewitch, also brought down the Jirgas of Mahsud and Zallikhel Waziris. These wild men were greatly interested by the wonders of civilisation.

QUARRELS about women are well-known to be more serious in the Punjab than elsewhere in India. In one district last year sixteen out of twenty-six murders were the result of such quarrels, and in another the proportion was twenty-one out of forty-six. In the latter district the Deputy Commissioner thinks that the cause of this serious state of things is the difficulty of obtaining legal redress against the objects of just jealousy.

BURMA.

(Jan. 17.)

THE tracts occupied by the Karenni east of the Salween are definitely declared to belong to Sawlawi, chief of the Eastern Karenni and successor to Sawlapaw. This was one of the tracts in dispute. It is expected that the working of the forests there will now be resumed.

THE Bishop of Calcutta will leave the Presidency for a tour in Burma on February 3rd His lordship reaches Rangoon on the 7th, Tounghoo on the 12th, and Mandalay the 18th, returning to Rangoon by the 24th, where he stays till March 2nd. Afterwards he goes up to the Chittagong frontier, visiting Chittagong on March 8th and 9th, Rangamati on the 9th and 11th, and then to Noakholi on the 12th and 14th, and Barisal on the 14th and 16th.

MR. DANIELL'S party expect opposition in some quarters, and a hundred military police have been sent from Mandalay to Momeik under Captains Alban and Andrews, and sixty British infantry were were despatched from Shwebo. Patrols of British infantry will also be sent from Bernardmyo. The cause of this activity is the conduct of Kahon Tsawbwa, who when summoned by Mr. Daniell to account for the attack on a myook, in which four of the latter's men were wounded, seized Mr. Daniell's messengers, and killed one.

A RANGOON correspondent announces the capture of a notorious dacoit leader in the Katha district. Katha lies between the states of Wuntho and Momeit, and up till last year, when special operations were undertaken for their suppression, was infested by organised bands of dacoits, and was noted as one of the most disturbed districts in the Upper Province. Latterly, however, organised crime has been broken up, and the only dacoit leader of importance left uncaptured was Nga Hmat, who gained considerable notoriety in February last by attacking and burning a village in Northern Katha. Nga Hmat has now been taken, and with his capture the pacification of the district may be regarded as complete.

IT will be some time before it is possible to make the fiscal system in Upper Burma in all points uniform with that in vogue in the Lower Provinces, observes a contemporary; but the present diversity has undoubtedly its inconveniences. For instance, migration between the two provinces is now common, and is daily becoming more so, and the question recently arose whether a person who had been assessed to capitation tax in Lower Burma should on removal to Upper Burma still remain liable to pay. It has been decided that, provided he is assessed anew in Upper Burma to the tax known as thathameda, the amount due as capitation tax shall be remitted. As things are, any other course would probably be attended with practical inconveniences, and the new ruling is useful in so far as it to some extent encourages migration to the Upper Provinces; but the state of things which rendered it necessary is nevertheless anomalous.

THE navigation of the Irrawaddy above Bhamo is at this season of the year an affair of considerable difficulty and no small peril, says a contemporary, the channels being very shallow and narrow, many with only from four to six feet of water in them; and the Local Government has recently lost two valuable paddle steamers, the Pirate and the Buccaneer, which have been wrecked in attempting to make the passage from Bhamo to Senbo. The Pirate was on her way to Senbo with military rations, when she met a raft passing down at a point where there was not room for them to pass. In order to avoid a collision the Pirate sheared in towards the bank, when she struck a rock, ripping her bottom. The serang, with great presence of mind, ran the vessel on to the nearest sandbank, where she foundered, her bows in two feet of water and her stern in three-and-a-half fathoms. No lives were lost. The foundering of the Buccaneer was more serious. Like the Pirate she was on her way to Senbo, with troops and military stores, and immediately above one of the worst gorges, known as the Elephant Rock, she struck an unknown rock in midstream, ripping her bottom up fore and aft, and foundering in a few minutes in fifteen fathoms of water. One fireman and one sepoy were lost.

INFORMATION has lately arrived from Khost to the effect that the Amir has sent four regiments from Kabul and Ghazni to Khost, to establish his authority on that part of his frontier, and to punish the Mangal tribe.

IT is understood that the Director-General of Post Offices in India has addressed the Madras Railway authorities in view to a further acceleration by thirty minutes of the mail train between Madras and Bombay, as such an arrangement would be a great boon to the public, who already much appreciate the acceleration already effected.

CHILD MARRIAGE.—A strange matrimonial suit is pending in the Nasik Court, and throws a strange light on the child-marriage question, and which does credit to the opinion recently passed by Mrs. Gostling of the Bombay Fabian Society viz., that the principal consideration in effecting child-marriage was to advance the wealth of a family. In the present case one Raghopant Dada Vartak offered his granddaughter, a child aged 13, and blind, in marriage to an educated and wealthy Brahmin of sixty years of age. All the necessory formalities in connection with the ceremony were concluded, and the marriage day was finally settled—when the grandmother of the child interfered, and thus gave rise to the present case. She managed to find out that the old intended bridegroom was suffering from consumption, and naturally taking as a corollary his old age, has now declined to permit the celebration of the marriage ceremony. The old gentleman has therefore filed a suit in the Nasick Court, for the recovery of certain money paid by him to Raghopant Dada Vartak. The latter is at present on bail of Rs. 500.

THE Lahore paper says that the individuality of Hayes Sporting News is likely to be obliterated shortly. Mr. Harry Abbott has purchased the paper, which will shortly be incorporated with the Indian Planters' Gazette. Captain and Mrs. Horace Hayes contemplate a tour in Australia.

CAPTAIN W. CORNISH, Assistant Secretary in the Foreign Office, goes home on leave for a year from February. Mr. Ney Elias will undertake Captain Cornish's duties for a time in addition to his own, but it is not unlikely that when Sir Mortimer Durand returns a fresh appointment will be made.

NATIVE servants suspected of pilfering not unfrequently ask their masters to give them a thrashing rather than hand them over to the police, as the tender mercies of the police are greatly dreaded. The other day, however, a man who was discovered with stolen money on him, after getting his master to thrash him, had the audacity to summon his master for assault.

WE lately noted, says the Lahore paper, that General Gholam Haidar, Orakzai, has inspected the sites of a fort and cantonment to command the junction of the roads from Tartara, Dhakka, and Khost. We now learn that the sites have also been inspected by Sirdar Shad Muhammad Khan, Governor of Jellalabad, who proposes also to make a strong bridge over the Jellalabad river near Jellalabad.

THE CZAREWITCH IN INDIA.—Some very strange stories are afloat as to the effect which the Indian tour of the Czarewitch is leaving on the native mind. "At Delhi," writes a Correspondent of the Chronicle, "he distributed 50,000 rupees to the poor. This bounty was variously interpreted in bazaar gossip. One story went that it was preliminary to the formal handing over of British India to the Czar, an event which, said the people who were in the 'know,' would take place the following day. Another report was that he had received the money from his father, in order to seduce Her Majesty's subjects from their allegiance. Personally the Czarewitch made little impression. He looked small, mean, and unsoldierlike."

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

IT is, perhaps, as well, says the Pioneer, that no expedition was ordered to proceed against the Black Mountain tribes after General MacQueen drew the fire of the malcontents in October. The troops would have had to remain in the hills for two or three months in order to secure the complete submission of the Hassanzais; and, as it turns out, the weather has been terribly severe. There was a heavy fall of snow even so low as Abbottabad at Christmas time, and this means that the winter in the higher hills is a very hard one indeed.

FOLLOWING the precedent established since the last Black Mountain Expedition Colonel Lockhart and Major-General Elles have complete political control, though a civil officer will be attached to each force. Mr. Barker and Mr. Thomas will be in charge of the telegraph with the Black Mountain Expedition. A line will be laid from Abbottabad, viâ Oghi, to Darband, and thence to Haripur.

PARTICULAR care seems to have been taken in the selection of officers for the four new regiments which are to replace the last of the Hindustani Levies. Taking them in order we find that the Commandant of the new 33rd, which is to be composed entirely of Punjabi Mahomedans, is Lieutenant-Colonel Dyce, who has belonged to the 21st Punjab Infantry since 1869, and who has thus had a long acquaintance with the class of men now about to come under his orders. The Wing Commanders are Brevet-Major C. Hogge, who was selected for the 34th Pioneers when that regiment was raised in 1887, and Captain H. T. Faithfull, of the Musketry Staff, who has been thirteen years with the 19th Punjabs. The Adjutant is Lieutenant E. H. Watson, who now holds a similar post in the 40th Bengal Infantry. For the 38th Dogras, Lieutenant-Colonel Campbell, Second-in-Command of the 2nd Battalion 3rd Gurkhas, has been chosen as commandant, an officer who has seen service in three frontier expeditions and in the Afghan war. Major Vivian, late of the 18th Bengal Infantry, which had some Dogra companies, and Captain R. E. S. Taylor, now on duty in Russia, but already belonging to the old 38th, are the Wing Commanders. Lieut. Stainforth is the Adjutant; he has served for four and a-half years in a similar capacity in the 39th. The 2nd Battalion of the 3rd Gurkhas became the 39th (Garwhali) Regiment of Bengal Infantry, with Lansdowne as their permanent station. Their officers remain as at present, with the exception of Lieut.-Colonel Campbell, who, as just stated, takes command of the 38th Dogras. The new battalion of the 2-3rd Gurkhas, to be eventually located at Almora, have as their commandant Major H. D. Hutchinson, now second in command of the 1st Battalion. The Wing Commanders are Major Wheatley, 2nd Gurkhas, and Captain Molesworth, of the old 39th. Lieut. Woodyat accompanies Major Hutchinson as Adjutant. Four subalterns in the 39th are lucky enough to be posted to this new Gurkha regiment. The Commandant of the new 40th Baluchis is Major Graves, at present officiating as second in command of the 42nd Gurkhas, but really belonging to the 26th Punjab Infantry, with which he has served since 1876. The Wing Commanders of this frontier battalion are Captain Woon, who has done good work as Adjutant of the North-Western Railway Volunteers, and Captain Hunter, 10th Bengal Infantry, who made his mark as an energetic officer in Burma. Lieut. Dillon is Adjutant; like Major Graves, he belongs to the 26th Punjabis, of which he has been Adjutant for nearly four years. With officers of the stamp that have been selected the new regiments should make rapid progress towards attaining efficiency.

THE Bombay Army has taken steps to perpetuate the memory of Lord Napier of Magdala by raising a fund for the purpose of purchasing two handsome solid silver shields to be competed for annually by teams of British and Native soldiers at the Presidency Rifle Association meeting. The fund has been subscribed by the officers of the Bombay Army, headed by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught when Commander-in-Chief at Bombay; Major-General Pottinger, R.A., having acted as the honorary secretary to the fund. The work has been entrusted to, and successfully carried out by, Messrs. Lund, Blockley, and Carter, jewellers and silversmiths, Bombay; and their London correspondent, Mr. Herbert Blockley, 41, Duke-street, St. James's, has lately had the honour of submitting the shields to H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught for his approval. They will be despatched to India at once. The British Shield contains in the centre a medallion portrait in bas-relief of Lord Napier of Magdala, surrounded by the collar of the Exalted Order of the Star of India, from which hangs the jewel of the same Order, with the motto "Heaven's Light our Guide." Above is a figure of Victory presenting laurel wreaths, and at her feet a scroll for the inscription. On either side of the portrait panel are heads of the lion (for England) and the tiger (for India), appropriately surrounded by oak and palm respectively, while above are implements of warfare and two flags, the British and the Queen's colour; two soldiers, one British and one Native, in the uniform usual in the tropics, flank on either side an irregularly shaped shield containing a repoussée subject depicting a shooting competition. The Native Shield is of a similar description, only with a slightly different inscription.

THE proposal for the abolition of the Quartermaster-Generalships of the Bombay and Madras Armies, which came from India, has not been approved. Colonel G. C. Hogg, now in England, will therefore leave shortly for India, to succeed Brigadier-General Adam on the staff of Sir Richard Greaves, and Colonel E. H. Eyre is appointed to Madras, vice Brigadier-General Prothero, who assumed command of the Hyderabad Contingent in October last.

THE outlaw Chakai, who has entered the Amir's service, is still at Chinarak, and the Governor of Khost has recommended an increase of his allowance, which is only Rs. 5,000 per annum.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1891.

A COMPLAINT FROM RANGOON.

ALTHOUGH newspaper correspondents, after dinner orators, and departmental documents tell the tale of the ever-increasing prosperity of Lower Burma, the Rangoon Press has a very serious complaint to make. According to the last Report on the Administration of Burma the gross receipts in Lower Burma for 1889-90 amounted to £3,944,998, and the gross expenditure to £2,406,242, giving a surplus of, in round numbers, a million and a-half of conventional sterling, or 150 lakhs of rupees. These figures include the receipts and expenditure under Imperial, Provincial, Local, and the other heads under which they are distributed in the accounts. They show, in fact, the gross revenue under all heads derived from Lower Burma, and the gross amount spent in this province—the result being the very handsome surplus of 150 lakhs. In Madras, according to the Administration Report of that Presidency, the surplus, reckoned in the same way and for the same year, was 195 lakhs. Thus, although Madras is so very much larger than Lower Burma, and has been so very much longer under British rule, this province yields a surplus not very far behind that of Madras. Lower Burma's surplus is more than three-quarters that of Madras, though the revenue is very much smaller.

It is not always easy to make facts comprehensible by figures, but the Rangoon Press explains that the first complaint it makes upon statistical grounds is that, taking the gross revenue and gross expenditure of Madras with the gross revenue and gross expenditure of Lower Burma, it will be found that while Madras is allowed to have about 84 per cent. of its gross revenue spent upon it Lower Burma only gets 63 per cent. of its gross revenue. The Rangoon Gazette frankly says that so long as the deficit in Upper Burma is absorbing a considerable portion of the surplus from Lower Burma it is only fair that the initial cost of bringing Upper Burma, into order should be borne by the Province rather than by India. And this for the very good reason that the prosperity of the newly-annexed territory must mean increased prosperity to Lower Burma, as it would have made but little difference to India proper had the House of Alompra been allowed to go on muddling affairs to the end of time. But as the date cannot be far distant when Upper Burma will be able to stand alone, the writer thinks that a strong effort should be made to get a greatly increased percentage of the revenue of Lower Burma spent in the country itself.

But the Gazette formulates further grievances :—

"There are many ways in which Lower Burma has always been starved in comparison to other provinces. We have always been refused a High Court; our allotments for public works expenditure are invariably meagre and inadequate; and the province should now certainly have a Lieutenant-Governor instead of a Chief Commissioner. In almost every way we are put off with the merest pittances for expenditure in matters tending to the development of the province. Take education, for instance. In Madras the total expenditure on this last year was nearly fifty-one lakhs, of which, however, twenty-nine lakhs were defrayed by fees, subscriptions, endowments, &c., leaving eight lakhs to be borne by local and municipal funds, and fourteen lakhs by provincial funds. The statement of expenditure from the net income of the province of Lower Burma for the year 1889-90 gives a total under the head of education of less than four lakhs. This is what is contributed from provincial revenues and local funds, but the total expenditure on instruction is about eight and a-half lakhs, the additional four and a-half lakhs coming from Municipal funds, fees, endowments, and subscriptions."

There seems to be very fair grounds for these complaints. Surely the Province is now large and important enough to be given a Lieutenant-Governor and a High Court. The latter has been a necessity which has been felt for many years, and it is difficult to understand why the want has not been supplied before this.

With regard to the expenditure on education the writer does not suggest any increased outlay at present on higher education, but considers that primary and secondary education should be more thorough and more widely diffused, and that to do this more liberal monetary assistance should be given. The Provincial funds of Burma give only two and a-half lakhs for this purpose; whereas Madras, which does not pay much more surplus to the Imperial treasury, is allowed to retain from Provincial revenue fourteen lakhs as a grant to education. It is pointed out that one of the results of thus stinting Burma in this way, is that the subordinate branches of the services there requiring certain educational tests have to be manned by men from Madras or elsewhere. In other words, many of the loaves and fishes of patronage which ought to fall to local recipients fall to the stranger without the gates. This is a fair matter of local complaint if the fault rest altogether with the Supreme Government which upholds this arrangement. It may, however, be asked whether the people of Lower Burma have yet appreciated the importance of education, and are so very anxious for its wider extension amongst themselves. In pressing too hard for this "blessing" they may succeed in getting a "white elephant" from the Government of India, and every Burmese knows what that gift would mean—viz., increase of taxation. At present in that respect the people of Burma are infinitely better off than those of India.

ON the second reading of the Indian Councils Act (1861) Amendment No. 2 Bill, which is introduced by Sir John Gorst, Mr. Walter M'Laren will move:—"That this House expresses its regret that, in proposing by this Bill to increase the number of the additional members of the Indian Councils for making laws and regulations, no recognition is given to the elective principle." Mr. J. Maclean has drafted amendments which, if carried, will transform the resolution into one of satisfaction at the non-recognition of the elective principle, on the grouud that it is "unsuited to the character of the Native population, and would be injurious to the interests of English rule in India."

IT was rather amusing, writes the Civil and Military Gazette, to observe at the Lahore Railway Station the efforts of H.I.H. the Czarewitch's Courier-in-Chief to make himself understood by the crowd of coolies who, suo more, were trying to walk off with the Imperial baggage. The courier could not understand Hindustani, the coolies could not understand any foreign language, so that the speeches delivered on the occasion by both parties were of no effect. A deux ex machina in the person of an interpreter eventually stepped out of the train, when all chance of hostilities between the Russian and the Natives was happily averted.

NATIVE PRESS.

THE AGE OF CONSENT.

At last the age of consent is to be raised from ten to twelve. The Hon. Mr. Scoble has introduced a Bill for this partial protection of child-wives in the Viceregal Council, and there is no reason to suppose that the Bill won't be passed. It will be the first fruits of Mr. Malabari's labours of years for which the enlightened portion of the Hindoo community will thank him and the unenlightened, too, will thank him, say, fifty years hence. Some noise will, no doubt, be made by re-actionists among the English-knowing, who are too proud to admit the existence of social sores, or if admitted in a halting, reluctant manner, too proud to ask for legislative interference. They speak in the name of the masses who are in happy ignorance of what is going outside their own little villages. But the protests which the remedial measure of Government will call forth need not be heeded. The social fabric will not be destroyed by it. The world will not 'go to rack and ruin, and the sun will continue to shine as bright upon Her Majesty's dominion after the Bill has passed into law as ever it did before. Much has been made of the plea that such a law would put into the hands of the police a powerful engine of oppression and corruption. The fear ought to be removed by the provision introduced in the Bill that action shall only be taken on a summons after an information has been laid before a magistrate, and not by summary arrest. As a concession to the laws of reason and nature, the Act must work some good.—Rast Goftar.

Without a full and authentic report of the speeches made on Friday at the Governor-General's Council in connection with raising the protected age, we do not feel justified in offering a final opinion on any of the speeches referred to. It may, however, be mentioned that Sir Andrew Scoble appears to have done his utmost to disarm criticism, and Lord Lansdowne to have done something more. Mr. Nulkar, the eminent Maratha Brahman member, seems to have stood up for the Bill manfully. The only opponent in Council up to this time appears to be Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, the Bengali member. He has been largely anticipated by Sir Andrew, and answered both by Mr. Nulkar and H.E. the Viceroy. It is hardly worth while examining Sir R. Mitter's objections in these columns; they have been so fully met so often and in so many places. The one answer that would meet all legitimate objections is that if no abuse of the law has arisen from Government having voluntarily fixed the limit of age at ten, there ought to be less than none of the abuse apprehended when the limit is raised to twelve. Besides, it may now be seen that in one important respect the law is going to be made more lenient than before. The amendment concerns both Europeans and Natives, as the hon. mover of the Bill explained on Friday. It has been fully approved of by the European Press, who, in fact, have declared for a higher limit. The Native Press as a whole, including orthodox writers, has accepted the measure. Let us now see what reception it has in its present more acceptable form. It may be repeated that the Government of India have tried to make it universally acceptable in India. We have nothing to say against this course. We do not want a vindictive law, however anxious we may be that it should vindicate the rights and liberties of the subjects. Further remarks we must defer till receipt of full information.—Indian Spectator.

The Gujrat-Mitra says:—We are glad to hear that the Hon. Sir Andrew Scoble will introduce at the forthcoming meeting of the Supreme Legislative Council a Bill raising the age of consent from ten to twelve. It is high time now that the propriety of the proposal should be questioned. There is almost a perfect unanimity amongst all the religious communities of India on this question. And we have little fear of the Bill meeting with any extraneous opposition in the course of its readings and debates in the Council.

The Din Bandhu remarks:—We cannot look upon this legislation either as a triumph of the one part or a defeat of the other. As a protective measure, in our opinion, it does not afford more protection than the present laws on the subject. The legislators are quite right in not giving the police summary powers of arrest under the Bill, but as it is, the provisions of it will remain as a dead letter, because knowing as we do the feelings and sentiments of natives in a social matter, at least amongst respectable classes, no one will come forward to act as a public Censor, and to perform the somewhat unpleasant duty of prosecuting boy-husbands. It would have been much better if marriage had been stopped under a certain fixed age, because then the humane object of protecting child-wives would have been fully achieved. We are quite aware of the difficulty the Government have to face in legislating in a matter like this, but since they have made up their minds to insert a thin end of the wedge they could have gone a little further and laid the axe at the very root of the tree with a view to eradicate the evil.

SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD ON HALL-MARKING IN INDIA.

In the Indian Section of the Society of Arts on the 22nd ultimo a very interesting paper was read by Mr. Edward J. Watherston on "Hall-marking of Silver plate with special reference to India." Sir Theodore Hope, K.C.S.I., occupied the chair, and several Anglo-Indians, amongst whom were Sir George Birdwood, Sir Charles Bernard, Mr. T. H. Thornton, Mr. Purdon Clarke, and Mr, Martin Wood, took part in the discussion which followed. The majority were not in favour of Mr. Goschen's proposal—already opposed by the Indian Government—to establish a system of hall-marking in India for goods intended for exportation to England; but Sir George Birdwood, who led off the discussion at the invitation of the Chairman, held a different view, and gave reasons for his opinions in no half-hearted or hesitating way. He said:—

"Hall-marking of some description is absolutely necessary in India if that country is to derive any great advantage from the abolition of the plate duties; and if it is not insisted on now that these duties have been removed, the indigenous goldsmiths' art in India, except as regards jewellery, will be rapidly destroyed, just as the Indian carpet-weaving industry has been. The Native manufacturers of gold and silver plate in India are not the exporters of it; they simply execute orders for the exporters, who mostly are Englishmen. In working for their own people the Native goldsmiths use gold and silver of absolute purity. They are bound to do so by the force of their religion—i.e., the ritualistic obligations of their sacro-sanct craft; and also by the thorough knowledge every Hindu possesses of the quality and value of the precious metals. In appraising gold and silver work and gems, a Hindu or Parsee lady will not err one per cent. in values of thousands and tens of thousands of rupees. But it is quite different when the Native goldsmith works for foreign exporters. Then he has no standard of purity binding on him, and the exporter is, in most cases, entirely at his mercy. This has been shown to be the case over and over again; and exporters at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay naturally shrink from the risk of sending Indian gold and silver plate to England, which on reading the Custom-house may be condemned and returned upon their hands. Already, on this account, Indian silver has become greatly discredited in this country; and that discredit would never be removed by abolishing Hall-marking altogether. If that were done, the manufacture of plate in India would be concentrated in foreign houses at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay; and the Native goldsmiths all over the country would be starved to death, and their art perish with them. No, the proper course is to multiply, as on the Continent, the standards of purity of gold and silver, and down so low as a five hundred thousandth, or one-half the intrinsic fineness of the metal; and to establish assay offices at Calcutta, Madras, Bombay, and other convenient centres, such as Lahore, Delhi, Kurrachee, &c., for the authentication of any plate brought to them; this being compulsory only for articles for the export trade. No Hall-marking is needed for Native Indian purchasers, unless for those of them who, in consequence of their having received an English education, have lost the accomplishments of their vernacular culture. As already said, Hall-marking is not required for jewellery, which forms the bulk of the goldsmiths' were purchased by Anglo-Indians in India. The assay in India can be indefinitely simplified; and if Native Indian assayers were employed the 'touch' test might be absolutely relied upon. I have not only had as great an experience as almost any London goldsmith in dealing in plate—all of it Indian plate, of course—but I have largely manufactured it myself, in the sense of having for years had numbers of Native Indian craftsmen employed under my responsible superintendence, in the production of articles of plate and jewellery; and I always found that I could rely on the 'touch test,' in their hands, as implicitly as on the Bombay Mint assay. The same standards should be used in India as in England, and the same standard and date marks; and similar hall, and makers, and place marks. Care only should be taken that the new marks for the new standards should include such as are objects of veneration among the Hindoos; up to which they would therefore instinctively desire to raise the purity of the gold and silver wrought by them. Such marks would be the fleur-de-lis [Welsh leek], the shamrock, the trident, the lotus, wheel, and swastika; and some of these sacred emblems should stand for the highest standards of fineness in gold and silver. The 'Hall-marks used at Calcutta, Madras, &c., should also be distinctively Indian, as the elephant, tiger, peacock, and cobra; and, of course, the mark of the place of manufacture, and maker's mark would, if used at all, be Indian in character. Let all those who would refrain from introducing Hall-marking in India just think of the convenience its adoption would be to the exporter of Indian plate into the United Kingdom. All his hesitations, anxieties, and risks would at once be at an end. The official Indian

'Hall-mark,' whether of Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, &c., stamped on his goods, he would be able to export them freely into the United Kingdom, now practically closed against them, and with the certainty of obtaining a very high profit on them; on account of the cheapness with which plate of the highest artistic quality can still be made by the Native goldsmiths of India. The benefit of all this to India itself would be enormous, and immediately becomes apparent. In a word, if we could guarantee the degree of fineness or purity of articles of plate made in India, they would hold their own against the competition of the whole world; for nowhere else can objects in gold and silver of high artistic merit be produced at so extraordinarily low a cost. In work of the minuest elaboration, it never exceeds the weight of the metal used on it expressed in rupees; while the average cost is from a quarter to one-half the weight of the metal. I feel very deeply on this question of Hall-marking. In the consideration of this and analogous questions, I have all my life instinctively identified myself with the interests and sentiments of the people of India; and, standing in their place of artistic mastery and commercial servitude, I see clearly that if do not protect their plate industry by Hall-marking incalculable injury will slowly, but surely, be inflicted on them; while if we make Hall-marking compulsory—of course for the export plate only—we may yet redeem from perdition the great goldsmith's art for which they have been immemorially famous, but which, owing to the various adverse influences of our supremacy on the sumptuary industries of India generally, has ever since 1813, when the East India Company's monopoly was abolished, been in a state of enforced decay. Hall-marking will, I believe, provide it with a veritable Palladium. I do not approach this question from the side of political economy and statistical science, or of administrative convenience. What I see beyond and above all these weighty considerations is that if one after another you destroy the hereditary arts of a people, and their whole indigenous culture, you destroy their historical individuality; and that the paramount duty of every ruler is not so much to ensure the material prosperity of a people, as to safeguard their spiritual health, wealth, and happiness; or, in more familiar words, to save their souls alive; for the self-existent activities (industrial, literary, and religious), habits, and character of a people are the only sure foundations of national riches and greatness, and the only trustworthy guides through the deep darkness of a nation's destiny."

THE INDIAN LEGISLATIVE COUNCILS.

The Government have reintroduced into the House of Commons their Indian Councils Bill in the form in which it passed the House of Lords last year. Powers are given by the Bill to the Viceroy to nominate a larger number of additional members to the Legislative Council than by the present law he is able to do. At present the nominated members may be six as a minimum or twelve as a maximum. The proposal is to add four members—namely, to make the minimum ten and the maximum sixteen. The same principle of increasing the number of nominated members is applied also to the provincial Councils. For Madras and Bombay the minimum of the non-official members of Council is to be eight and the maximum twenty; the existing law giving the minimum as four and the maximum as eight. In the Bengal Council they may be increased by the Viceroy in Council to twenty; and in the North-West to fifteen. Just as before, the Bill does not adopt in any form the principle of popular representation, the Government holding that "the state of India is not ripe at present for this principle of election." However, any person resident in India may be nominated an additional member of Council. Moreover, with a view to certain public or other bodies being consulted on an appointment it is provided that the Governor-General in Council may, with the approval of the Secretary of State in Council, make regulations as to the conditions under which nominations shall be made by the Governor-General, Governors, and Lieutenant-Governors. The additional members of the central Council are nominated by the Viceroy, in order to assist him and his executive Council when they meet for the purpose of making laws and regulations. But their powers are limited, inasmuch as no business can be transacted at any such meeting other than the consideration and enactment of measures introduced into the Council for the purpose of enactment. When, therefore, the Budget of the year is brought forward and requires fresh legislation, it is competent to the members of the Legislative Council to discuss the whole financial position of the Government. On the other hand, if no financial legislation is required, no discussion can take place, as no member of the Legislative Council can say a word upon the subject. Moreover, no member of the Council can ask questions of the Government of India as to any of their acts, or as to anything that may be of importance in governing the country. In view of this, Lord Cross introduced into the Bill provisions giving to members of Council the right of interpellation and the right of discussing the Budget, whether financial legislation is proposed or not. However, the right is to be subject to "such conditions and restrictions as to subject or otherwise" as shall be prescribed in rules to be made by the Governor-General in Council. Moreover, no member is to have power to submit or propose any resolution or to divide the Council in respect of any such financial discussion or the answer to any question. Similar rights of interpellation and of discussing the Budget are introduced with regard to the local Councils. A clause due to Lord Herschell somewhat widens the powers of the provincial Councils with regard to legislation.

THE MAGAZINE RIFLE FOR INDIA.

The magazine rifle debate in the House of Commons last week has an important bearing on India. For one of the measures immediately in contemplation is to arm the British infantry service in that country with the new weapon. This measure forms part of the general plan of military reorganisation on which Sir Frederick Roberts has been at work throughout his tenure of office. Previous articles on Indian affairs have dealt with the frontier aspects of his Excellency's scheme for the defences of India. But Sir Frederick, as is well known to Indian military critics, has been desirous of marking his commandership-in-chief not only by an improved system of frontier and strategical defence, but also by arming each branch of the Indian forces with better weapons. Before he lays down his high office he hopes to see the whole of the infantry in India armed with a weapon which will take the same cartridge—the British regiments with the new magazine rifle and the Native regiments with the Martini-Henry, Mark VI., both of 303 bore Putting aside the chance of any conflict between the two sections of the Queen's Army in India, the question is whether the British troops will not now have to go on active service with a rifle of delicate construction, and subject to get out of repair, while the Native troops would be armed with a rifle of approved capacity to bear the rough usage of an Indian campaign. The facts brought out by the Times and in the Parliamentary debate throw grave doubt on the practical working of the new rifle under the severe conditions of the Indian climate and of Indian warfare. Those conditions mean a strain upon the mechanism of a weapon, and the frequent absence of immediate skilled assistance in its repair, which materially affect every proposal to introduce arms of delicate construction into India. Thus one of the main considerations which led the Indian Government to hesitate in regard to the new field-carriage with hydraulic buffer to check recoil is the liability to accident to which its elaborate mechanism would be subjected from the sand and dust and incessant wear and tear due to the extreme changes of the Indian climate. It is in India that the value of the new magazine rifle will be practically tested. For while the active interference of Great Britain in a European war is, we trust, a remote contingency, the heavy demands of India, alike on the British troops and on their weapons of precision, is a certainty always present.—Times.

MR. PARNELL'S FALL AND INDIA.

The Mahratta says:—The unsettled state of Irish affairs means permanent disturbance in the balance of the two great parties. The result of all this will very likely be that no Ministry, however powerful, will be able to carry out the programme of domestic reform, and the interest of poor India will always be sacrificed as hitherto. We are in the same position in which the frogs in the fable were, when a fight for a mastery of the place was going on between two bullocks. We were desirous of seeing the question of Ireland disposed of one way or the other, so that the Conservative squire in England, who is taught to associate our political movement with Fenianism in Ireland, would have an opportunity of listening to our just demands with more calmness of judgment and more patience of heart. But it appears that this is not to be. Oh! poor India, Mr. Parnell is supposed to have committed a heinous crime against social order, and you appear to be the victim on whose head the blow of punishment is to be struck. Strange are the ways of Providence!

FOR COUGHS, COLDS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

ORIGINAL AND GENUINE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED. 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not?! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A

"Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain.

JEOPARDY OF LIFF THE GREAT DANGER OF DELAY.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, "ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it; as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.

"A DEVONSHIRE LADY.—Jan. 25, 1889."

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose Without it Life is a Sham!—"A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

CAUTION.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked ENO'S "FRUIT SALT." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.,

In every form of weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); ou cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced l. they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness, Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm."

THE CALCUTTA REVIEW.

(The only Quarterly Review in India.)

ESTABLISHED 1844.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name —J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, une 23, 1872.

The Calcutta R view has given us valuable articles on the army. Scme from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy of the coming storm of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

. . . . The Calcutta Review has not only throughout its career reflected the highest honour on its public-spirited promoters and its well-known distinguished contributors, but has done much to help forward the reconstruction of our system of governing India.—Westminster Review.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 31st January; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 29th January; and from Bengal to the 28th January.

THE Czarewitch had a brilliant reception on arriving at Calcutta on Monday afternoon, January 26th. The Viceroy, the Lieutenant-Governor, and General Lord Frankfort with their staffs received the party on the Howrah platform, and under a royal salute the carriages started for Government House, the road being lined throughout by troops. A huge crowd had assembled to witness the procession, and gave the Prince a cordial welcome as he passed along. At Government House there was a large gathering of officials and Native nobles and notabilities to receive the visitors; and the evening was occupied by a State banquet, followed by a public reception, at which his Imperial Highness was introduced by the Viceroy to many of those present.

AT the meeting of the Legislative Council on Jan. 23rd, the Age of Consent Bill was referred to a Select Committee, with instructions to report within five weeks. Nawab Ahsanoolla Khan, Bahadur, of Dacca, took advantage of the occasion to say a few words in which, on behalf of the Mahomedans of Eastern Bengal, he expressed concurrence with the measure, which he designated as an extremely necessary and desirable one.

LORD WENLOCK, the new Governor of Madras, made his entry into the Presidency on Jan. 23rd. He met with a hearty reception at the railway station and along the route to the Council Chamber, where he formally assumed office.

THE Amir's health is reported to be steadily improving. His recent illness was severe almost to the point of danger.

THE Commander-in-Chief, accompanied by his Personal Staff, the Adjutant-General, Quartermaster-General and Assistant Adjutant-General for Musketry, arrived in Calcutta on January 23rd.

THE Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army was to start on a tour of inspection through the Sind and Quetta districts on February 1st.

MR. QUINTON, Chief Commissioner of Assam, was to pay a short visit to Calcutta on February 11th and 12th.

CALCUTTA is about to lose one of its most popular residents, Sir Alexander Wilson saying good-bye to India. The vacancy in the Legislative Council of the Government of India will, it is rumoured, be filled by Mr. H. B. Turner, who is well qualified to represent the important mercantile interests which centre in Calcutta.

THE Raja of Kapurthala has given one lakh, and the State officials Rs. 30,000, to the Khalsa College for Sikhs.

MR. G. M. OGILVIE, Commissioner of Lahore, does not take furlough as he intended.

MR. MUIR MACKENZIE, Under-Secretary in the Revenue and Agricultural Department, proceeds home on leave this summer.

COLONEL KNYVETT, Deputy Inspector-General of Police in Bengal, retires from the service from April 1st.

COLONEL W. J. DALRYMPLE is likely to be selected for the post of Deputy Quartermaster-General, in succession to Colonel Elles.

MAJOR DONALD ROBERTSON, Political Agent, Bagelkhand, and Superintendent of the Rewa States, takes seven months' leave from April.

MAJOR R. GARDINER, Manager of the Bhavnagar-Gondal Railway, has been selected to succeed Mr. Campbell as Agent to the East Indian Railway.

GENERAL T. E. GORDON, Military Attaché at Teheran, is now on a visit to India, and is staying at Calcutta as the guest of the Viceroy.

MR. T. W. HOLDERNESS, Director of Land Records and Agriculture, intends to take leave to England this summer.

THE Superintendentship of the Dun becomes vacant shortly, Mr. Nugent, whose tenure of it is up, being about to take leave to England. Mr. G. A. Tweedy, Assistant Commissioner of Moradabad, will be his successor.

THE Financial Department have agreed to grant annually a sum to the military authorities equal to one-half of what the latter may spend on water-supply for the various cantonments, provided that this special grant does not exceed three lakhs of rupees in any one year.

THE rails of the main line of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway, which have been slowly approaching each from the eastern and western headings for the last two years and a-half, met on Jan. 19th at a point close to Bisra station. The through connection between Calcutta and Bombay is thus an accomplished fact. The whole system (a portion of it as yet for goods only) was to be opened on Feb. 1st, the formal opening ceremony taking place on the 12th.

THE Jherria coalfield, which has recently been examined under the orders of Government, is only twenty miles distant from the Bengal-Nagpore Railway, and a short line starting from near Purulia is to be built very shortly, in order that the field may be worked. It contains many million tons of good coal, which will be available for the locomotives of the new railway, and to meet any demands that may be made from Calcutta.

A SERIES of experiments under service conditions are to be carried out with the magazine rifles in India, with a view to thoroughly testing them for use in a tropical climate.

A TREMENDOUS slip of rock occurred on Monday at the sixth tunnel in the Chappar Rift, carrying away the girders of the small bridge at the mouth of the tunnel, damaging the permanent way and rendering the bridge unsafe for traffic. The line is therefore blocked, and passengers are being transhipped at the scene of the accident. The engineers are doing their utmost to restore communication, which they expect to effect in three days.

EIGHTEEN elephants were captured in the Mysore kheddahs by Mr. Sanderson on the night of Jan. 21st, and between forty and fifty last night, after a long and exciting torchlight drive, which was witnessed by General Hogge, who had his Highness the Maharajah's special permission. This winds up the present kheddah season, as between eighty and ninety elephants have been captured since New Year's Day; the tame elephant and fodder resources do not admit of further captures. The spirited policy of his Highness the Maharajah's Durbar in undertaking this enterprise and furthering it in the most liberal and complete manner has been satisfactorily justified by the capture of nearly 200 elephants in eighteen months, to the profit of the State and the relief of the ryots. Mr. Sanderson and his staff have been lent to the Mysore Durbar by the Government of India till December, 1893, for this special duty.

COLONEL BIRCH, of Mhow, who had been residing at the Apollo Hotel, Bombay, for a few days, died suddenly at the hotel from heart disease on Jan. 30th.

NOTES.

THE telegraphic news from Upper Burma continues to show that there is yet much to be done before it can be fairly said that we have succeeded in pacifying our latest annexation. The Times special correspondent at Rangoon thinks that the pulling down of the old King's Palace at Mandalay would have a soothing effect on the nerves of the general populace. Perhaps, however, native opinion may hold that the process of destruction of dwellings, as well as of lives, has gone on for so long, that some more original remedy to ensure loyalty to the new régime might be hit upon.

THE agitation against the "Age of Consent Bill" seems to be stronger and more wide-spread than first advices led one here to suppose, but it is to be hoped that after a little time the agitators will become more inclined to look at the action of the Government in a more reasonable and kindly way. Surely the true Hindu social reformers must sooner or later carry their countrymen with them in support of the very small measure of relief which the Bill aims at.

BUT it does not do for the Anglo-Indian Press to be hasty and querulous. Unfortunately, the temptation to be so is very great, and those who have had experience of "discussions," political or social, in that country can understand the penning of the following from the Anglo-Indian view :—

"The Calcutta meeting to protest against the Age of Consent Bill is a fair sample of the utterly blind and unreasoning prejudice which animates the opponents of the measure. That the Congresswallahs should oppose reform is not surprising—one hardly looks to them for intelligent opinion on any subject—but it is certainly curious to find in the list of those who took part in the intensely-excited proceedings at Calcutta the names of prominent Natives who have hitherto been held in high respect as men who have successfully emerged from the narrow bondage of bigotry and prejudice."

THE teacup storm which the Congresswallahs raised at the alleged prohibitive order of the Government with regard to the presence of Government officials at Congress meetings has, we learn, subsided with singular suddenness Mr. Lyall, the Officiating Secretary, has sent a circular despatch to the local Governments and Administrations, in which the proper attitude of Government servants with regard to political or quasi-political movements is very lucidly laid down, and rules framed for their guidance. The effect of these rules is that, as a general rule, no officer of Government should attend at a political meeting where the fact of his presence is likely to be misconstrued or to impair his usefulness as an official, and that no officer of Government may take part in the proceedings of a political meeting, or in organising or prompting a political meeting or agitation.

EVEN Mr. Hume on this has the grace to observe that he is sure that all thinking men will feel deeply grateful to his Excellency for the "kindly, straightforward, and liberal spirit in which he has dealt with the entire question of the attitude which it behoves Government servants to assume in regard to the Congress, and all other political and quasi-political movements working, like the Congress, by open constitutional means."

SAYS an up-country paper :—"If it be true, as reported, that the Chinese Government have extended their telegraph line from Yunan-Fu to Momein, the scheme to which frequent reference has been made—namely, direct overland communication between India and Eastern China—can be carried out in a very short time. Momein is distant from Bhamo only 135 miles, and there should be no difficulty in linking the British and Chinese telegraph offices, as so short a distance now divides them. The hill tribes are under fairly good control, and with a little diplomatic management and some kind of a subsidy they would probably not interfere with the wire were it once laid. The Viceroy of Yunan, at any rate, might be trusted to maintain his section intact, and the thirty-five or forty miles in our own territory would in a year or two be seldom interfered with. The Indian Telegraph Department may be trusted to do their part of the work as speedily as possible if an understanding is arrived at with the Pekin authorities.

THE attention of the Madras Government has been drawn to the great damage which has been done to the interesting ancient remains situate at Allagarkoil, near Madura, from the thick growth of vegetation with which they are covered, and it has been suggested that steps be taken as early as possible to remove these growths from them, particularly the palace, to prevent further decay, and that the two reservoirs on the hill also receive attention. It has also been suggested that an officer of the Public Works Department might be directed to visit the place and see whether the overhanging and fractured portions of the domes of the palace could not be propped up at a small cost to prevent their falling. Government has promised that the matter shall receive attention, provided the buildings find a place in the revised list which Mr. Rea, the Archæological Surveyor, has been directed to prepare, of ancient remains which he considers of sufficient archæological interest to warrant their conservation at the expense of Government.

THE mischievous effect of the warrant which lays down that only lieutenant-colonels of three years' standing shall be eligible for certain staff appointments is already, says the Pioneer, making itself felt in India. The military authorities here have again and again protested against its operation, but in vain. The latest case is a particularly hard one. Lieutenant-Colonel Elles, who has been officiating as Deputy Quartermaster-General at army headquarters for the last seven or eight months, has now to vacate the berth, as he will not have the qualifying service until next December. This is a serious loss to the department, and the absurdity of the ruling is emphasised by the fact that this officer is not now eligible for the Assistant Quartermaster-Generalship, a post which he held so far back as 1885, before the warrant had been thought of.

A CORRESPONDENT of a Calcutta paper draws attention to the great increase in the last few years of the exports of ale and beer from the United Kingdom to India, apparently thinking that the Native population are taking to beer-drinking. The attempt of certain teetotal agitators is said not to be "potent enough to check the evil propensities of the people." The exports, it appears, have sprung from about 42,600 barrels in 1885 to 70,500 barrels in 1889. Now, as a matter of fact, this increase is really a matter for congratulation. To begin with, beer is not a beverage which the Natives are at all partial to; they prefer cheap spirits, and it is nonsense to talk of them indulging in "Bass" at twelve annas a bottle, or even of drinking draught beer as the working classes do in England. The expansion of the trade is due mainly to the more sensible habits of the European population, and particularly to the abolition of the rum ration formerly issued to British troops. Since 1885 the strength of the latter has been raised by 10,000 men, and every year the practice of dram-drinking has declined.

THE following advertisement is being published in an up-country paper :—"Whereas I, Yezdiar Rustomji Vikaji, son of the late Rustomji Vikaji, an Assistant Superintendent of Police in the Berar Commission, at present residing in Amraoti, Hyderabad Assigned Districts, do desire to change the name I have hitherto been known and addressed by, to that of Robert Galloway, and, whereas, my intention to so change my name has been notified to the Government of India, this is to give notice to the public generally, and to all whom it may concern, that from and after the date below mentioned I will be no longer recognised, called, or addressed as Yezdiar Rustomjee Vikaji, but as Robert Galloway, which Christian and surname I have this day taken and assumed as my true and lawful designation."

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

(BY TELEGRAPH.)
(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 15.

The agitation in Bengal on the subject of the Age of Consent Bill continues unabated, and shows some signs of spreading. A large meeting held in Bombay last week passed resolutions condemning the measure. Mr. Monomohun Ghose's proposal, mentioned in my telegram of last Sunday —namely, that the Government should drop the Bill and strike at the very root of the evil by civil legislation disallowing the marriage of girls below the age of twelve—has excited much discussion. So far, the suggestion does not appear to have won much support, except from members of the Brahmo Somaj, and a small number of the most advanced reformers.

A Hindoo gentleman who has taken a leading part in opposing the Bill, and who may be considered as fairly representing the views of the great mass of his co-religionists in this province, writes to me as follows:—

"The Hindoo community object to the Bill on principle, but if the Government is determined to pass it, they may be induced to accept it if the following safeguards are provided: —First, the age of puberty to be the age of consent; second, the complainant to be either the injured girl, her parents, or guardians; third, the offence not to be classed as rape. The Hindoo community can never accept Mr. Monomohun Ghose's proposal, for, if that were carried out, it would mean direct Government interference with our social and religious customs, and it would destroy the Hindoo religion altogether. There may be some Hindoo reformers who view the matter in Mr. Ghose's light, but they are a microscopic minority, and their voice carries no influence whatever with our community."

The Central Mahomedan Association has informed the Government that it is prepared to support the Bill, subject to the proviso that the Courts be not allowed to entertain a charge against a husband except on the complaint of his wife or her guardians.

The Budget statement will probably be made about March 20. There is good reason to hope that the results will be more favourable than has been anticipated, although no remission of taxation is likely to be made.

Several meetings to express regret at the death of Mr. Bradlaugh and sympathy with his family have been held in various parts of India.

The news of the Miranzai expedition consists almost entirely of accounts of the difficulty of roadmaking and marching, owing to the frost and snow. Some of the tribal Jirgahs have come in and paid their fines, while the towers of some recalcitrant chiefs have been blown up, but no active opposition has been offered. The health of the troops is good on the whole, though the intense cold is causing some sickness.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 15.

The operations against the Kanhow chiefs, who recently raided British territory and carried off captives, are progressing satisfactorily. It was ascertained that the raiders were at the village of Tangzaing. They were informed that no submission would be accepted unless the old and new captives were given up, and a fine of Rs. 4,000 was paid. Tangzaing has submitted, and has been occupied by the column under Captain Rundall. Of fourteen captives, eight have been given up, four were killed, and the remaining two will be surrendered. Part of the fine has been paid.

There is no recent news from Captain O'Donnell's force. Mr. Daniel, the Assistant Commissioner, with the troops sent against Kahon Tsawbwa, reports as follows the results obtained up to date:—Five of Kahon's villages have been attacked and destroyed. Kahon was wounded, and his brother and twenty-three men were killed. The troops will hold Kahon's village while the pacification of the adjoining districts is proceeded with.

A letter has been published from the Chief Secretary to the Chief Commissioner censuring Mr. Ross, the political officer of the Chin Hills, and Captain Carnegy, of the 4th Goorkhas, who commanded the force repulsed at Thetta.

Sir A. Mackenzie remarks that both had full warning of the serious opposition to be expected. No intimation of this was conveyed to the Chief Commissioner, who, had he known there was any doubt as to the practicability of taking the village, would not have allowed the force to start until it had been materially strengthened. Sir A. Mackenzie also censures the action of Mr. Ross in volunteering to condone the past offences of the Thetta Chins without excepting the murder of Mr. Wetherell.

Captain Drury still continues under arrest. No charge has as yet been preferred against him. Captain Drury's case is now before Sir C. G. Arbuthnot, Commander-in-Chief of Madras.

The Government of India having decided that the walled city in Mandalay, in which the palace stands, and which has been converted into a military cantonment, shall henceforward be called Fort Dufferin, this opportunity might be taken to remove the palace. Many of those who are best acquainted with the province have long been of the opinion that it is advisable to demolish the palace at Mandalay for political reasons. The King of Burma's most prized title was Lord of the Golden Palace. Without the palace a Burmese king would be an impossibility.

This fact would be promptly recognised by the Burmans themselves. While the palace remains hope will be entertained by the Burmans that the Alompra Prince may again occupy it. The palace is a tawdry building without architectural merit, being mainly built of timber, and would not last many years longer in the ordinary course. It is now used for public offices, which is very mortifying to the Burmans.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

HOME SICKNESS IN THE ARMY.

(Madras Mail.)

Stand at the docks at Bombay and watch the bronzed faces and well-knit figures that file past. Nearly all of them are soldiers in the prime of life, with constitutions inured to a tropical climate, "fit to go anywhere and do anything." They are not going to garrison the colonies, or protect the frontier; they have done with soldiering, with India and its Army; they are "time-expired." The "trooper" which is lying in the harbour is to carry them to England, and though they may, perhaps, be bound to present themselves for a few days' training once a year with the Reserve, the Army in India has lost them irretrievably, and the Army at home has little hold on them. Half, at least, of these men are leaving the service not because they dislike it, but because of the irresistible longing that comes over men after years of exile to see their native land again. They have no definite idea how they are going to support themselves out of the service. Few of them are sufficiently skilful at any trade to compete in the labour market. Even if they once had the skill their right hand has lost its cunning. But most of them never knew a trade, for, enlisting when little more than boys, they had no time or opportunity to learn one. They may have followed a plough, or driven a cart, and their only chance lies in the small demand for unskilled labour. Nevertheless they are determined to get home; they are weary of India and its monotonous life, and they bother their heads but little about the future. The vessel which is carrying off these fine men has brought their successors. But those trains full of youngsters fresh from England are surely but a sorry substitute for the matured soldiers who have stood the test of the Indian sun and the Indian climate. What proportion of those youngsters will reach the standard of strength and efficiency under a tropical sun which the men have attained whom they have come to replace is uncertain, but it takes years to achieve such a result. The hardening of Europeans constitutions to stand the Indian climate and to endure fatigue and exposure under a hot sun is a slow process. A soldier requires the strength of manhood for Indian service, yet seventy-five per cent. of the drafts landed in India are boys between eighteen and twenty-one, so it may be calculated how full the ranks in India are of raw material. A few years hence much of this raw material will have been shaped into the stuff required in India, and then—well then it goes home, and returns no more. And so it goes on year after year, trooping season after trooping season. "Just when we have got what we want—we lose it," say the Military administrators in the East, and it is enough to make the heart of any "leader of men" sad to see the trooper steaming out of Bombay Harbour with hundreds of the very men who are needed for the defence of the Indian Empire on her decks.

It is the home-sickness that does it; it is the longing for home that induces the time-expired soldier to refuse to extend his service in India. Commanding officers try to keep their best men on at the expiration of their term of service, but dulce domum is too powerful an attraction to the man who has spent his five or six years in India. And yet dulce domum to many time-expired soldiers merely means a brief spree on their deferred pay, and then a weary and often a fruitless hunt for civil employment. How often are discharged soldiers to be met with in England who bitterly regret ever having left their regiments in India? "If only we could have got a look at home, we'd have been content to go back to soldier on in India." But they couldn't, so they and the service parted company, to the loss of both. And in these words lies the whole secret, and at the same time the solution of the question. The soldier is only as his fellow-man. Disguise it as you will it is a monotonous life at its best that he leads in India. His officers, with many amusements and pursuits to make their life pleasant in this country, are seldom content without their periodical run home. They come and go, but "Tommy" soldiers on in Dustypore, and there is no new thing for him, from the "rising up of the sun unto the going down thereof." Year in year out there is the same unbroken routine of drills and inspections until at last the hour of emancipation arrives, and he is informed that he will go "by the next trooper" unless he will "take on." Can it be wondered at, after years of exile, if he unhesitatingly answers "No" to the invitation to prolong them. He has cost the Government a pretty large sum, and he is well worth it if only the Government can keep him; but that's just what it cannot do under the present system, yet what it could do easily under another system, and that other system on the principle that he is only human, and that all humanity is subject to home-sickness. What is wanted is a scheme for annually sending so many men with, say, five years' Indian service on furlough to England a few months, or transferring men from the Indian Battalions to the Home Battalions when circumstances did not admit of their being sent on leave. Good soldiers in the prime of life might then be induced to serve on in India at the end of the first term for which they enlisted. The subject of a special enlistment for Indian service, with its special privileges of furlough and pay, is too large a one to be entered on here; but whatever be the means adopted the desired end must be the retention of the largest number possible of good soldiers in this country, and all the means used must tend in the direction of furlough to England. Any consideration of expense in the furlough scheme when compared with the loss of the flower of the army should be of no great moment.

THE POLICE IN THE CENTRAL PROVINCES.

(Englishman.)

Reforms in the internal organisation of the Police force in the Central Provinces are being slowly effected. The scheme for establishing a well-armed and properly trained reserve at the headquarters of certain districts has now been settled and brought into operation. Something has also been done to improve the prospects of the lower grades of the constabulary by devoting to the increase of their pay the saving effected by a reduction in the number of the Mounted Police. But difficulty is still experienced in obtaining fit recruits for police service, as the rise of wages earned by agricultural and private servants, coupled with higher prices, tends to diminish the desire for employment in the constabulary. The suppression of crime has been assisted by strengthening the Magistracy by the appointment of new benches of Honorary Magistrates in a few places in the interior of Districts. The policy of the administration during the past few years has been to establish benches of Honorary Magistrates in all towns in which persons suited to the office could be found, and in this way to relieve tahsildars, who have important revenue duties to perform, of petty criminal work. There are now 213 Honorary Magistrates, compared with 109 in 1887. Benches have been established in almost all places in which they are required, and the task has been imposed on Deputy Commissioners of seeing to their gradual education and improvement by associating a stipendiary Magistrate with them when this can be arranged, and by close supervision of their work. The work of the more experienced benches is spoken of, on the whole, very favourably.

THE TOWERS OF SILENCE.

(Madras Mail.)

Mr. Behramji Malabari returned some months ago to Bombay, and is resting for a time on his well-earned laurels. Should he be anxious to add to the obligations under which he has tried to place the land of his birth, he will, we hope, one of these days take up his parable against not the ill-treatment of the living, but the ill-treatment of the dead. The manner in which the Parsees dispose of their dead is almost too horrible to think about, and visitors from afar who ascend to Malabar Hill in Bombay, and see the branches of the palm trees in the neighbourhood of the Tower of Silence bending beneath the weight of vultures gorged with the flesh torn off the bodies of Parsees exposed within the Tower for the purpose of being devoured, are literally sickened; and they go their way wondering how a race so intelligent, so courteous, and so enlightened as the Parsees seem to be can find it in their hearts to perpetuate a custom which is an outrage on the instinctive feelings of humanity. The Parsee may with justice point the finger of scorn at the Hindu with regard to the institution of child marriages, and may refer with just pride to the liberty that his own women enjoy and justly. But the Hindu can retort that a race which voluntarily exposes the remains of beloved relatives to be torn to pieces, and devoured on the spot by foul scavengers of the air, ought to be careful how it throws stones at the manners and customs of its fellow-subjects. The "human form divine" in Parsee man, and still more in Parsee woman, is usually well favoured; and one sees in Bombay numbers of elderly Parsees who admirably realise the artistic ideal of scriptural patriarchs. It is revolting to think of the fate in store for these fine eyes, those classic features, these noble forms. The ceremonies that lead up to the act of desecration are of a solemn description. A funeral sermon is preached by a priest; the bereaved relatives are urged to live a pure life; the body is washed, perfumed, clad in clean white cloths, and placed on a bier. A dog is brought in to drive away the evil spirits. Prayers for the soul of the deceased are offered, while the relatives show all marks of respect. The body is then delivered to the pall-bearers, and the male friends of the deceased, headed by the priests, form a procession to the Tower of Silence. Arrived there the bier is laid down, prayers are again said by the priests, while the attendants remove the body from the bier, and place it on an iron grating. All then retire, and the "vultures vile," as Shakespeare called them, swoop down from their perches on the trees, greedily seize on the flesh of the corpse, and the large bones of the mangled body fall through the grating into a pit beneath, whence they are eventually removed and buried indiscriminately. This is a woeful ending for a human being representing a race whose religion has benevolence as its keynote, that has no beggar among its number, that is chaste and honest, chivalrous and devotional, and that earnestly strives to pass the Zoroastrian bridge of "Chinvad" that leads from earth to heaven. There would be some appropriateness if a people who worship fire employed the agency of that element for the dissolution of the remains of their beloved dead. The Christian, forgetful too often of inexorable sanitary laws, buries his dead out of sight in the bosom of the element of the earth, and "dust to his kindred dust returns"; but the Hindu is wiser in his generation, and finds in cremation the most effectual method for the disposal of the dead without endangering the health of the living. The utilisation of the vulture as the means of disintegrating the particles that go to form the body of a human being has its parallel among some barbarous tribes in Central Africa; but it is violently opposed to that culture of the nineteenth century of the Christian era to which the Parsees otherwise do so much justice.

THE DUTY ON GRAIN.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Municipal Corporation yesterday (January 18th), by a majority of thirty-three to twenty-two, decided to raise the duty on grain to four annas per candy, the figure at which it had remained for a long period until two years ago, when it was reduced to one-half that amount. The chief argument against the reversion to the former figure, which will give Rs. 93,000, much needed for the efficiency of the admistration, was that to tax the "food of the poor" was very cruel, one impassioned speaker denouncing all who supported it as totally wanting in every feeling of humanity. The facts adduced, however, completely disposed of this plea ad misericordiam. The addition of two annas per candy means at the outside an expenditure of one anna per year for every inhabitant of Bombay who consumes half a candy, or three hundred and fifty pounds of grain in the year! Mr. Cotton declared that the labouring population of Bombay is the best off, the best paid, and the best fed of any labouring people in the world; for the most part they save thirty per cent. of their earnings, which he might have added are double to what are obtainable in the other cities of India. Employment is abundant; men or women able to work have no difficulty in obtaining good wages. This is by no means a roseate or exaggerated view of the facts. It is in the experience of every one that the working classes in Bombay never complain of insufficient food; they do complain of the difficulty of obtaining shelter in chawls and tenement houses near their work, and at reasonable rates. This is, as we pointed out on January 8th, a reason for thinking twice before placing on houses which are already highly taxed, the rates being assessed on rents are already very high, the whole of the fiscal burdens occasioned by the progress of important works—the chief of which have been undertaken to give to the increasing population a super-abundant water-supply. Anything tending to raise rentals or to discourage house-building would be far more detrimental to the welfare and comfort of the labouring population than a practically nominal addition to the duty on grain. Mr. Mulji adduced statistics which proved that the reduction of the duty two years ago by 2 per cent. had no influence whatever on the price of grain, the dealers adding the two annas to the amount of their profits.

MUNICIPAL FAILURE IN THE PUNJAB.

(Pioneer.)

The Punjab affords many illustrations besides the case of Simla, of the enthusiasm and high hopes with which the first advocates of local self-government were inspired, and the disillusionment which a few years' experience has brought. We noticed last year the absurdity of conferring municipal institutions on towns with a trifling population and microscopic income, and the Local Government has now resolved to sweep away a whole batch of these fictions. One was abolished at the beginning of last year, and nine more die on April 1st next. It would be well if there was any solid evidence that even those municipalities which have been granted a longer lease of life were satisfying expectation; but in the case of minor municipalities, at all events this can scarcely be asserted with any due regard to the recorded opinions of the Punjab officials. The Commissioner of Lahore observes that "the people in small towns are not yet sufficiently advanced to appreciate the elective system, which, experience has shown, creates and establishes ill-feeling;" a quaint way of putting it, as if the advancement of a people was in direct proportion to their appreciation of internal dissension. In the same way, although in the four towns of the Gujrat District the number of voters who polled seemed indicative of a certain amount of public interest, the Commissioner of Rawalpindi thinks such an inference might be delusive. "The interest, he declares, is purely personal and often pecuniary; no regard is had to the fitness of the candidates; and there is more than a suspicion that corruption is largely resorted to." What sort of men are chosen may be judged from the fact that a member of the Municipal Committee of Ziffarwal resigned, with a creditable sense of the fitness of things, because he was declared an habitual receiver of stolen property; and three members of the Municipal Committee of Narawal resigned because they had been conniving at the evasion of octroi. Besides these examples of the municipal representative, the chuprassi whom the people of Lahore elected to rule over them becomes a personage of dignity and worth. Of course we have got municipalities, and we shall keep them; it may even be admitted that there are certain directions where improvement in local administration cannot be expected except through the agency of municipal government; but in the meanwhile we may be excused if we decline to be enthusiastic over such a review as this of the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

THE AGE OF CONSENT BILL.

(Indian Spectator.)

Without a full and authentic report of the speeches made lately at the Governor-General's Council in connection with raising the protected age, we do not feel justified in offering a final opinion on any of the speeches referred to. It may, however, be mentioned that Sir Andrew Scoble appears to have done his utmost to disarm criticism, and Lord Lansdowne to have done something more. Mr. Nulkar, the eminent Mahratta Brahmin Member, seems to have stood up for the Bill manfully. The only opponent in Council up to this time appears to be Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, the Bengali member. He has been largely anticipated by Sir Andrew, and answered both by Mr. Nulkar and H.E. the Viceroy. It is hardly worth while examining Sir R. Mitter's objections in these columns; they have been fully met so often and in so many places. The one answer that would meet all legitimate objections is that if no abuse of the law has arisen from Government having voluntarily fixed the limit of age at 10, there ought to be less than none of the abuse apprehended when the limit is raised to 12. Besides, it may now be seen that in one important respect the law is going to be made more lenient than before. The amendment concerns both Europeans and Natives, as the hon. mover of the Bill explained on Friday. It has been fully approved of by the European Press who, in fact, have declared for a higher limit. The Native Press, as a whole, including orthodox writers, has accepted the measure. Let us now see what reception it has in its present more acceptable form. It may be repeated that the Government of India have tried to make it universally acceptable in India. We have nothing to say against this course. We do not want a vindictive law, however anxious we may be that it should vindicate the rights and liberties of the subjects. Further remarks we must defer till receipt of full information.

THE SOCIAL CONFERENCE.

(Indian Social Reformer.)

There prevails an extraordinary amount of optimism amongst our educated countrymen in matters social. They believe that, considering the period during which India has been under the influence of Western culture and enlightenment, the social advancement that the country has been able to make is satisfactory and encouraging. This belief seems to be shared even by the warm promoters of the Social Conference, for otherwise it is not possible to explain the glowing language which was used by Mr. Ranade, the social apostle of Puna, in opening the proceedings of the late Social Conference, with reference to the supposed satisfactory work done all along the line during the past year. We must confess that this statement rather startled us, for we are not aware of any great forward step taken as regards social reform in any part of the country. Whatever may be said of the other provinces of India by those who know them, our readers of this Presidency know as well as we, that there has scarcely been any flutter worth the name in the social dovecote. To Mr. Ranade sixteen or seventeen institutions for all India, to promote social reform and their satisfactory working, seem to be features on which he can congratulate himself. We would have better appreciated his remarks if he had given us figures regarding the progress made in each direction. The number of members credited to all these institutions is put down as 10,000; but if the estimate has been based on the numbers on rolls shown by each institution, then we must candidly say that we see nothing hopeful in it, especially with the knowledge that we have of the Marriage Reform Association of Madras, which is supposed to be 400 or 800 strong, but which when it meets is not able to bring together more than a dozen members. If the Reform Association at the headquarters of our Presidency is to be taken as the sample of what may exist elsewhere, we of this Presidency, at any rate, have no reason to gather strength and hope from the past for any labours we may be inclined to put forth in the direction of promoting the social well-being of our countrymen in the future.

INDIAN GEOGRAPHY.

(Pioneer.)

There is nothing of which the Englishman of average education is more comprehensively ignorant than Indian geography. In this regard an excellent little handbook, by Mr. H. F. Blandford, so well-known in connection with his work in the Indian Meteorological Department, is sure to prove most useful. The book is of modest dimensions, but no one who reads it attentively will fail to come away with a clear and accurate conception of the great geographical, ethnographical, political, industrial and commercial features of the Indian continent. One of the most interesting chapters is that which deals with the influence of the geography of the country on the Native inhabitants; wherein it is shown how the enervating effects of a rich soil and a damp and warm climate have at all times tempted invasion from the highlands of the north-west, and at the same time prevented the Natives from ever becoming seafarers. It is just possible, however, that Mr. Blandford's remarks on these points, however accurate as a statement of some kind of the chief causes which have produced the Native India of to-day, may lead to misconception in the mind of the English reader. It may be true, historically, that the disinclination of the Native to roam the sea was due in the first instance partly to the richness of the land, which produced sufficient for the wants of the then population, and partly to the lack of good harbours; but nowadays, at all events, the "large rich cities and widely spreading fields," of which Mr. Blandford speaks, are insufficient for the enormously swollen population; and it can hardly be doubted that the sanctions of the Hindu religion, though in their origin they may merely have allowed customs springing from a different source, are chiefly responsible for the aversion to either migration or emigration which characterises the Native. India, in the aggregate of its products, is immensely rich; but relatively to the population it has to sustain, this is far from being the case. Therein lies the hard problem before the British Government, which, while stimulating the population by the maintenance of unbroken peace, has to have a care also how the increased numbers are to be fed.

GRATUITIES TO RAILWAY OFFICERS.

(Times of India.)

Such of our readers as are senior officers in the Indian railways will have read with personal interest a short Madras telegram published in our columns the other Saturday. This important little message runs as follows:—"The Secretary of State has directed the Government of India to sanction the payment to Mr. Robinson, late Chief Engineer, Madras Railway, the equivalent of one year's salary by way of recognition of his long and honourable service. He had been for thirty-one years with the company." . . . In the case of Mr. Robinson the remonstrance has been successful, and we recommend the other senior officials, now on the eve of retirement, to turn this precedent to good account. The arguments in their favour are at once simple and cogent, and we can scarcely state them more forcibly than when we wrote three months ago. Without making an invidious use of names, it would, as we said then, be easy to show that there are many men still at work who have served much longer than many men who have retired and already received gratuities. The senior men who joined long before the establishment of Provident Funds have always looked upon a year's bonus as a prize legitimately within their grasps, and, indeed, as nothing more or less than "deferred pay," sanctioned by the customs of many years past. It is certainly anomalous that this prize should be awarded to those who retired earliest, and should be refused to those who have borne the burden and heat of the day a few years longer than their more fortunate brethren. There seems no reason why Circular XIII. of the 25th of July, 1890, should have been suddenly introduced, and we are glad that it has been overruled by the Secretary of State in the case of Mr. Robinson. There are a few other cases —not many—in which the injustice would be equally harsh, for the senior men, as we said before, affected by the circular, "are few in number, and in many cases are the pioneers of railway enterprise in India. The shareholders owe them a debt of gratitude which the directors are quite willing to acknowledge. On the other hand, the saving that can be effected by this new ruling is paltry and almost infinitesimal." We think that an exception might very well be made in favour of the officers who served—in some cases for many years—before the Companies began to assist the Provident Funds."

Digitized by Google

THE HONOURS GAZETTE.

JONES, AT A NAUTCH, Loquitur.

The nautch girl writhes and the drummers drum
  And harsh is the voice of the minstrels three
Who drone to the tubla's monotonous thrum.

"Char anna muchlee, tin powa ghee"—
  The singers whine. And the nautch girl's eye
Is liquid with mischief and devilry.

But the one sweet draught for a man like me
  Is the joy which Honours alone supply,—
Honours which men in Gazettes may see.

Why, let me ask, did I ever come
  To the land where the Bayadère's glance is free
To vend her loves, though her voice be dumb ?

Why did I traverse the qualmish sea ?
  Why did I press when the waves rose high,
The letters I bore to the then L.G. ?

Prince, I marvel thou should'st decree

SCHWANN, M.P.

(Times of India.)

["He visited the cottages of cultivators and artisans, and was highly impressed with the poverty of the lower classes. Seeing a village boy eating a piece of bread made of bajra and mothi, he took it from him saying he would take it with him to England, and gave the boy some money in return. He said he would pay more visits to this country in future, and would exercise his influence in England to promote the interests of Natives." "Mr. Schwann thought that Anglo-Indian officials received too high salaries which should be curtailed, and that some relief to the poorer classes was necessary in the matter of taxation. He said that Natives should not judge of the conduct of Englishmen from that of Anglo-Indians, and that the conduct of officers in Ireland and India was the same."—See Pioneer, Jan. 20th.]

Can it be that our knowledge is bootless ?
  Can it be that experience is naught ?
Is the work of a century fruitless,
  Unless by a babe we be taught ?

Unless we be cudgelled by bastings

And forget all we gathered from Hastings,
  From Wellesley, Dalhousie, and others ?
O what can can our little and big know
  Compared with this latest M.P.
Nigrogue simillina cygno,

Between migoverned Lucknow and Leinster ;
  Who proclaims to the world with a sneer
That the English who talk at Westminster

Who surrendered the Transvaal and Gordon
  And truckled to Parnell as king,
Then in truth the despised Anglo-Indian

And a Radical, e'en tho' a windy 'un,
  Has unwittingly blest him with praise.

Take home the chupatty, while others

Be a sign to your Aryan brothers

Of your mission from bondage to free 'em,
  As you rail at officialdom's pelt ;
Let it rest in the British Museum—
  And ask for a case for yourself.

"AMPHIBIOUS" MILLIONS IN INDIA.

(Bombay Gazette.)

Commissioner Booth-Tucker has unfolded his Scheme for dealing with "Darkest India," and the public, we suspect, will not be greatly the wiser for his exposition. He told an audience at Madras the other evening that the result of his inquiries —we should call them cogitations rather than inquiries—was to convince him that in India instead of the "Submerged Tenth," which General Booth has brought to light at home, it is a "Submerged Fifth" which claims the help of the charitable. Two hundred and ten millions of the people have an income sufficient for their needs ; fifty millions are either "submerged" or "amphibious." As a matter of statistics, the estimate is open to suspicion, if for no other reason because Mr. Booth-Tucker acknowledges that in regard to the Presidency in which he was speaking he was without statistical information, contenting himself with basing his calculations on the analogy of Ceylon. This is not a reassuring beginning for an enterprise which if embarked on at all must be embarked on with at least as much knowledge as feeling. At starting, indeed, Mr. Booth-Tucker shows a strange ignorance of the constitution and habits of the society to whose relief he is anxious to come. He proposes to organise or—to use a better word—to "regiment" the beggars. We presume that it is not proposed to "regiment" even the beggars without their permission. That being so is it likely that even a fifth of that part of the "submerged fifth"—who, by the way, have ways of their own of keeping their heads above water of which Mr. Booth-Tucker seems to have no suspicion—would grasp the hand that is to be held out to drag them back to the dry land of honest labour and competence ? For, as he reminds us, General Booth's plan is not to give food without money, but to find work for everybody, and to give food in exchange for work. But the Indian beggar, who is for the most part a mendicant by descent, thinks it unprofessional to accept help on these terms. The beggar who told Lord Palmerston that if he did not give him a shilling he would do "something desperate," and afterwards explained that by that he meant he would go and work, had not the fine professional feeling of the hereditary mendicant in India, who has never yet looked upon honest labour as a refuge from the uncertainties of the beggar's life. We should be thankful if Mr. Booth-Tucker or any one else could "regiment" the beggar, who is more often a social pest than an object of compassion of reasonable men—a parasite upon the religions of India, whom pride of caste and love of the vagrant's life rather than poverty keeps where he is. The Indian beggar, then, may be expected respectfully to decline whatever invitations may be offered him to be "regimented" in a Salvation Army workshop or anywhere else. It would be interesting to learn what work could be found in an Indian town for the inmates of any such institution. Nowhere is there a trade which is not already abundantly supplied with workers who can and will work. Where can room be found for men who will not work—the drunkards, the criminals, and the dregs of the town population ? In London General Booth's workshops are intended to serve the strictly temporary purpose of helping men to tide over the time till work is to be had elsewhere. But there are no such fluctuations in the

Digitized by Google

Indian labour market as would give a man who attends a Salvation workshop in Bombay ground for hoping that after a few weeks' service there he could find permanent employment elsewhere. The mills, for example, recruit from classes which are neither "submerged" nor in danger of being submerged, and we should be surprised if the beggars, the drunkards, and the criminals amongst the town population could be passed on to a mill after a course of work—the nature of which is not even hinted at—in one of Mr. Booth-Tucker's workshops. One of his suggestions seems to hint at the institution of a labour bureau as a means of bringing the submerged to land. A labour bureau is one of the features of the social work which is being carried out by the Salvation Army in London. It has thus far been carried on upon a very small scale, and it has against it the failure of a similar experiment which was once undertaken under the competent management of the Charity Organisation Society. It may, nevertheless, succeed in London, where workmen often starve while employers are in need of workmen. Here, where there is little variety in the nature of occupations, where the caste organisation will always ensure that wherever there is a demand for skilled labour it shall be inadequately supplied, there can be no need for anything of the kind. Whoever needs workmen—and, the weavers apart, the artisan classes in India are nowhere destitute in ordinary times—has only to ask for them, and he will get them. Mr. Booth-Tucker proposes the migration of the waste labour of the country to the waste land. There is nothing in the suggestion that invites comment except the fact that it comes from one who could scarcely be trusted to have a hand in carrying it out. The subject, it is well known, engaged the anxious attention of Lord Dufferin's Government, who deputed an officer of the Agricultural Department to arrange the migration of cultivators from some of the congested districts of India to Upper Burma. But the problem is surrounded with difficulties which mere enthusiasm cannot overcome. When Mr. Booth-Tucker begins to deal with the ways and means of carrying out his great idea of bringing together waste land and waste labour he paints pleasant pictures of dairies and suburban farms and market gardens, a "social territory," whatever that may mean, and a "city of refuge," whatever, too, there may be in that. We indicated at the time that we published a letter from Mr. Booth-Tucker, announcing his intention of adapting "Darkest England" to the necessities of "Darkest India," that there was a danger of his allowing himself to be carried away by misleading analogies. He seems to have been unable to escape that danger, and certainly he has not protected himself against it by careful inquiry into the facts of the problems with which he proposes to deal. The simple truth is that his problem is beyond solution at the hands of an individual, and though it may seem unsympathetic to say so, the Salvation Army would do better to stick to its legitimate work, when it has made up its mind what that is to be.

BENGAL.

(Jan. 28.)

AT the State Dinner on Monday there were a few toasts, but no speech-making. The Cesarewitch proposed the "Queen-Empress," and this was followed by the Viceroy, who proposed the toasts of the Czar and the King of Greece, and that of the Cesarewitch and Prince George. There were no speeches. After dinner there was an evening party, which was a very brilliant affair. A number of high officials and Native gentlemen were introduced to the Cesarewitch.

THE Cesarewitch next day visited the Zoological and Botanical Gardens; and in the evening he dined at Belvedere with Sir Charles Elliott.

ON Wednesday the Cesarewitch and Prince George of Greece visited the Mint, where they were shown all the operations of coinage. Afterwards they went to the Museum, and were shown through various rooms by Sir Edward Buck. Much interest was taken in the Indian fabrics and art-ware.

LIEUTENANT EHLERS, who has been engaged in the bold enterprise of making his way through the Native States on the frontier from Cashmere eastwards, has arrived in Calcutta. His latest journey was in Nepaul, where he busied himself with inquiries as to the possibility of effecting an ascent of Mount Everest from the Nepaul side. At present, however, the traveller is turning his attention in another direction, and in a few days he will proceed by way of Kuch Behar and Assam to Manipur, and thence to Mandalay, and through the Shan States to Zimmé. Lieutenant Ehlers only lately returned from Eastern Africa, where he spent three years in travel on behalf of the Government, and was instrumental in securing for the fatherland the much-talked-of possession of Kilimanjaro.

THE annual convocation of the Calcutta University took place on the afternoon of January 25th. The Viceroy, as Chancellor of the University, in his opening address, referred to the recent irregularities in the Ripon College. For the purpose of explaining the attitude of the Government, he said that upon one point there will be no dispute. The facts which were brought to light beyond all question disclosed irregularities of the gravest kind—irregularities discreditable to the institution immediately concerned, and indirectly reflecting discredit upon the University to which the College is affiliated. "I wish to take this opportunity of placing on record my strong condemnation of those practices, and I say without hesitation that if we could have brought ourselves to believe that the authorities of the University were likely to tolerate or to connive at such practices, the intervention of the Government of India would have become inevitable."

SIR GEORGE CHESNEY entertained a large number of Volunteer officers at the new headquarters of the Calcutta Corps, on Jan. 21. Lord Frankfort was among the guests and all the local battalions, as well as the East Indian Railway Corps, the Ghazipore Light Horse, and the Simla Volunteers, were represented. Sir George Chesney, in proposing "Success to Volunteering in India," drew attention to the great progress made in the last fifteen years in the numbers of efficient Volunteers, they having risen from about 2,000 to 20,000. He said the Government fully appreciated the great value of the Volunteer organisation, and would do all in their power to aid the movement. If all the demands made for assistance could not be met it was mainly due to the heavy calls made upon the Government purse of late years for strengthening the regular army and providing for the defence of the North-West Frontier.

MADRAS.

(Jan. 29.)

THE Vakils of Madras want the Government to accommodate them on reasonable terms with suitable offices near to the High Court.

THE Madras season, which began so quietly, promises to end with a perfect whirl of entertainments. The Bachelors' Ball on the 9th proximo will be the final turn of the social whirligig, but between this time and that a great deal of excitement will have to be got through. For the rigorous season of Lent the Committee of the Adyar Club have several pleasurable, but perfectly legitimate, amusements in view.

RECENTLY at Trincomallee Mr. Gordon Cumming, Conservator of Forests, was charged by one Visuvanam with riding over him, and fined Rs. 20. Hereupon Mr. Cumming used language to the magistrate which was considered a contempt of Court, and for which he was fined another Rs. 20. Mr. Cumming has appealed on both the orders.

THE Agricultural Department of the Madras Board of Revenue is of opinion that the only districts in which the season has been distinctly unfavourable are Chingleput and Tinnevelly, and parts of North and South Arcot. In portions of Coimbatore and the Badvel Taluk of Cuddapah there has been a partial failure of the crops. The Madura district, which sounded the first notes of warning, was saved by the heavy rains in the last quarter of 1890. The prices of food-grains still rule high in this district, but this is attributable to the unfavourable seasons in the past two years, and to the unsatisfactory condition of the crops in the neighbouring districts of Tinnevelly and Coimbatore.

THE Madras High Court, the Chief Justice and Justices Mutasami Iyer and Parker presiding, has just delivered judgment on a matter involving the liability of the Nilgiri Railway Company under the Stamp Act to pay duty on an agreement entered into between the Government and the Company. The Board of Revenue held the document liable to duty as a bond, and should pay duty on the equivalent of £220,000. The Company's solicitors contended that the document was not liable for Indian stamp duty because it was first executed out of British India, and does not refer to property situate or anything done or to be done in India. As the amount of duty involved is very large, the Board of Revenue referred the question to the High Court. Their lordships' judgment directs the duty to be paid as claimed by the Board.

BOMBAY.

MR. B. F. PATEL, B.A., has been re-appointed to act a Vice-Principal, Elphinstone High School, during the absence of Mr. E. D. Talati, B.A.

CAPTAIN W. J. POWELL, Indian Marine, has been appointed Port Officer, Kurrachee, vice Captain G. C. Parker, Indian Marine, deceased.

THE Governor in Council has directed that the Headquarter Station of the Educational Inspector in Scinde be transferred from Kurrachee to Hyderabad.

MR. R. C. DYSON, Executive Engineer, fourth grade, temporary, and Deputy Consulting Engineer for Railways, Bombay, has been granted eight months' furlough.

MR. G. W. VIDAL, C.S., acting Chief Secretary to Government, Revenue, Financial, General, and Separate Departments, has been allowed furlough for eighteen months, commencing from 7th April next, or such subsequent date as he may avail himself of it.

THE following is a summary of the Bombay Presidency season report for the past year :—Rain during week in all the districts of Sind, and in Ahmedabad, Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Bijapur, Belgaum, and Dharwar ; generally slight. Standing crops damaged by locusts, blight, or frost in parts of Kurrachee, and by floods in parts of Shikarpur ; cotton affected by excessive cold in one taluka of Broach and by cloudy weather in one taluka of Ahmedabad, blighted throughout Bijapur, and poor in Dharwar ; oil seed crops damaged by locusts in two talukas of Hyderabad ; wheat in three talukas of Nasik, two of Poona and Dharwar, and late crops generally in two talukas of Satara blighted ; crops otherwise good except in parts of Belgaum. Fodder scarce in one taluka of Nasik, Poona, Satara, and Baroda. Agricultural stock good except in one taluka of Nasik.

MR. H. A. ACWORTH, the Municipal Commissioner of Bombay, made a very important statement on Monday with reference to the financial position of the Municipality. He said that the introductory remarks in the Budget, in which it was stated that taxation would probably have to be increased next year, were of too alarmist a character. The paragraph containing those remarks was, of course, inscribed at his instance and on the information then at his command. He felt it to be a distinct duty fairly to apprise the Corporation of what the future probabilities were. It was, of course, true that the full liability under the Tansa debt would accrue in 1892-93, and he could anticipate that it could be met by any ordinary expansion of revenue. But he thought the condition of the Tansa Interest Reserve Fund justified him in saying that that liability would not entail an increase of taxation to anything at all approaching the extent contemplated when the Budget was prepared, and it might be, he hoped, possible to avoid any increase at all. As to future years—he meant the year 1893-94 and subsequent years—he preferred not to look so far forward, but they might repose a hopeful trust in the progressive increase of their revenues, particularly the water revenue. What he now said might, he hoped, do something towards dispelling any dissatisfaction with which the present or the future finance of the city was regarded.

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation held their sixth meeting on Monday for the consideration of the Budget Estimates for the ensuing year, and although their sitting lasted for nearly three and a-half hours, all the business that they were able to transact was the proposal placed before them by Colonel Merewether that the expenditure under the head of "Streets and Buildings," including Inspection and Supervision, Public Lighting, Paving Footpaths, &c., &c., be passed at a total of Rs. 11,19,165, and that special provision for cleaning, lighting, and repairing Port Trust wharves be sanctioned at Rs. 37,642. Mr. K. M. Shroff moved four amendments, namely, (1) that the grant of Rs. 700 for office furniture be disallowed ; (2) that the grant of Rs. 50,000 for paving footpaths be also disallowed ; (3) that the grant of Rs. 32,500 for electric lighting be not passed ; and (4) that the grant for kerosine-oil lighting be passed at Rs. 30,300 instead of Rs. 40,300. Mr. Shroff said that the additional sum of Rs. 2,500 put down in the Budget for lighting the Rajabai Tower, which belonged to the University, should not be sanctioned by the Municipality. A long and lively debate ensued upon the several amendments, in the course of which the President, Khan Bahadur M. C. Murzban, had to call to order two of the members of the body who indulged in remarks of a more or less personal character.

AT a meeting of the Bombay Municipal Corporation held on Thursday the members resumed consideration of the Budget estimates for 1891-92. The total estimated expenditure in respect of the Public Health Department was passed at Rs. 14,26,278-12 ; that on account of the several public loans effected by the Municipality, with amount of sinking fund and interest due thereon, at Rs. 18,08,252 4-10 ; and that in respect of pensions and gratuities at Rs. 31,500. The contribution towards the support of the Police Force was passed at Rs. 2,58,289, while the grant of Rs. 54,108 in respect of hospitals was adopted. With reference to the grant of Rs. 83,680 on account of education, Mr. Wacha proposed the following amendment :—"That the grant for education be passed at Rs. 83,680, and that the disbursements of the new charges budgeted for this year be withheld, pending final decision in respect to the pecuniary responsibility of Government for primary education in the City of Bombay." Dr. Blaney, the chairman of the Joint Schools Committee, explained that if the additional Rs. 12,000 asked for were not granted some of the schools would have to be shut up, and this retrograde movement might eventuate in the breaking up of the whole institution. The committee had studied economy in every respect, and there was not a single pie in the Budget which the committee could have avoided. After some discussion the amendment was adopted.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES, PUNJAB AND OUDH.

(Jan. 29.)

LOCUSTS still continue to delay traffic in the Rawalpindi district on the North-Western Railway. Several trains have been delayed owing to the crushed locusts making the rails and the wheels greasy.

MR. H. L. FLEMING, last year's winner in the singles and doubles of the Punjab lawn-tennis tournament, goes to the Black Mountain Expedition, so the tournament which comes off in March will be left more open.

A BRUTAL murder is said to have been committed by two young men of Rawalpindi in a neighbouring village called Kongal. The girl-wife of an old man, who is the elder brother of a banker of Rawalpindi, disappeared a few days ago, and the police at last found her dead body under a tree at Kongal. On suspicion the nephews of the deceased's husband were arrested, and they confessed that they had murdered their aunt by strangulation and pocketed her jewellery. They have been remanded to jail to await their trial.

IN the Warburton defamation case Sir Meredyth Plowden heard the petition of Mr. Warburton's counsel for a revision of the decision of the Sessions Court, upholding that of the District Magistrate. The Chief Court rejects the first three applications in the petition, regarding the want of jurisdiction, &c., but does not reject the fourth application that the District Magistrate be ordered to try the public charges. The Chief Court considers this premature. Mr. Warburton may bring a new case on those charges, and if the District Magistrate refuses to hear the case, then the Chief Court will consider his application again.

WITH the re-transfer of the services of Mr. F. W. R. Fryer, C.S.I., to the Punjab, the last of the Punjab civilians who volunteered for service in Burma on its annexation will have returned from the new province, says the local paper. Mr. Fryer's position on the Punjab list is that of a Deputy Commissioner of the first grade, and it should not be long before he obtains a division in exchange for the office of Financial Commissioner which he held in Burma. Our Commissioner, at least, will probably retire during the current year.

A TELEGRAM received in Lahore on Thursday morning announced that a serious accident had occurred to the Sind-Peshin Railway. A serious rock-slip had occurred in the Chappar Rift at the north end of the second brick tunnel, about 228 miles from Ruk, and it was at first estimated that the line would be blocked for three or four days. Later telegrams, however, show that it is a more serious matter, as rocks continued to fall owing to the continued rain and snow, and the line will probably not be clear for a week, especially as the bad weather still continues. Some of the blocks of fallen stone weigh more than 25 tons each, and fell from a height of 800 ft. It is not surprising, therefore, that 100 yards of the track was damaged and 20 ft. girders were destroyed.

THE serious rock slip in the Chapper, reported on Friday, was expected to block the S.P. Railway for at least a week ; but Mr. Woodside, Assistant Engineer in charge, and his subordinates, have worked day and night in snow, sleet, and almost arctic cold with such effect that the breach was mended, and through communication was restored by Saturday evening. The gigantic boulders which did all the mischief have apparently been made to repair it, having been utilised to fill up the site of the broken bridge, so that the centre of the line has not been altered. It has really been an uncommonly fine piece of work, for which Mr. Woodside and his men deserve the greatest credit. If, observes the contemporary, the breach suggested awkward possibilities in war time, the way in which it has been remedied encourages the hope that whatever difficulties may occur will find the right men on the spot to meet and overcome them.

BURMA.

(Jan. 24.)

THE Mu Valley State Railway is expected to be opened for traffic by the 1st of April next. The locomotive engines and rolling-stock have been shipped from Rangoon already, and they are expected here by to-morrow morning. This line is of much interest and great importance to all, as it will within five years hence run into India, vid Assam.

THE tracts occupied by the Karenni east of the Salween are definitely declared to belong to Sawlawbi, chief of the Eastern Kerenni, and successor to Sawlapaw. This was one of the tracts in dispute. It is expected that the working of the forests there will now be resumed.

THE HINDU WIDOW.

Mr. A. Sankariah has addressed the following letter to the Chief Secretary to the Government of India :—

As a sequel to the letter I have already submitted on the subject of "The Hindu Marriage Sacrament," I beg to present a few principles and facts to show the culpable misrepresentations of the Reformers, "the Socialists and Nihilists of India," about the misery of "Hindu Widows."

First, "The Hindu Widow" is the guardian angel of the household and of society. She is holier and more honoured by far than the married wife at ceremonies and temples. She mixes as little as possible with scenes provoking, animal desires and activities, for safeguarding her spiritual progress, and her diet, dress, prayers, and surroundings are regulated accordingly. This is misinterpreted by anti-Hindus into insult and degradation.

Secondly, Hindu boys and girls are not degraded and ill-treated when they shave for tonsure or for a vow. Hindu wives shave their locks at Allahabad at the confluence of the Jamna and the Ganges most religiously. The Hindu Sanyasees give up their locks, and are respected for their contempt of the pomp, vanity, and pleasures of the world. How is it argued then that "Hindu Widows" are ill-treated and disgraced when they shave as pledged to the service of Gods and Pitris? A widow can give up her religious dharmam at any time if she does not mind losing her religious and caste-status. How can any civil power create or maintain this status?

Thirdly, Messrs. Malabari, Raghunath Row and others must know better than to argue that religious neutrality means contempt for the religious feelings, observances, customs, rights, and duties of the subjects. They should know that the people will take the law into their own hands and die for their sacred beliefs and rights of marriage and family if Government disrespects them. The neutrality of the British Government means only that Government will respect and protect impartially the various creeds and nations of India according to the laws and customs of each creed or nation.

And, fourthly, the Natives of India know very well how girls are seduced and kidnapped if they are not matched with husbands as early as possible. Hindu women have no sympathy with the Zenana maids, Salvation maids and barmaids they see in India, and are shocked by the suits for divorce and breach of promise to which educated and respectable European ladies and gentlemen are parties. The Poona, Ahmedabad, and Madras Protests will have undeceived the Reformers and their Anglo-Indian friends of the danger of interference with others on the ostensible grounds of physiological health and morality and political duty to the fair sex; but if the Government have any further doubts, they could have them removed by inviting every householder to have the words "protest" or "assent" put up at the gate before the final Census day. And, indeed, a declaration* for the Hindus, adapted from the pledges of the Primrose League, is already under the consideration of the leaders of the Hindu Church and nationality.

* I. I pledge myself to support the following objects :—

(1.) The maintenance of the Hindu religion.
(2.) The duties of the Hindu castes, and
(3.) The unity and credit of the Hindu nations.

II. The atheists and free thinkers who so vigorously help in unsettling prevailing beliefs and customs are the opponents of the Hindus. Hindu associations are bound to support Hindu schools and oppose what is called "the secular education," on the principle that religion should be the basis of education and of Government.

III. The second object of Hindu associations is to bind the members to defend the rights and duties of the Hindu castes, or, in other words, to maintain the constitution of the Hindu nationality, every part of which is now being attached directly or indirectly not only by extreme men of the Socialistic party, but by the outcaste and missing parties and by some gentlemen who care only to please the men of foreign faith and civilisation.

IV. The third great principle of the Hindu Sabhas require the members to oppose any measure which may tend to the weakening or diminishing the power or unity of the Hindu nation or lowering its prestige in the eyes of the world. Legislation by the civil power in Hindu Religio-Social and domestic matters should therefore be protested against. The present agitation for raising "the age of consent" and against "the restitution of conjugal rights" is unconsciously or consciously an attempt to destroy the purity and religious obligations of the Brahman Church and thereby to destroy the Vedic religion and ministrations.

THE petition for winding-up the Unconvenanted Service Bank was heard by the Allahabad Court on Jan. 29th. The names submitted to the Court as liquidators were the Honourable Pundit Ajoodianath, Mr. J. Howard, barrister-at-law, and Mr. Fairlie, the late manager of the Bank. Objections were raised to the appointment of the Hon. Pundit Ajoodianath on the ground that he was one of the trustees of the late Bank; also for other reasons. The Court thereupon appointed Mr. Howard and Mr. Fairlie as provisional liquidators.

COMING PROMOTION.—During the course of the current year there will be a run of promotion in the Bengal Medical Service. Three Deputy Surgeons General will complete their five years' tour of service, Dr. J. H. Thornton, C.B., Punjab Frontier Force, on Aug. 12; Dr. G. Farrell, C.B., Inspector-General of Civil Hospitals, Punjab, on Aug. 8; and Dr. J. C. Morice, Presidency District, on Sept. 6. The three senior Brigade Surgeons eligible for promotion to the administrative grade are Drs. McLeod, Cleghorn, and Harvey. To the first named, who is Professor of Surgery at the Calcutta Medical College, it is doubtful whether the promotion would be welcome; but, under existing rules, Brigade Surgeons have no option but to accept promotion if they have the luck, or ill luck, to have it offered to them.

THE cause of Volunteering in Calcutta is about to lose an enthusiastic supporter in Lieutenant-Colonel Teale, Commandant of the Calcutta Volunteer Rifles, who is proceeding to Sydney, where he intends to take up his residence. A retired officer of the Telegraph Department, Colonel Teale has for many years been identified with the local Volunteer movement, which owes much to his efficient and devoted service. As an acknowledgment of the many obligations under which he has laid his old Corps, he is allowed to retire with honorary rank.

REMARKABLE INSOLVENCY CASE.—Mr. Justice Wilkinson, at the Insolvent Court, Madras, delivered judgment on behalf of the Chief Justice, in the matter of the insolvent petition of Muhammad Ali Khan, a lad, nineteen years of age, who applied for his personal discharge, who had no capital of his own, whose assets were nil, and who received an allowance from his father and mother of Rs. 25 per month. His lordship said that in his examination the insolvent admitted that his dealings with the Banks amounted to two lakhs, of which one lakh was with the Madras Bank, and his dealing with merchants amounted to 15 to 16 lakhs of rupees, such transactions being mere gambling ones—speculations on the rise and fall in the price of Government paper. The case was not one in which insolvent could be said to be entitled to the Act, and his petition must be dismissed.

He was eventually arrested, and was found to be severely wounded. Lieut. Jamieson died at Fort Stedman in the evening from his wounds. Major E. B. Nixon was born Sept. 26, 1848, and entered the 1st Foot as ensign, Aug. 21, 1866. He joined the S.C. July 6, 1869, and became major Aug. 21, 1886. THE INDIAN NATIONAL CONGRESS AND THE INDIAN POLITICAL AGENCY.

"ALL are not Israel who are of Israel." Bearing this fact in mind, we fear that we have unwittingly done a small injustice to the Indian National Congress by holding it responsible for all the strange things which have issued—in the way of diatribes against British rule in India—from the Indian Political Agency. We, perhaps, rather mixed the two; but Cæsar and Pompey were so alike that the mistake was, we think, excusable. But we should have continued on our course had we not come upon a letter lately addressed to the Calcutta Statesman by Mr. A. O. Hume, the General Secretary of the Indian National Congress, in which he explains what the two institutions are.

"The first is the British Agency of the Indian National Congress, of which Mr. Digby is the secretary. This has for its leading object to press on the attention of the British public, and popularise in Great Britain, the Congress demands for reform in the existing administration of India. It prints and circulates yearly ten thousand copies of the Congress reports, and circulates large numbers of pamphlets, leaflets, and the like, advocating the views of the Congress. It receives and carefully looks to the welfare of the Indian delegates to England, and arranges and pays the expenses of meetings at which they may plead to the people of England the cause of the people of India. This is a public and national agency; its accounts, yearly printed, combined with those of the General Secretary's office, also printed, show every rupee collected and subscribed in India for its use, and the exact manner in which all sums thus placed at its disposal are expended. It is presided over by Mr. Caine. Sir W. Wedderburn, Mr. Dadabhai Naorojee, Mr. J. Bright Maclaren, M.P., and Mr. J. Ellis, M.P. Nothing is spent without their sanction, all expenditure is checked and vouched for by them, and the accounts are further audited by a professional accountant. This, therefore, is the public Congress agency, towards the expenses of which all sincere supporters of the Congress are bound to support their quota, according to means, through the several standing Congress committees of their respective circles, or, in the case of subscriptions exceeding Rs. 100, if it is preferred, direct to the general secretary's office, which is in charge of the Hon. Pundit Ajoodhianath, at Allahabad. No one has any authority to collect money for this Agency, except the several standing Congress committees, or the joint general secretary, or persons armed with the written authority of one of the former or of the latter.

Mr. Hume does not mention what has led him now—seeing the time that both institutions have been in existence—to come forward to explain that as "some confusion seems to exist as to the exact nature and position of the two English agencies, which are both at the present momen doing good work for India, it seems desirable that this should be dispelled." To use a common but apt vulgarism, we would ask, "What's up?" If the two agencies are doing good in India, why "dispel" any idea that they are working conjointly? Can it be that the cause of Mr. Hume's tardy explanation is to be found in the word—money? Has anybody been "confusing" the funds as well as the "nature and position" of the two institutions? Mr. Hume does not say so, but the anxiety which he displays to make the public understand the nature of "subscription" to each is remarkably suggestive. He continues his explanation:—

"The second is the Indian Political Agency, which is Mr. Digby's own private undertaking. This has for its chief object to press on the attention of Parliament all kinds of Indian grievances, private or public, which are not of a nature to be dealt with by the Congress, and which, in Mr. Digby's opinion, demand and deserve much attention. This, though it does public work, is, at present, a private agency. Mr. Digby does what he considers proper, unchecked by any one; he can take up, or refuse to take up, any case he likes—there can be little doubt that he exercises a wise discretion—but none the less the agency is Mr. Digby's, and not a public one; no accounts of receipts or disbursements have been published, and there is no independent check on expenditure. There are, probably valid reasons for this, inasmuch as people who want grievances brought forward do not, in many cases, like it to be known that they are paying money to enable this to be done; but none the less does this mark the private and personal character of the agency."

It might seem a little hard on Mr. Digby to be so excessively candid about the way in which he conducts his private undertaking—"unchecked by anyone," and publishing "no accounts of receipts or disbursements"—but then Mr. Hume advises "the people of India, whether princes or peasants, who have individual grievances to bring forward" to place their cases in Mr. Digby's hands, and, at the same time, to send to his Agency "such contributions as they can afford." He kindly adds that it is his belief that nowhere will their work be done better or at less cost. It always shows a glimpse of a softer nature to pick up the individual whom one happens to knock down; and Mr. A. O. Hume by his letter, which is clearly a notice that the "people of India" should send their money rather to the Congress than to the Political Agency, has certainly knocked Mr. Digby down in a metaphorically pecuniary way. He allows that this gentleman "not unfrequently" takes up hard cases without receiving any remuneration, and is thereby considerably out of pocket, and he thinks that it is "quite right and proper" he should be reimbursed for such "chivalrous expenditure." But he goes on to say:—

"Only it must be understood that these are spontaneous contributions to a private, though excellent, agency, which no one is bound to make, whereas the Congress Agency is a public one, which every adherent to the Congress is bound to support; and no one must fancy that, in contributing voluntarily to the Political Agency, they in the smallest degree affect or diminish the demand which the Congress Agency righteously makes on all Congress men."

Herein lies the gist of the whole matter. We are glad to learn that the Congress does not hold itself responsible for the sayings or doings of the Indian Political Agency, whose chief work seems to be to bespatter journalistic mud on everything English in India. And we certainly think that if "the people of India" desire to send money home it had better be sent to the public institution than the private one. It is strange, however, that the question of "funds" should be so pressing now both with Irish and Indian patriots.

A TELEGRAM from the Miranzai expedition, dated Camp, Durband, through Kohat, Jan. 25th, says:—The camp has just moved here. It is reported that the cavalry reconnaissance up the Khanki Valley was fired on yesterday, but there was no casualties. The several columns are now in position and cross the border to-morrow, the first column by the Khanki Valley, the second column by the Durband route, across the Sarmana range. The third column also goes by the latter route on the following day, looking up some hostile villages en route. The second column at least will have to bivouac to-night. Five days' rations accompany the advance to-morrow, the remainder being stored at Hangu.

THE Englishman regrets to learn of the death, at Bombay, of Mr. Wilhelm Fuchs, of the firm of Messrs. Ralli Brothers, who was on his way home. Mr. Fuchs, who has come out to India every winter since 1871, to take charge of the very extensive indigo business of the firm, was a well-known figure among the indigo community of Calcutta, and his genial and straightforward disposition was appreciated by every one who knew him. He acted as a member of the jury at the Calcutta International Exhibition.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

UNDER instructions from Army Headquarters it is notified for information that the dates for the sailing troopships are revised as follows:—The Euphrates will sail from Bombay on the 6th February, the Serapis on the 5th March, the Malabar on the 28th March, the Crocodile on the 2nd April, and the Euphrates on the 17th April.

THE 38th Bengal Infantry will be relieved in Burma by the 5th Madras Infantry, the 7th Bengal, who were warned, remaining in India.

CALCUTTA is about to lose two of its most enthusiastic Volunteer Officers. Lieutenant-Colonel Teale, whose first commision dates as far back as 1863, has just retired, his place being filled by Mr. H. Lee, Chairman of the Corporation. Sir Alexander Wilson vacates the command of the Calcutta Light Horse, consequent on his retirement from India, Captain Macnair succeeding him.

A REVISED edition of Volume IV., Part II., Army Regulations, India, has been approved by the Government of India, and will be issued for the information and guidance of all concerned. The distribution of copies will be made by the Superintendent, Government Printing, in communication with the Inspector-General of Ordnance, Eastern Circle, Bengal.

IT is notified for general information that, with the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, the honorary ranks of Captain and Lieutenant respectively, will in future be granted, "subject to Her Majesty's approval," to Deputy Commissaries and Deputy Assistant-Commissaries of the Indian Army Departments in the same gazette as that in which the promotions to those grades are notified in India.

IT has been decided that Native officers on the retired list, who are permitted to wear their uniform on certain occasions, may obtain their uniform at the Government clothing factories on payment. The Agents of the clothing factories in Bengal and Madras have been instructed to satisfy themselves that the applications from retired Native officers for the supply of uniform are bonâ fide.

THIRTEEN officers on the Bengal establishment attain "Colonel's allowances" during 1891. Among them are Sir Hugh Gough, Sir J. Hudson, and Sir W. Lockhart, Commanding the Lahore and Meerut districts and the Punjab Frontier Force respectively. The others are Colonel J. May, Commanding the B.I.; Colonel C. S. Maclean, H.M.'s Consul at Meshed; Colonel W. R. M. Holroyd, late Director of Public Instruction, Punjab; Colonel J. Sconce, Survey Department; Colonel J. C. Minto and H. H. Mallock, Unemployed Supernumerary List; and Colonels P. C. Rynd, W. G. Cubitt, C. A. de Kanzow and D. Macdonald, residing out of India.

SURGEON-MAJOR OWEN, the Commander-in-Chief's Medical Adviser, has had a bad attack of intermittent fever at Simla, which, coming at the end of several months of indifferent health, has weakened him so much that he is obliged to go home to recover his strength.

LIEUTENANT BOWER, 17th Bengal Cavalry, who did such excellent work in 1889-90 in the pursuit of Dad Muhammed, the murderer of Mr. Dalgleish, has, after some study of meteorology, &c., at Dehra, started on another journey, this time in the unknown region north of the Eastern Himalayas.

LIEUTENANT CUPPAGE, of the 5th Bengal Infantry, is stated to have been selected for the important post of adjutant of the Calcutta Volunteers—practically adjutant of the Presidency Administrative Battalion of Volunteers, which represents a good deal more than the C.V.R. Captain Barrett, 5th Goorkhas, reverts to regimental duty after five years' tenure of the post. His departure will, says a Calcutta paper, be heartily regretted by the great majority of the Volunteers connected with the Presidency Administrative Battalion, which is equivalent to saying that his work has been attended with conspicuous success in one of the most important points to which an adjutant of volunteers has to devote his attention.

THE study of the list of the Madras Army for January, 1891, is, observes the Civil and Military Gazette, as surprising as ever. There are now on the list 117 Lieut.-Colonels, 27 Majors, and 102 Captains; and of that little band of Majors only twelve are doing regimental duty! Out of the twenty-nine infantry regiments only thirteen are complete with commandant, 2nd in command, and wing commander. In the 19th Madras Infantry all the officers are "attached" except the commandant and three subalterns, two of them being of very junior standing; in the 3rd the regimental officers are represented by the 2nd in command and two subalterns; while in the 2nd the only officer belonging to the regiment, and now doing duty with it, is the commandant! What chance does a regiment have of becoming efficient, even in peace, when its officers are being constantly changed thus, and when its own pukka officers are allowed to be all away from the corps? There is evidently some serious fault in an administration which allows such an anomaly as regiments whose officers are all outsiders and strangers to the men except one or two.

LIEUT. ENGLAND, Royal Fusiliers, met with a severe accident at Poona on Jan. 26 at the manœuvres. He had been performing the duties of aide-de-camp to Colonel Meares, commanding the British Infantry Brigade, and was riding along the Sirur Road, when, somehow, he was thrown violently from his horse to the ground head foremost. His face was badly cut. When picked up he was unconscious. He was promptly placed in a dhoolie and conveyed to Yerrowda camp, where medical assistance was rendered. It is feared he has sustained some injuries to his brain.

ARRIVAL OF HER MAJESTY'S TROOPSHIP EUPHRATES.

Her Majesty's troopship Euphrates, Captain John R. E. Pattison, arrived in Bombay harbour on Jan. 28 from Portsmouth, which port she left on Dec. 31. The vessel called at Queenstown on Jan. 1, Malta on the 11th, Port Said on the 15th, and Suez on the 17th. She brought 70 officers, 18 ladies, 9 officers' children, 1,170 European rank and file, 30 women, and 54 children. The Euphrates passed H.M.S. Crocodile homeward bound on the 18th in the Gulf of Suez, and the Malabar on the 21st respectively, and sighted the Reindeer on the same day at 8.10 P.M. H.M.S. Dolphin and Stork were at Port Said on the 15th. On leaving Portsmouth the weather was very cold, the most severe weather experienced in England for very many years. During the voyage on the 23rd, at daylight she sighted two dhows; one has sent a boat to intercept them, and found out that they were in want of provisions; supplied 200 lbs. biscuit and 60 lbs. rice. The Euphrates experienced fine weather throughout.

OFFICIAL PAPERS.

A BILL INTITULED AN ACT TO AMEND THE LAW RELATING TO CERTAIN OFFICERS IN INDIA.

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :—

1. It shall be lawful for the Governor-General of India in Council, at the request of the Secretary of State in Council of India, from time to time to require on public grounds any of the several officers specified in the schedule to this Act to leave India for the purpose of visiting Europe, and the departure from India and return to Europe of any such officer upon such requirement as aforesaid shall not be deemed in law a resignation and avoidance of his office or offices or employment, but such officer during such absence from India shall retain his office or offices.

2. Any such officer whose presence in Europe shall be required in manner aforesaid may, if the Secretary of State in Council shall so determine, but not otherwise, receive during his absence from India such part not exceeding one half of his salary as the Secretary of State in Council shall direct, and provided he returns to India and resumes his duties within such period as the Secretary of State shall appoint, he shall thereupon, if the Secretary of State in Council shall so determine, but not otherwise, be entitled to receive so much as the Secretary of State in Council shall direct of the salary which, but for his absence from India, he would have received during the period of such absence.

3. During the absence from India of any such officer, other than the Governor-General of India and the Governors of Madras and Bombay, upon such requirement as aforesaid, the temporary vacancy caused by such absence shall be supplied by the appointment of the Governor-General in Council, and until the return to India and resumption of his duties by the officers so required to leave India the person so nominated shall execute the office by him supplied, and shall have all the powers thereof, and shall have and be entitled to such salary and emoluments during his continuance in such office as the Governor-General in Council shall direct.

4. During the absence from India upon such requirement as aforeforesaid of the Governor-General of India or of the Governor of Madras, or of the Governor of Bombay, the temporary vacancy caused by such absence shall be supplied in the same manner as if the vacancy had occurred irrespective of such requirement as aforesaid.

SCHEDULE.

The Governor-General of India and members of his Council.

The Governors of Madras and Bombay and members of their Councils.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in India.

The Commanders-in-Chief of Madras and Bombay.

The Lieutenant-Governors of Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, and the Punjab.

THE CHIN COUNTRY.

The Fort White correspondent of the Pioneer writing on Monday said :—"I am just able to give you the exact strength of the force which will constitute the column that is going to move against the Kanhows to enforce their submission and survey their hitherto unexplored country. It will consist of 350 rifles together with medical establishment, coolies, &c., selected as follows :—150 from the 2-4th Goorkhas, 150 from the 39th Garhwalis (late the 2-3rd Goorkhas) and 50 from the 4th Madras Pioneers. Captain Rundall, commanding the Chin Hills, goes in command and acts also as political officer, with Mr. Rawlings as his Assistant, and the following officers have been selected by Captain Rendall to accompany him :—Captain Rose and Lieutenant Brownlow of the 30th Garhwalis, Surgeon Williams, I.M.S., in medical charge, Lieutenant Battye, Station Staff Officer. Fort White command, Lieutenant Heycock, R.E, in charge of the survey party, and Lieutenant Holmes, of the 4th Madras Pioneers.

Thanks to the energy of the Pioneers under Lieut. Churchill the mule track they have rapidly made to Walawun allow of kits and forty-one days rations being speedily sent out ; and the force moving by two relays will be collected at Walawun on the 33rd. Captain Rundall will move with the first half of the force, and on the 24th he hopes to reach Tiddim and begins building the temporary post which will be used as a supplementary base from which to work more freely through the Kanhow country. Some signallers will accompany the column, and for them a small and easily defended little post has been built on the Kennedy Park, which overlooks the whole theatre of operations, and whence they will be able to communicate with No. 5 Stockade, and thus indirectly with us.

The Kanhows, and more especially those living in the village of Tungyang, which, by the way, is stockaded, are freely boasting of future exploits, and it seems probable that some brisk work is in store for the little column in addition to the usual severities inseparable from a campaign in these hills.

The commissariat charge at the base No. 5 and the mule transport charge devolve respectively upon Lieutenant Stone and Lieutenant Marlow, two as energetic officers as we could possibly wish for.

The Kale Valley and the Chin Hills commands have been separated, and thus Major Howlett is free for the former and Captain Rundall for the operations from here in his dual capacity as political officer and officer commanding the Chin Hills.

During the latter's absence Lieutenant Bateman-Champain will be left with 200 Gurkhas to protect Fort White. The fortunate men who have been selected for the expedition are in excellent spirits, but we, the less fortunate, left behind will have plenty of work, too, so as doubtless to prevent us passing our time in vain regrets.

MAJOR GONVILLE BROMHEAD, V.C., of the 2nd Bn. South Wales Borderers, whose name is inseparably connected with the defence of Rorke's Drift in 1879, died at Allahabad on Tuesday of typhoid fever. Gonville Bromhead, who was born on the 29th August, 1845, entered the Army on the 20th April, 1867, and was promoted to be lieutenant on 28th October, 1871. He served with his regiment in the South African War in 1877-8-9, including the operations against the Jakkas, and the Zulu Campaign of 1879. As second in command to Lieut. Chard, of the Royal Engineers, he took part in the gallant and successful defence of Rorke's Drift on the 22nd and 23rd of January, for which service he was mentioned in despatches, promoted to be captain and brevet-major, and received the Victoria Cross. The following is the reference in the despatches :—"The Lieutenant-General commanding the troops reports that, had it not been for the fine example and excellent behaviour of these two officers under the most trying circumstances, the defence of Rorke's Drift Post would not have been conducted with that intelligence and tenacity which so essentially characterised it. The Lieutenant-General adds that its success must, in a great degree, be attributed to the two young officers who exercised the chief command on the occasion in question." Major Bromhead, who received the Zulu medal and clasp, gained substantive rank on April 4th, 1883, and served with the Burmese Expedition, 1886-88, for which he gained the medal with clasp. Gonville Bromhead came of a military stock. His father, the late Sir Edmund de Gonville Bromhead, was a major in the Army, and served at Waterloo ; and his grandfather was a lieutenant-general. The deceased was one of four brothers, all of whom embraced the military profession. The eldest, Edward, died in 1869, when a captain in the 76th Foot ; the second, who succeeded to the baronetcy, is the present Colonel Sir Benjamin P. Bromhead, C.B., Bengal Staff Corps, who served in Afghanistan, Egypt, and in the Sikhim Expedition, where he lost his right hand ; the third, Charles James, now commands the 2nd Batt. South Wales Borderers, in which the deceased was serving.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARMIES OF INDIA.

BY THE LATE

Colonel S. RIVETT-CARNAC.

(Formerly 11th Hussars)

WITH A CONTINUATION AND GENERAL REMARKS ON INDIA.

By the Author of "Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma," "Distinguished Anglo-Indians," &c.

"The volume is a graphic, stirring record of the English in India, as shown in the achievement of the armies of the three Presidencies. It is a book that deserves wide popularity."—ECHO.

"An interesting book."—DAILY NEWS

"It is one of the best historical narratives of the real conquest of India that has ever been written This is a book with which every Anglo-Indian should be pleased. Page after page it gives us some information we had not before. It lets us see far more, as it were, of the military operations of the Company—of its strength and its ambition—than almost any book of its size has hitherto done."—GLASGOW HERALD.

"A valuable contribution to the history of India, by the late Colonel S. Rivett-Carnac. The book has been edited and completed by the accomplished author of 'Our Burmese Wars and Relations with Burma,' and is very interesting."—THE FREEMAN'S JOURNAL

"Colonel Laurie has done his part thoroughly and well, and we can cordially recommend this most interesting volume to the consideration of the reading public."—DAILY EXPRESS (Dublin).

"Colonel Carnac's share of the book is confined to the first six chapters, the remainder being furnished by Colonel Laurie. . . . . It is the sort of book that every mess in India ought to possess, for a reference to its pages would decide many points that are constantly cropping up. . . . . The book is worthy of Colonel Carnac's reputation."—TIMES OF INDIA.

BROAD ARROW

AND

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American Armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

OPINIONS.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 7th February; from N.W.P. and Madras to the 5th February; and from Bengal to the 4th February.

H.E. THE VICEROY has consented to open the Bengal-Nagpore Railway on March 3rd. The ceremony will probably take place at the junction of the Assensole-Chakardarpore section with that further to the south.

H.E. THE VICEROY, during his visit to Chakardarpore, will probably hold a Durbar for the reception of the Chota Nagpore and neighbouring Chiefs.

THE Cesarewitch, who had been staying in Bombay strictly incognito for several days, left on Wednesday evening for Madras, where he arrived yesterday.

THE Cesarewitch, after visiting Tanjore, Madura, and other places in Southern India, embarks at Tuticorin for Colombo on February 11th. Thence he goes to Singapore, Batavia, Bangkok, Saigon, Hong Kong, Shanghai, Japan, and Vladivostock, journeying through Siberia to Russia. Sir Donald Wallace, who is now staying at Government House, Calcutta, rejoins his Imperial Highness for his tour in Southern India.

THERE is no truth in the report telegraphed from England that the Russian Grand Duke has injured his spine by a fall. What he is suffering from is a feverish attack, and the doctors have recommended a change of climate.

H.I.M. SHIP Admiral Korniloff, with the Grand Duke George of Russia on board, departed on Wednesday afternoon for the Mediterranean, under the usual salute of 21 guns, which were returned by the land battery. The other two vessels left on Thursday for Colombo.

H.E. LORD HARRIS opened the third annual exhibition of the Bombay Art Society on Tuesday. The exhibts are fairly good.

MR. ARCHER'S party was at Muang Sat on the 27th ultimo, and was about to proceed eastward towards the Mekong Valley. Fever had already broken out, but happily no one had been incapacitated by it up to date.

LORD LAMINGTON had joined the party after travelling up from Bangkok. His plan is to find his way across the Tonkin when the Commission returns to India.

MR. HUANG HSAO HSIEN has been appointed Commissioner for China under the Sikkim-Tibet Convention, and will shortly proceed to Darjeeling, instead of Secretary Chi, who, owing to illness, is unable to come. Mr. Huang is a Sub-Prefect in the Province of Sdechuen.

THE first column of the Miranzai Expedition has reached Gwada on the 27th, meeting with no opposition. The weather was cold but fine. The second column has blown up Mokhmoodeen's stronghold at Sinmela, and the third column has destroyed Sallai and returned to Darband.

OWING to the severity of the weather and the heavy snowfall in the Passes, traffic by the Khyber route has been closed for some time, caravans being detained at Dhakka. Sappers and miners have been engaged in clearing the road, which is now reported to be open.

ON Sunday evening four companies of the 1st Pioneers were sent from Trichinopoly to Tuticorin, where the Arabs are giving trouble.

GENERAL GORDON leaves Bombay for England next week, rejoining his appointment at Teheran in May.

THE new Governor of French India, M. Clement Thomas, arrived at Pondicherry on Sunday.

THE Government of India will probably shortly issue a revised set of rules regulating the concessions of land for mining purposes.

LIEUTENANT GRIMSTON, 8th Bengal Cavalry, will probably succeed to the Adjutancy of the Viceroy's bodyguard.

THE Championship and Gold Medal of the Indian Rifle Association has been won this year by Lieutenant Thelwall, North-Western Railway Volunteers, with 365 points.

IT is not improbable that Sir Evelyn Baring may succeed permanently to the Teheran post. Rumour points to Sir Auckland Colvin as Sir E. Baring's successor in Egypt.

NEWS from the Chin Country says that a column of 200 rifles, 28th M. I., under Captain Hastings, leaves Yawdwin shortly for the Chinbok Hills, to punish the Panchoung and Mon Chins for their daring attack on the Yawdwin post on January 5th.

ADMIRAL FREMANTLE, in H.M.S. Boadicea, has been staying at Madras. The vessel left on the 3rd instant for Trincomallee.

THE Government Offices will probably close in Calcutta this season on March 28th, re-opening in Simla on the 30th.

THE native doctors, who have been treating the Ameer, adopt the plan of bleeding their patients freely when gout reaches an acute stage; and Abdul Rahman is said to have had eight pounds of blood taken from him in a few hours.

MR. HART remains in India till the points reserved for consideration by the Commission under the Sikkim-Thibet Convention have been disposed of.

THREE thousand magazine rifles have reached India; but as no ammunition has arrived, they cannot yet be distributed among the troops for experimental purposes. It was intended to issue twenty-five rifles to each regiment of British infantry in the country.

THE troops for the Black Mountain Expedition begin moving on the 15th instant towards the scene of the campaign, in place of the usual annual inspections at their different centres at Jamalpore, Howrah, Allahabad, and Tundla.

THE East Indian Railway Volunteers are to have this year a Camp of Exercise, the date for which has been fixed from the 15th to the 28th instant. The Camp will wind up with an inspection of the whole corps on the 27th.

LATEST news from Cabul describe the Ameer as almost recovered, though still slightly troubled with his gout.

NOTES.

BOTH by telegraph and post the information comes from India that the agitation concerning the "Age of Consent" Bill is spreading throughout the country. Indian Native opinion may appear, according to the news sent to the English papers, to be pretty equally divided upon the subject, but according to the vernacular papers the preponderance of opinion is against legislative interference. This is likely enough, for the feeling in the zenanas amongst the mothers and wives of the present generation of Hindus is certain to be hostile.

THIS, indeed, has been long known to the authorities in India. A recent issue of the Gazette of India contains a correspondence between the Government of Bengal and some of the officials and physicians of the Lower Provinces on the alteration of the law relating to the legal age of consent. It is curious to notice that the informants of the Government of Bengal, native and European, agree in throwing the chief responsibility for the existence and perpetuation of the present evils upon the women. "Our mothers, mothers-in-law, and aunts," writes Babu Nobin Chunder Sen, a deputy magistrate, "do their utmost to force the child to premature motherhood. I know that in the case of my own brothers, I had to set my foot firmly down on the evil. . . . I found, however, my old aunt was secretly nullifying my wishes." Similarly, Mr. Lyall, the Commissioner of Chittagong, says that "the women, the old ladies of the house, are the main cause of the scandal, and until they are got at, or some control is exercised over them, the practice will go on." Several other officials report to the same effect.

THERE is no doubt that one result of the Bill has been to create a fear amongst, not only the women but the men, that under its provisions the police will have the power of violating the privacy of the zenanas, and dragging the female members of a family into court on the slightest information from an employé, or from a rich and malevolent neighbour. It is true that, in introducing the Bill, Sir A. Scoble gave a reassuring announcement that this would not be so, but the dread of police interference is very great amongst the natives of India, and, in spite of all reassurances, great fear of such interference now exists in this matter. It may be unreasonable fear—but it exists nevertheless.

The Bill, narrow in its scope as it is, has raised a "sea of troubles" for the Government.

THE news from Upper Burma continues to be of anything but a pacific nature—riot and bloodshed have not yet ceased, and tranquillity has not yet followed upon annexation, although no doubt it is coming in the "sweet by-and-bye." The process of shooting down dacoits and burning villages has had a very fair and full trial, and its success is, to say the least of it, doubtful. Possibly the survey parties will in the end prove more efficient pacificators than the soldiery.

CONCERNING the former, the Pioneer gives the following information:—A great deal will have been done by the end of this cold weather towards completing our geographical knowledge of the more inaccessible portions of Upper Burma and its confines. It is in the north that most of the unexplored ground now remains, and in this quarter there are several parties afield. One, accompanied by Major Hobday, starts from Senbo, north of Bhamo, and working along the course of the Upper Irrawaddy, to where it diverges into the Mitika and Me-ka streams, marches for some distance up the former channel, and then makes a detour to the south-east and so back to Bhamo. Another party, accompanied by Lieut. Benny Tailyour, starts from Lashio in the Northern Shan country, and works over the country to the far east; while a smaller party, also from Lashio, marches through the Theinni Tsawbwaship to Kohang, on the far side of the Salween river, and thence to Namkam. A third party, starting from Bhamo, makes its way to Namkam through the Kachin country. On the other hand, the western side of the Irrawaddy will be looked after by a party under Captain Longe and Lieut. Gordon, which starting from Senbo will march through Mogaung to the Endawgyi lake and the hills west thereof—ground which, we believe, has only been visited once since the occupation, when a punitive expedition hurried through the country two or three winters ago, not without meeting with a good deal of resistance. In the south the only departmental officer on exploring work apparently is Mr. Kitchen, who accompanies the expedition against the almost unknown Boungshés; but in the Chin country generally a quantity of mapping will be done by military officers for the Intelligence Branch.

THE consent of the House of Commons to the motion brought forward by Sir W. Plowden and seconded by Sir Roper Lethbridge looks at first sight as if honourable members had shaken off their customary apathy regarding Indian matters and intended to give attention to any such matters as might be brought fairly before the House. We are afraid, however, that it is all "make-believe." We shall be glad to hold a different opinion if on the next "Indian Budget" night the Secretary of State will be found addressing a full and attentive House, instead of exercising his voice on "a beggarly account of empty benches."

SIR GEORGE CAMPBELL is not an oracle of wisdom, but he did not say an altogether foolish thing in telling his fellow-members that if ever India be lost to England it will be through the ignorant meddlesomeness of the House of Commons. The aphorism is not Sir George's own, but it does not lack merit on that account. It was said long before the enlightened electors of Kirkcaldy sent Sir George to Parliament—the original utterer of it is said to have been Macaulay—but Sir George in repeating it meant to teach the House the lesson that it had better leave Indian questions to those authorities in India who understood them best. Why, however, did the House decline to take into consideration the recommendations which have come so strongly from India for the abolition of the Presidency Commanders-in-Chief? There is a mystery in this—to some, but not to all. Patronage is powerful.

IT is officially proposed to create a sinking fund for division in 1958 among the holders of East Indian Railway Deferred Annuities, in repayment of their capital. This would greatly improve the position and value of the Deferred Annuity capital, although it would cause some reduction in the income of the annuitant. A circular on the subject has been issued to the proprietors of this stock.

THE Government of India has decided that, with a view to expedite the promulgation of orders to the Army, India Army Circulars shall be published, as a tentative measure until further orders, fortnightly, that is, on the 1st and 15th of each month. This arrangement came into operation with the issue of India Army Circulars dated the 1st January 1891. Since 1880, when these circulars were first introduced as a regular periodical publication, they have been published monthly only, except when it has been necessary, for the early promulgation of an important order, to make a special issue. Now that the periodical issue is to be fortnightly, it is probable there will be no need to make special issues, which would be an economy, especially as these special issues are always incorporated in the next periodical issue.

LATEST INTELLIGENCE.

BY TELEGRAPH.
(Times Correspondents.)

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 18.

The Viceroy will leave Calcutta early in April, and will visit Kumaun en route to Simla.

The starting of the Black Mountain expedition will probably be deferred for ten days, owing to the inclement weather.

The objects of the Miranzai expedition are practically accomplished, all the tribes, except one section of the Rubbia Kheyl tribe, having paid their fines or given security for doing so. The force will remain in its present position till it is settled what roads are to be made and what posts are required for the permanent control of the Miranzai border.

A skirmish is reported in South Lushailand. Mr. Murray, the Political officer, with 50 men, was suddenly attacked by a strong party and lost some men. No particular importance is attached to the incident.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 19.

Maharajah Durbunga, a leading nobleman in Bengal, has expressed approval of the Age of Consent Bill, but suggests the addition of further safeguards against malicious prosecutions.

Mukkmudin, the principal chief of the Rubbia Kheyl tribe, has surrendered to the Miranzai force, and has been brought to Kohat under escort.

Further details have arrived of the outbreak in South Lushailand. The disturbance occurred on the 8th inst. at the village of Jacopas. Mr. Murray had divided his men into two parties, which were simultaneously attacked. The party with him lost three, and the other party ten men before the attack was repulsed. Mr. Murray was obliged to fall back on the Koladain expedition, under Captain Hutchinson. He leaves the Koladain district to-morrow to punish the offenders. No serious spread of disaffection is anticipated.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 22.

Mr. Lalmohun Ghose, who stood as the Liberal candidate for Deptford some years ago, has published a note on the Age of Consent Bill. He takes a different view from that expressed by his brother Mr. Monomohun Ghose, and he disagrees altogether with the opinion that the evil should be met by civil legislation, but while generally approving of the Bill, and asserting that the objections founded on religion or on the supposed violation of the Queen's proclamation are groundless, he regrets that the Government introduced the measure so abruptly. Had they taken the public into their confidence, they would, he thinks, have prevented the unwholesome agitation, and would have forced the Congress as a political body to discuss the subject. Mr. Lalmohun Ghose, however, considers that the Bill should be passed, but with some further safeguards against malicious prosecutions, and an additional clause treating the offence as only a misdemeanour if the age of the girl be over ten.

Meanwhile, the agitation shows no sign of subsiding; on the contrary, it is spreading throughout the country. The supporters of the Bill intend to hold a public meeting in Bombay to-day, and meetings of both parties are being held, or are announced, in almost every important town in Northern and Western India. A Select Committee of the Council is now engaged in considering the measure by the light of the mass of opinions received. I do not know whether it will recommend any alteration.

About two months ago a street fight occurred in Calcutta between a number of Afghan hawkers belonging to two rival border clans, the Suleiman and Kheroti Kheyls, in which several men were wounded and one died afterwards. Thirteen men of the Suleiman faction were tried by the High Court yesterday, and all were acquitted of the main charges of causing grievous hurt and of being members of an unlawful assembly, but six were convicted of rioting, and sentence was reserved. The Kherotis will be tried this week.

The column sent from Fort Tregear to punish the Lushais for their attack on Mr. Murray's party at the village of Jacopas consists of 98 men of the 2nd Goorkhas, 45 of the Frontier Police, and three British officers. Colonel Evans, with about 200 men, is marching from Changsil, and will co-operate.

The Miranzai force will be broken up on the 24th, only the 29th Punjab Infantry remaining to finish the roads and build posts on the crest of the Samana range.

The Committee of the District Charitable Society of Calcutta have resolved to ask the Government to appoint a commission to inquire into the extent of the distress among domiciled Europeans and Eurasians, and the best means of relieving and reducing it. The Englishman newspaper recommends the formation of some Eurasian regiments.

The formal opening of the Bengal-Nagpore Railway by the Viceroy takes place at Chakhardarpore, in Chota-Nagpore, on March 3.

It is stated that this is the severest winter known in Cabul for 50 years. Communication with Herat and Turkestan has been stopped for some days by snow.

(Reuter.)

CALCUTTA, FEB. 23.

The head-quarters of the Black Mountain force will leave Rawul Pindi for Derband on the 4th prox. The advance commences in two columns on the 10th. One column moves along the river, the other up hill to Tilli.

The Miranzai force has blown up more than 20 towers.

BOMBAY, FEB. 23.

A meeting, attended by over 4,000 Hindoos of various castes, was held here to-day in support of the Age of Consent Bill. The proceedings were of a most enthusiastic character, and a resolution was adopted urging legislative interference for the protection of child-wives.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 15.

The Government of India having decided that the walled city in Mandalay, in which the palace stands, and which has been converted into a military cantonment, shall henceforward be called Fort Dufferin, this opportunity might be taken to remove the palace. Many of those who are best acquainted with the province have long been of the opinion that it is advisable to demolish the palace at Mandalay for political reasons. The King of Burmah's most prized title was Lord of the Golden Palace. Without the palace, a Burmese king would be an impossibility.

This fact would be promptly recognized by the Burmans themselves. While the palace remains, hope will be entertained by the Burmans that the Alompra Prince may again occupy it. The palace is a tawdry building without architectural merit, being mainly built of timber, and would not last many years longer in the ordinary course. It is now used for public offices, which is very mortifying to the Burmans.

RANGOON, FEB. 18.

It has been ascertained that Wuntho Tsawbwa is personally implicated in the rebellion. It has been decided to permanently occupy his territory. This step is absolutely necessary for the peace of Upper Burma.

The Mandalay Herald publishes the following account of the insurrection in Wuntho:—"On the night of the 13th inst. a large force from Wuntho, under the command of the Tsawbwa's father, invaded our territory, and has to all intents and purposes proclaimed war against the Queen in a style that has not been done since the annexation. He and his force attacked and burnt down two military outposts, after driving out their garrisons, killing four men and seriously wounding eight others. He also destroyed the telegraph office in his attack on Kawlin. The Sub-divisional officer Kawlin wires that the military police have become thoroughly demoralized, and he has telegraphed for European troops, as the country is in a state of open war. He himself has retired on Htigyaing for safety, leaving Kawlin probably to the mercy of the rebels."

The Mandalay Herald attributes the outbreak to the objection of the Tsawbwa to a proposal to continue the Moo Valley Railway line through the Wuntho territory. This is a mere pretext, as the intention to carry the line through Wuntho has been known for two years, and a portion of the line running through Wuntho was surveyed more than a year ago. Little weight can be attached to the opinion of the Eurasian sub-divisional officer at Kawlin relating to the alleged disorganization of the military police. He appears to have precipitately abandoned Kawlin himself. Captain Smith, R.A., commands the force in the Wuntho district, which now includes some 400 European infantry and mounted infantry.

RANGOON, Feb. 20.

There has been some further fighting on the Wuntho frontier. Two fresh attacks in considerable force were made on Kawlin, which were repulsed with the loss of 50 insurgents killed. Our loss in these attacks is not stated. The Kyankpintha post in our territory has been twice attacked unsuccessfully by rebels.

The force despatched against Wuntho now reaches 1,500 men and four guns. When Wuntho has been occupied the province will be thoroughly disarmed. The territory now ruled by the

Digitized by Google

Tsawbwa is about 140 miles long by some 60 wide. Sir A. Mackenzie's action in deciding to immediately annex Wuntho is universally approved. The weak and vacillating policy pursued prior to Sir A. Mackenzie's assumption of office towards this petty but troublesome State is the cause of the present troubles.

FEBRUARY 22.

A proclamation is being issued deposing the Tsawbwa of Wuntho and calling on his followers to surrender and lay down their arms. It has been ascertained that the Tsawbwa personally led one of the attacks on Kawlin. With his characteristic energy, Sir A. Mackenzie has ordered a staff of engineers to immediately proceed to Wuntho, and to commence making roads through that territory.

The first batch of reinforcements, consisting of 150 military police under Captain Keary, commanding the Shwebo battalion of military police, and 50 Sepoys, arrived at Kawlin on the 19th inst., raising the garrison there to 270 men. The reinforcements arrived in the nick of time. Captain Keary found that a strong attack from three sides was being made on Kawlin by a considerable body of insurgents. This was the fourth time that Kawlin had been attacked. The insurgents had captured the Court-house, when Captain Keary, who arrived unperceived, charged the insurgents, driving them back into the jungle, where they held an entrenched position.

It required three attacks to dislodge them from this position. In the fortification 25 dead were found, including the leader of the Tsawbwa's troops. Many of the insurgents were wounded. Our loss in this affair was two killed and ten wounded. The insurgents are reported to be concentrating at Wuntho town. The Tsawbwa's troops have burned several frontier villages in our territory.

The force detailed for the occupation of Wuntho consists of half a battalion of British infantry, four mountain guns, the 22nd Regiment of the Madras Infantry, and a strong body of military police. Steps are being taken to prevent the Wuntho Tsawbwa escaping northwards to the difficult and mountainous districts extending from the Wuntho territory towards Mogoung. If allowed to reach there he might carry on a harassing guerilla warfare.

Had Wuntho been dealt with firmly at an earlier date, the present disturbances would have been avoided. The late Chief Commissioner took special credit for his policy towards Wuntho, which it has been found necessary to so soon reverse. In the administration report issued last December, Sir C. Crosthwaite said that the patience with which the Tsawbwa of Wuntho had been dealt with had been rewarded by a satisfactory change in his attitude He also mentioned, as especially satisfactory, that the Tsawbwa's wife and son had visited Mandalay. They were received there with almost royal honours. Sir C. Crosthwaite, in the same report, made the curious statement that the year which had just ended had seen the work of the pacification of the province brought to completion.

It was the immunity extended to his past rebellious intrigue and his misconduct in harbouring and assisting dacoits, and the undue honours shown to him, which emboldened the Tsawbwa to make the present attack. So far from manifesting any gratitude, he availed himself of the time allowed him to fully arm his followers for the struggle which all who watched the events in Burma knew to be inevitable.

The column with which Captain O'Donnell left Mogoung for Thama consists of 90 British infantry, 140 military police, and two mountain guns. Some doubt is felt as to whether it is sufficiently strong.

The Mandalay Herald announces that the following members of the engineering staff engaged on the Moo Valley Railway are reported to be missing since the insurrection at Kawlin:—Mr. Guinness, executive engineer; three supervisors, Mr. Daly, Mr. Neill, and Sergeant Lane; two overseers, Mr. Old and Mr. Jenkins. Mr. Bagley, executive engineer, and Mr. Daley are reported as injured by the rebels.

THE Australian Irrigation Colonies (Chaffey Brothers) offer a pleasant occupation, a healthy life, a cheerful home, a soil of unequalled fertility—producing by irrigation results unparalleled in the annals of Horticulture—comfort, civilization, and material prosperity combined. They consist of half-a-million acres, in the sunny and salubrious climate of Victoria, and South Australia, on the great River Murray, which affords an abundant supply of fertilizing water for the Irrigation of Vineyards and Fruit Farms, and for the production, in assured quantity and excellence, of Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Olives, Apricots, Figs, and other Fruits (already so successfully grown in Australia), by Cultivators with large and small Capital, holding from Ten to Eighty Acres and upwards. The Wines and Fruits of Australia are now in extensive demand in British and Colonial Markets, and there is a practically unlimited field for such production under most profitable conditions to the Settlers. Pamphlet Free. Address the Chief Commissioner, Mr. J. E. Matthew Vincent, 35, Queen Victoria Street, E.C., from whom all information, &c., may be obtained.

ANGLO-INDIAN PRESS.

TRAVANCORE FOR THE TRAVANCOREANS.

(Madras Mail.)

However favourably the Travancore Administration compares with that of neighbouring British Districts in most respects, there is one serious blot in it which requires the earnest attention of the local authorities, and that is the denial to the Maharajah's subjects of a fair share in the government of their country, and their systematic exclusion from the higher grades of the service. A monster petition, signed by over ten thousand Travancoreans of respectability, which is about to be presented to His Highness the Maharajah, complains in bitter but dignified terms of the number of foreign Hindus that have been granted appointments under the State. The petition has been over two years in course of preparation, and is chiefly the work of Mr. K. P. Sankara Menon, B.A., B.L., a Vakil of the Madras High Court, who personally is quite disinterested in the result, but as a Travancorean is anxious to see justice done to his fellow-countrymen. The case as stated in the petition is certainly a strong one, and the reforms demanded have nothing rash or unreasonable about them. All that the petitioners ask for is that rules similar to those in British territory regarding the distribution of public appointments should be passed and rigorously enforced from the immediate present so as "to secure a chance for the natives of the country, at least in the far future, to regain their former position and status in the land." It is contended that during the last seventy years Travancore has been continuously drained of its resources by a number of foreign officials, chiefly Brahmins, established there for temporary purposes only, who have drawn considerable sums of money in the shape of salaries, pensions, gratuities, &c., which are spent out of the country. In British India, the complaint is often made that the natives are not fairly treated in the matter of Government patronage, but this is not the opinion of the Travancore petitioners, who would be only too glad if in their own Native State they enjoyed rules similar to those in force in British India.

IMPERIAL MUSEUM, CALCUTTA.

(Englishman.)

In one section the Imperial Museum, Calcutta, is sadly deficient. We refer to archæology. There is a small representative collection of sculptures from Gaudhara or the Yusulzai country, a few from Muttra, a few inscriptions, and a few casts. The Amravatti marbles are represented by one piece only. The pillars and architraves of a small portion of the Stupa of Bharhut form a most interesting starting-point to the whole collection. Dr. Anderson, the late Curator of the Museum, who, by the way, has no successor in office, found his materials a sufficient text for a most readable and accurate book; but the section at best falls far short of the needs and resources of such a country as India. The Archæological Survey did but little in the matter of collecting for the Museum, and yet such a work should have been one of the objects of its existence. As for numismatics, the Grammar of Archæology, as Professor Gardner has called it, it is almost unrepresented. There is a small nucleus in the shape of a cabinet of coins, but as yet no catalogue of them has been prepared or printed. Now in the case of a vast continent like India where there have always been many countries and many dynasties of kings, a chronologically arranged cabinet of ancient coins is absolutely necessary. Alexander the Great came to India, about 325 years before Christ, and we know the story of his expedition; but after him comes a blank for a matter of 1,300 years, about which the historian is silent, having no materials to work upon. The coins, however, which General Sir A. Cunningham, Mr. Masson, Mr. Prinsep, and Mr. Thomas brought to light, furnish a clue to much of the history of this period, but it is strange that the Government of India has never set on foot any search in this direction. Private individuals have done a good deal, but their action has been disastrous so far as the Imperial collection is concerned. The private individuals who made the collections regarded them as private property and withdrew them from India. Hence it happens that now that India is waking up and many of her educated sons are taking to historical studies, one of the great obstacles to be encountered is the paucity of materials.

BUYING JUTE AT CALCUTTA.

In the Queen's Bench (Feb. 17) the case of Crichton v. Hindley and Co. was heard by Mr. Justice Wills and a special jury. Mr. Crichton, a commercial agent, sued Messrs. Hindley, jute merchants, of the City of London, to recover £1,000 for breach of an agreement. Mr. Crichton was engaged to go out to Calcutta to purchase jute. After he had been there some time they terminated his engagement, as they said he had not acted in accordance with their instructions, and they counter-claimed for £5,000 in respect of alleged over-purchase of jute, which they had to sell at a loss. The defendants asserted that a certain proportion of the purchases had been concealed from them, and only put upon them when the market dropped. Messrs. Hindley had a manager in India, of the name of Cooke, but they said the plaintiff was to blame, and could not shift his responsibility.

The jury were of opinion there was no justification for the charge of fraud, and returned a verdict for the plaintiff for £700.

Mr. Jelf, Q.C., and Mr. Hume Williams were counsel for Mr. Crichton; Mr. Kemp, Q.C., and Mr. Boyle appeared on the other side.

Mr. Justice Wills entered judgment accordingly, with costs.

THE SEASON IN INDIA.

The following official telegram has been received at the India Office from the Governor of Madras:—"February 17, 1891.—Condition of affected tracts somewhat improved owing to good rain. In Nellore, Chingleput, North Arcot, South Arcot, Madura, Tinnivelly, and Coimbatore rain has come too late to save any large extent of wet crop, but will revive dry crops, replenish wells, and improve pasturage and water-supply. The cotton crop in Tinnivelly is saved. The only portions of the presidency giving cause for anxiety are two taluks of Chingleput, one taluk and one zemindari division of North Arcot, one taluk of South Arcot, and three taluks of Tinnivelly, comprising an area of 4,700 square miles, with a population of 1,250,000. Even in those tracts there is at present no distress calling for relief measures, and the people are in good condition. There is very little demand for labour as yet on public works, as there is employment in fields, sufficient public works being provided."

INCOME-TAX ON DEFERRED PAY.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

The majority of us would think that the last thing to come under the income-tax would be a soldier's deferred pay, but it is not so. Soldiers employed in the Public Works Department and in military offices are all taxed on their incomes, because they receive consolidated salaries and are held to be in civil employ, notwithstanding that all their incomes are below Rs. 500 per mensem, and the majority below Rs. 200 per mensem; and under the Act soldiers drawing less than Rs. 500 per mensem are exempt from the tax. These soldiers, too, are credited with no deferred pay while drawing such salaries. All deferred pay earned by them, therefore, must have been credited to them only while they were serving with their regiments or in departments where there are no consolidated salaries. When these soldiers are promoted to warrant rank, the deferred pay thus earned by them years ago is handed over to them, minus a deduction for income-tax. We certainly think that this is an unjust imposition, for deferred pay is an accumulation of a daily recompense for past services, and in the case of the men we have mentioned, for past services in strictly military employ, the pay for which, when under Rs. 500, is not taxable. The incidence of the income-tax on any soldiers drawing less than Rs. 500 per mensem is also questionable, seeing that all soldiers, no matter in what employ, are subject to the disciplinary provisions of the Army Act, and are, therefore, liable to trial by court-martial, and also liable to all the penalties under that Act. This is no dead letter, either, and such non-commissioned officers are tried by court-martial, and subjected to the penalties under the Army Act; though, were they civilians, no punishment but dismissal from their situation would, in most cases, overtake them. As an apt illustration of the doubtful justice of the income-tax on these non-commissioned officers, we may conclude these remarks by putting the following case. A store-sergeant of the Ordnance Department, employed in an arsenal, may be selected for appointment to the office of the Inspector-General of Ordnance of the Circle. In this latter situation he would draw a consolidated salary, though his work may be no more civil than it was when employed in the arsenal; and he would immediately cease to draw deferred pay, and also be at once taxed on his income. His pay, however, in both situations would be about the same, when all allowances and privileges are taken into consideration.

REVOLUTION IN TEA.

(Englishman.)

It is no exaggeration to speak of the altered conditions of the tea trade in our time as amounting to a revolution. The old monopoly of China might have been expected to make a better stand, but we have seen the Indian product triumph over all obstacles, and take the lead in the home market. Even more surprising than the success of Indian tea is the rapid advance of our Ceylon rival, which is in a great degree due to the energy and enterprise of the leaders in the industry. The other day, Reuter solemnly reported that Ceylon tea had attained the phenomenal price of 100 shillings per pound in London, and the probability is that the correspondent who supplied the startling intelligence was quite unsuspicious of the hoax that was implied in quoting such a price as that of a genuine market transaction. As we explained, the Ceylon planters, with a wager in view, are themselves responsible for the running up of the price at the Mincing Lane sales, and Gallabonde Estate is to be congratulated on having won the bet, by obtaining the top price. While, however, these sales are inflated by friendly competition, they serve to illustrate the methods by which Ceylon teas have been bought so much into notice. Ceylon tea commands the more admiration for its commercial growth, that it only dates from 1868, the year of the coffee blight. It possesses some of the good qualities of both India and China teas, and it can be used without blending; it has grown greatly in public favour, its consumption in the United Kingdom last year being upwards of 30,000,000 lbs. Its keeping qualities are not always satisfactory, and much of it deteriorates rapidly on exposure to the air.

Old records show that the tea-plant was known in India a hundred years ago, as a curiosity in gardens. Warren Hastings sent some seeds to a friend in Bhutan, and in 1788, Sir Joseph Banks, on behalf of the East India Company, submitted a formal proposal to the Native authorities for the cultivation of tea. Six years later the Company itself discouraged the idea, from fear of injuring its China trade. In 1825 the Society of Arts moved in the matter, and offered their gold medal for a successful experiment. But the reward was not claimed till 1839, when a Mr. C. A. Bruce, to whom the discovery of tea in India is commonly attributed, was awarded the medal, "for discovering the indigenous tea tracts, and successfully cultivating and preparing tea in the British possessions in India." The credit was, however, contested by a Native named Moneram Dewan; while a Captain Charlton had actually received a medal from the Calcutta Agricultural Society five years before, for drawing attention to the existence of the tea-plant in Assam. All unknown to the Society of Arts the Government made two unsuccessful attempts to start a tea garden between 1835 and 1838, and in 1840 the Indian Tea Company was formed. But in those days distances were great in India, while prejudice was even stronger than to-day; so that it was nearly ten years before the "tea-fever" took hold of the public. Then the eagerness to invest caused estates to fetch many times their value, and soon brought about the inevitable crisis. Huge profits and dividends had been made, not so much from tea manufactured as from the far easier production of seed, and temporary success led to extravagance, not to say fraud—company promoters having been known even to sell land which had no existence.

LAW AND POLICE IN THE PUNJAB.

ALLEGED TRAFFIC IN WOMEN.

Some time during last year the police at Lahore successfully prosecuted some natives of the district for enticing away certain women from the villages for the purpose of selling them to cultivators in Sind. As this disgraceful traffic in women had long been in vogue, every effort was made to unearth the offenders and to connect the crime with them, to secure convictions, with a view of putting a stop to the practice of dealing in women.

In 1890 three men were sent up for trial to the District Magistrate at Lahore, and of these, one was sentenced to 11 years imprisonment under Section 366 and 344–346, and Gurdit Singh and Ram Singh, under Section 366, to 7 years imprisonment each. The District Magistrate had found that the accused had set out from Santpura to convey five women to Sukkur, with the view of selling or otherwise disposing of them to persons in Sind and elsewhere as bigamous wives or concubines. He found that whilst the women had no moral objection to entering into such relations with persons near their house, they were unwilling to go on such a distant journey, and that force was consequently used to compel the women to enter the train at Mian Mir by the accused acting in concert. This use of force constituted abduction within the meaning of Section 362 I. P. C., and in connection with the purpose for which the women were abducted rendered the accuseds' act an offence under Section 366.

The accused having appealed against this order, the case came before the Chief Court, who first dealt with the conviction of all accused under Section 366.

They agreed with the finding of the District Magistrate, that no deceit having been used, the mere conveying away of the women for the purpose mentioned, however grossly immoral, did not amount to an offence under Section 366; but they disagreed with his finding that the women were rapidly taken across the platform and hustled into the train, and that, therefore they were taken away from Mian Mir by force. With respect to this, the Chief Court observed that they could hardly help thinking that the magistrate, in arriving at this finding, must have been influenced by his desire to punish what was certainly very immoral and disgraceful conduct on the part of the accused, and his seeing that the only means of doing so, on the charge then before him, was to find that force was used by the accused at Mian Mir. The Judges said that the magistrate, though he did find that the women were kept in restraint at Santpura and Bhanni, did not appear to find that there was any use of force in order to compel them to go from any place up to the time of the arrival of the party at the station. The sitting of the women under the trees in charge of their male companions was an act perfectly compatible with the women going voluntarily; it was what any three men escorting five women to go off by train would naturally have done. So, too, was the speaking to the station-master, and the taking the women straight to the train. As to the "hustling," this, the women said, was done by the station-master, and it seemed to have been no more than what would be done to any party in the position of the five women. The women admitted that they made no complaint to anyone at Mian Mir, and the constable Azum Khan, who jumped into the train and travelled to Raewind, where he reported the matter to the sergeant, did so not because any act on the part of the accused or the women led him to believe that the latter were being taken away by force, but because he had heard that this immoral traffic was going on, and he suspected, from the general appearance of the party, that they were engaged in it. No doubt the women did complain, either of their own accord or on being questioned by the sergeant when the train reached Raewind, but the Chief Court did not infer from this that their departure from Mian Mir had been against their will. On the contrary, it appeared to them a most natural inference that their alarm and unwillingness to go was first aroused when they found themselves really off by train —a mode of conveyance which some of them at least never used before—bound for so distant a place as Sukkur. Under these circumstances the Chief Court was unable to concur with the District Magistrate that there was any abduction of the women by the accused from Mian Mir, and they therefore set aside the conviction under Section 366. As regards the question whether the accused might not be convicted on the facts found of a charge under Section 498 I. P. C., the Chief Court remarked that this was a point they need not now consider, for, as no complaint had been filed against the accused by the husbands of the women, it would be impossible to alter the conviction under Section 498. The accused were therefore simply acquitted under Section 366.

As regards the charges under Section 344–346 I. P. C. against Atu, the Chief Court said that there was no reason to believe that the women were subjected to any restraint or confinement at Santpura in which they could not acquiesce during their stay there. They were therefore also unable to uphold this conviction, and acquitted the accused on all charges.

MR. BRADLAUGH.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The news of Mr. Bradlaugh's death will cause no surprise, though it will occasion great grief in India, where his personality has for some little time past been the subject of a hero-worship which there is no need to look upon otherwise than with sympathy and respect. Three years ago he was scarcely known in this country—a circumstance which reminds us that it is quite possible to estimate the Indian part of his work without paying regard to his special opinions in other domains of intellectual activity. The turn in his destiny, indeed, which changed him from a lecturer into a politician somewhat obscured from view the iconoclastic part of his work, as he called it—work which, so far as the English, and, we may add, the Indian, public were concerned, he advanced on his own lines and independently of them. Even here the years brought with them a change of mood and attitude, no matter how tenaciously Mr. Bradlaugh may have held to the convictions which first brought him into prominence. To those who were careful to limit their sympathy with him to his political and social work it has been, for more reasons than one, gratifying to find that the large opportunities which entrance into Parliament gave Mr. Bradlaugh forced into a quite secondary place the peculiar work which brought him his early fame, and which, we may add, provoked prejudices and animosities in the midst of a nation which is still in the main profoundly religious. When he had conquered a place for himself in Parliament, he saw that there was much better work for a man who wanted to do good in his day and generation than turning heavy artillery against the cherished beliefs of the times. Those who fought so hard to keep him out of the House of Commons little suspected the kind of man that they had chosen to quarrel with. It was a surprise to every one of them later on to find that the bull-dog pugnacity with which he returned to the encounter every time he was driven off only kept from view a "sweet reasonableness" which is becoming increasingly rare at Westminster. No more conciliatory man ever took part in public life than this gentle Danton, moved to defiance not by his own love for warfare, but by the unwisdom of his enemies. When the battle was over, people saw they had mistaken their man in two things—first, in thinking that he was afraid of them, and then in thinking that there was anything in him of which they need be afraid. He became in time one of the most intrinsically Conservative forces in the House. The Conservatives got to like him, finding that the only thihg about him that they could not forgive was the wrong that they had done him, though, for the matter of that, they had faithful allies in a large following of Nonconformists, whose backslidings Mr. Bright assailed with intolerable sarcasm. He became, if not one of the most popular men in the House, at all events one of the most respected. Members trooped in when he was speaking, for he spoke eloquently, and never without meaning and conviction. No one put more honest energy in his work. Prompt and instinctive as was his apprehension of a subject, he never took one in hand without mastering it, doing with his might whatever he put his hand to. There was always the consciousness amongst those who listened to him that it was an original voice and not an echo that they were hearing. In the brief but eloquent speech which he delivered to the Bombay Congress, he told the people who were looking to him to give voice in Parliament to their wishes, "I must judge the right I advocate, and I may not always judge it as you do; but as long as you let me speak for you, I will only speak that which seems to me to be right and true." It was the same with his attitude on questions of social economy. Though he was well abreast of the latest and most advanced opinion on these matters, he was never led on to the acceptance of any view with which he could not put himself in full intellectual sympathy. Doubtless he would have won votes if he had joined the mob who have been recklessly advocating an Eight Hours' Bill. He certainly lost votes by taking a line of his own on the subject, though he has certainly gained the respect of honest men of all parties by his resolute resistance to the radical propagandists, headed by Mr. Cunninghame Graham. Of such a man we may fairly say, in full recollection of points upon which we differed from him, that he could be trusted to represent Indian claims in the British Parliament. We have never understood why he championed such a measure as the Indian Councils Bill of last year, though the ready acquiescence in fair and honest criticism which he showed by drafting the amended scheme was an ample compensation for the mistake of last year. Nor could we approve of his championship of the discontents of the Maharajah of Cashmere, skilfully though he did that particular business. But it is permissible to differ from a politician's work, and yet to accord praise to the spirit in which it was done. We must remember that Mr. Bradlaugh was a beginner in the advocacy of Indian interests, a beginner who at the last had had scarcely two years' experience of the work. Imagine the same man, with ten years' experience of the subject, with his keen bright intelligence, his absorbing passion for justice, and his broad-minded sympathy with humanity, and it is of a "Member for India" who would have done much good and little harm that we should have had to think. But he has died young, not as men's years are counted, but as we count the special service to India, actual and intended, which alone makes him a personage interesting to the people of this country. We all have cause to regret his death; those have especial cause to regret it who knew the man as he was, splendid in physique, but more splendid still in the keen clearness of his intelligence, in his courage, his unflinching honesty of pprpose, in a kindliness of heart that would have been almost feminine except for the manliness which was dominant over every act of his life. So far as India is concerned, his death is the disappointment of a promise upon which hung many hopes, and all who hold that this country needs an unofficial spokesman in Parliament, whose honesty and disinterestedness shall be beyond suspicion, will recognise that India has lost by his death.

MADRAS.

THE total excise revenue of the Madras Presidency amounted in 1889–90 to Rs. 1,14,02,052, viz. from country spirits, including toddy, Rs. 1,03,20,629; foreign spirits, Rs. 4,16,666; miscellaneous, Rs. 24,535; rentals for the vend of opium, including miscellaneous items, Rs. 2,57,697; and pass duty on opium collected at Indore, and pass fees in account current with Bombay, Rs. 3,82,525.

THE fund raised in Bangalore to commemorate the Jubilee of the Queen-Empress, and amounting to about Rs. 7,000, has been lying idle since its collection. A Technical Institute was first proposed, but abandoned as the fund collected was much too small for the purpose. Next the idea was started that an addition to some institution already existing—say the Museum or the Bowring Institute—would be advisable; but nothing came of it. Now the idea is afloat that a good public clock is a desideratum in the Civil and Military Station; and Mr Cook, Principal of the Central College and Municipal Commissioner, intended to propose to the Municipal Board last Saturday that the Committee of the Jubilee Fund be asked to give a moiety of that fund for the purpose. It is proposed to fix the clock in St. Andrew's tower.

A GAZETTE EXTRAORDINARY just published gives the programme of the Cesarewitch's reception at Madras. He arrives by special train at 9 A.M. to-morrow (Friday), and will be received at the railway station by the Governor and his personal staff; the General Officer Commanding the Madras District, with his staff, and the Commissioner of Police also attending. The Madras Railway Volunteers will form a guard of honour on the station platform, the native troops forming a guard outside. The route will be lined by troops, the Gevernor's body-guard forming the escort, and the British infantry with a band will form a guard of honour at Government House. Salutes will be fired on the arrival of the special train and on the Cesarewitch's arrival at Government House. The Commander-in-Chief, the Chief Justice, the Bishop of Madras, the Members of Council, the Puisne Judges of the High Court, and all civil and military officers in Madras, and other gentlemen desirous of attending, will assemble at the railway station, and the Foreign Consuls are also invited. The Commander-in-Chief, the Chief Justice, the Bishop of Madras, and the Members of Council will be presented to the Cesarewitch by the Governor.

HIS EXCELLENCY the Governor in Council is pleased to grant to the Hon. Mr. Justice Candy, acting Judge of Her Majesty's High Court of Judicature at Bombay, six months' leave on urgent private affairs from the 25th April 1891.

LAST Saturday afternoon Mr. W. S. Caine left for Europe by the mail steamer. At 11.45 A.M. Mr. Caine, in company of Mr. Jamshedjee N. Tata, Mr. Dinshaw Edalji Vacha, and Mr. Dorab J. Tata, drove in a carriage and pair to the Apollo Bunder, and, accompanied by the three gentlemen, proceeded in a steam launch to the mail steamer which left at 2 P.M.

GENERAL SIR HARRY AND THE MISSES PRENDERGAST arrived here on Monday morning, and were guests at Government House. The General left for Cutch, en route for Dwarka, on Wednesday by the B.I.S.N. Company's steamer Kapurthala. He is accompanied by Mr. J. Raitts, his able assistant. They go from Dwarka to Amreli via Jamnugger and Rajkote, and return to Baroda on the 12th instant.

THE meeting held in the Town Hall on the 30th ult. was not very well attended, the audience largely consisting of native gentlemen. The proceedings were of a similar character to temperance meetings all the world over, except that perhaps the denunciations against non-abstainers were a trifle less fiery than usual. The Rev. Mr. Bateson's speech on temperance in the Army proved rather trying to a good many of the native gentlemen present, who evidently were struggling hard with their "beauty sleep." Mr. W. S. Caine, who modestly paused in the entrance while a lady was playing "See the Conquering Hero Comes" on the piano, was greeted with loud applause, and his speech was well received by the audience. The last-named gentleman leaves by to-day's mail steamer.

THE Bombay Municipal Corporation at their meeting on Thursday adopted the Committee's report on the revised estimates of the Tansa Waterworks, and sanctioned the amended estimates at Rs. 1,47,00,000, resolving at the same time that application be made to the Government of India for sanction to the raising of the additional 24 lakhs of rupees required to cover the enhanced charges for the works. The Corporation next considered Colonel Merewether's proposition that the estimated expenditure on new roads, planting and turfing of new ground, filling low ground, and building the superintendent's house at the Victoria Gardens, be sanctioned at Rs. 12,550, Rs. 1,000, Rs. 18,180, and Rs. 16,000 raspectively; but, notwithstanding the explanation given by the Municipal Commissioner that the several improvements in connection with the Gardens were necessary, a majority of Councillors, mostly natives, voted against the items, and the proposition was therefore lost.

H.E. LADY HARRIS visited the Parsee Lying-in-Hospital on the 30th ult., at 5 P.M., and was received by the honorary secretary, Dr. Temuljee Bhicajee Nariman, and the following members of the committee:—Mr. Sorabjee Shapoorjee Bengalee, C.I.E., Mr. Framjee Dinshaw Petit, Dr. Cowasjee Hormusjee, Cowasjee Pestonjee, Dinshaw B. Master, and Jehangeer J. Cursetjee. Her Excellency expressed herself highly satisfied with her visit, and presented a beautiful little picture to the Institution, and expressed her willingness to visit the hospital again. The honorary secretary, Dr. Temuljee Bhicajee Nariman, gave the following brief report of the working of the hospital. The institution was started as an experimental measure about four years ago. Four hundred and fifty females had taken advantage of it, and over two thousand had been refused admission for want of accommodation. The present accommodation was sufficient to admit ten females every month. In the commencement it was for six patients monthly. There are sixteen females in the hospital at present. The monthly expenditure is Rs. 750, and the monthly income from fees Rs. 450. The difference was paid from a temporary fund started for its maintenance. The committee have been able to raise another fund of Rs. 50,000 for a permanent building, and have applied to Government for a free site. As soon as they hear from Government, they will commence work, and make a fresh appeal to the Parsee community for help. If the accommodation be doubled, the committee hope to make the Iustitution self-supporting, and admit a larger number of free patients. At present they can only admit 20 per cent. free.

THE snow at Simla has stopped the progress of the improvements at the Viceregal Lodge, where workmen have been busy since the close of the season. A small turret is being added to the main building, on the summit of which is to be a water reservoir. Considerable additions are also being made to the stables, where a new row of buildings is in process of erection, containing stalls for fourteen horses, and servants' rooms above; in addition to this there is a new coach-house and some other servants' rooms.

Pressure of Indian mail news prevented us from reproducing last week the following letter, addressed by Sir George Birdwood to the Times; but it will still have interest for our Anglo-Indian readers:—

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "TIMES."

SIR,—It would appear that the Madras Times is responsible for giving currency to the statement that a number of Brahmans are going about the Deccan saying that "according to the Hindoo shastras" (i.e. sacred "Scriptures") British rule will cease in India with the present century, when the government of the country will "revert to them again." I need scarcely say that no prophecy of the sort exists in any of the canonical books of the Hindoos, and that, if it did, the Brahmans are the last people in India who would desire to see it fulfilled. Their position and influence have immensely improved under the British raj, and, intolerable as some of the effects of our Western civilization must necessarily be to them, there are no people more loyal to our administrative supremacy in India. The prophecy, in the form in which it appears in the Madras Times, seems to me to have been invented by some enemy of the "Congress movement"; and, so far as it has any support from the shastras, is probably founded on the fact that, according to the Rewa-purana (more correctly Rewa-mahatmya), the Ganges, which, ever since the Indian Aryas emigrated from the Punjab into Hindoostan, has been the chief sacred river of India, will cease to be so regarded from samvat 1951, or A.D. 1895. The special sanctity of the tripatha-ya Ganga, "three-pathed Ganges," flowing out of heaven, over earth and sea, into hell, will then pass, and for ever, to the Nerbudda. This is the Narmada, the "Delighting" of the Hindoos, the Nahr-Buddha, "the river of Buddha" of Vincent; the latter etymology being a more delightful absurdity even than the derivation of Lambeth from Lamabeth, "the house of the Archbishop," for Vincent was in earnest, and not writing for Punch. The Nerbudda is already a river of great sanctity, for the people of Guzerat and the Deccan, especially under its older name of Riwa, which it gives to the State of Rewa (cf. rew, a ford, shoal, sand, Naharaina, Riviera, &c.), in which it rises, near the sources of the Son. Its old name is still current in most of the six States of Rewa-Kantha ("river-side") lying along its left bank near its debouchure in the Gulf of Cambay; and the same word reappears in the names of Rewas and Rewadanda, small ports in the Colaba district, near Bombay, and possibly in that of the tahsil of Rewari, in the Punjab. This alternative name of the Nerbudda takes us back to one of the oldest known Aryan names of a river, the Rha,* or Volga, the name of which has come down to us in the word rhubarb—that is, rêon barbaron, or rheum—i.e., Rha-barbarum, otherwise Rha-Ponticum. The word is also directly connected with the Greek reo and reio, the Finnic riwa, the Latin rivus, Persian rud, the English "river"; and with such river-names as Eurotus, Callirrhœ, Strymon, and Rothay (Ambleside). According to the Rewa-purana, therefore, in 1894 will be the last of the great duodecennial fairs, held when the Sun is in Aries and the planet Jupiter in Aquarius, at Tri-veni ("Triple-braid") or Prayaga, the hallowed point of confluence, near the modern Allahabad, of the Ganges, Jumna, and mystic Saraswati; and thenceforth the historical Ganges, "the purifier of the fallen," will be deserted as the supreme fountain for the cleansing of sin for "the most ancient Rewa," or Nerbudda. All along the course of the Ganges, from Gangotri, its mountain spring, and Hari-dwar ("Hari's door"), where it bursts from the Himalayas, to the island of Saugor (Sagara, "Ocean"), at the mouth of the Hooghly, vested sacerdotal interests are strong; and the religious observances of 3,000 years cannot, one would presume, be revolutionized in a year; and, after all, the Rewa-purana may not be of sufficient authority to determine the event; but the change is prescribed, and I have heard it talked of among the Hindoos of Western India for the last forty years. If it ever takes place, we may expect that it will be worked out in the most matter-of-fact manner, Karod, Bhadbat, Sukaltirth, &c., gradually, and without, at first, much observation, taking the place of Prayaga, Benares, &c. But in anticipation the possible devolution of popular veneration from the Ganges to the Rewa in 1895 strongly affects the imagination, and must move a people so impressionable and devout as the Brahmanical Hindoos to the inmost depths of their internal consciousness. It really seems to involve a reconstruction of Hindooism in one way or another, and at least affords every Hindoo an occasion of profound consideration. The progressive may seek in it an opportunity for authoritatively harmonizing modern ideas with their ancient Brahmanical faith, and the reactionary for securing such a revision of existing caste regulations as will more clearly define and defend the future position of Hindoo orthodoxy in its yearly growing contact with Western civilization. Both parties will probably, in the end, be found reconciled in an identical formula. If it can be arrived at, Brahmanical culture will yet be saved; and that would prove the final victory of the wary wisdom of the Hindoo race over "the vain mad fight for life and breath" of the last of their political conquerors. Meanwhile it cannot be too clearly understood that every sincere Hindoo regards the caste system of his forefathers as now dangerously menaced, and that the supreme question with all the more thoughtful and patriotic of them is how, under the circumstances of their present international relations, it may be insured against further disintegration. They know that if India—that is, India of the Hindoos—is to live at all in future as in the past, caste, which is the chief corner-stone of Hindooism, must be preserved; and they are prepared to make any sacrifice so that it at least may be maintained intact. And, in so far as they are animated in this by an instinctive desire to vindicate their historical individuality, they should have our warmest sympathy. Of late years the reaction against European ideas has been rapidly gathering force in India, and it is easy to comprehend how greatly it must be intensified by the associations connected with such a date as 1895, and the close, with the current decade, of a great secular period. It would be quite natural, therefore, if the hope should spring up far and wide that, with the end of the present century, will come the end, also, not of British rule in India, but of the undue predominance of those aggressive Western influences which, wherever they reach, are rapidly undermining the whole industrial, social, and religious fabric of Hindooism.

In illustration of this estrangement of Hindoo feeling from us, I was allowed some years ago to publish in the columns of the Times a series of Kirtans, or ballads, that were then being sung, or otherwise circulated, throughout the "Mahratta country" of Western India. They were especially directed against the indulgence in European luxuries, inasmuch as their use was subversive of the caste system of the Hindoos, and of the authority of the Brahmans, based on it. Since then I have carefully collected everything of the sort that I have been able to get from India, as such popular publications, produced for sale only among the people themselves, afford Englishmen a clearer insight than they can in any other wise obtain of the true condition, wants, and aspirations of the countless millions of Hindoos living hidden from our eyes beyond the English and Anglicized "pale" in India. What strikes one most is the universality of these local publications, and the unanimity with which they all deal with the same old subjects—the greatness of the Hindoo gods, the sanctity of caste, the evils of foreign influences and institutions, and the necessity of the due discharge of all the duties of life as laid down by the so-called "Code of Manu" and cognate law-books of the Hindoos. These songs and ballads even cease to be interesting to Europeans on account of their monotony, and this is why I have not for so long a time thought it worth while to send any more of them to you for republication in the Times. But a broadsheet I have recently received will, I think, be acceptable, in the present connection, to many of your readers. Of course, much of the potency of its impacted venom is evaporated in the translation; but enough remains to show the intensity of native antipathy to our foreign system of social economy, local government, and education. This little sheet is headed "Hindoo Maxims," and the thirteen given are as follows:—

Accursed the man, whatever his worth,
Who is poor in purse, and base in his birth.

That man is a fool, whosoever he be,
Who'd not do anything for a rupee.

What "master pleases" be careful to do,
And be cheating him while he's beating you.

'Tis good to eat, but keep your own pice,
And, if you can manage it, steal the rice.

When you hear the cry "Murder," run away,
The police will take you up if you stay.

If you beat a man, swear he beat you,
And to his one witness you bring your two.

The unity of the Tamil nation
Is maintained by caste and litigation.

Municipalities always tell lies;
The Census is but a Tax in disguise.

Why tax for Bridges and Roads? In our lives
We need but three things—gold, houses, and wives.

A confounded, useless botheration
Is your brand-new nuisance—Sanitation.

To cook for man woman chiefly was meant,
Ignorance is her highest ornament.

If you don't wish them to gobble up you,
Be kind to the devils—and white men too.

Ablessed the man who never lacks
For assafœtida, ghi,* and jacks!

* Clarified butter.

These brutal distichs are attributed in a foot-note to the "Kurrol" of "Tiruvalluva." But this is only the author's bitter humour. The Kurrol, a translation of which, by the Rev. G. U. Pope, was recently published by Messrs. W. H. Allen & Co., is a body of "proverbial philosophy," meted out in couplets, on the duties of man's daily life, and dated not later than the tenth century of our era. The real name of its author is unknown, but of course he knew nothing of the bullying ways of "white men," or of "sanitary improvements," "female education," and the rest of the wry-faced blessings of our Western civilization. The sting of the ascription of the doggerel I have quoted to "Tiruvalluva" lies in the fact that he is one of the purest of Hindoo poets, and, like all the classical writers of the Hindoos, remarkable for the delicacy of his descriptions of women, and for his elevated sense of the relations that should subsist between them and men.

This leads me to the agitation against the practice of "child-marriage," recently undertaken by Mr. M. M. Malabari. The marriage of a child is utterly abhorrent to the moral sense of every man; and Mr. Malabari has my sympathy in his efforts to expurge this cruelty from Hindooism. But, above any other subject affecting the Hindoos, this is the one they should be scrupulously left to deal with themselves. Parsees and Mahomedans, and, perhaps, even Englishmen, may discuss it in the newspaper press, and in pamphlets and books, but the organizing of committees to concuss Government on the question should be left to the Hindoos themselves. It is an abominable stain on their civilization, although, in truth, rather nominal than real; while, on the other hand, the marriage laws of the Hindoos have served to create the highest type of family life known. For its simplicity, affection, reverence, and purity, it is absolutely unapproachable by any other nation. This, however, is not my point, which is the great risks run in intermeddling from without with the inner life of the Hindoos. The Act of the Hindoo Legislature authorizing the marriage of Hindoo widows was one of the chief causes of the tacit acquiescence of the Hindoos, in many parts of India, in the Mutiny of 1857. Everyone who was in India at the time must be perfectly well aware of this, although the fact may nowhere be on official record. That their sensitiveness on such matters has in no degree diminished in the last forty years, is shown by the reception given in India to Mr. Ashburner's article on the Hindoo marriage laws, in a late number of the National Review. In reply to him the Banganivasi writes:—

"Mr. Ashburner, in order to falsely slander Hindoo wives and widows, has set steadfastly before him the picture of English wives and widows; and it is a faithful description of the English women we have from his pen. Among them, truly, 'there is no wife, no widow, nor chaste woman.' English society has granted full liberty to its females, whether wives or widows, to indulge in libertinism. . . . In England there is no distinction between a chaste woman and a public woman. In England there are no prostitutes as a separate class, because there are prostitutes in every house. . . . The English writer, Reynolds, and the French writer, Max O'Rell, have revealed these secrets. . . . It is only by making Hindoo society your model that you English people may, after ages, raise yourselves from the Hell into which you have sunk. . . . The picture of your vice is being constantly witnessed in your law courts, in your everyday life, in your literature, and in your history. Our young men of good character, who happen to go unguarded to your country, fall into the snares of your sirens there, and return home utterly demoralized, degraded, and depraved. . . . In your country a woman having even 100 lovers is accounted chaste; but in our country the chaste woman is worshipped as a goddess, and worships her husband as a god; and when he dies she either ascends the funeral pyre or practises a life-long brahmacharya [life of continence, literally, 'Brahmanical practice,' —i.e., asceticism], in expectation of meeting her beloved one in the next world. In this world, none but a Hindoo has so strong a right to call himself the son of his father; and the Hindoo female would rather cast herself a thousand times into the blazing fire than accept your accursed counsel—i.e., as to the age of consent, widow remarriage, &c."

Where is the wisdom of driving patient people to exasperation like this? And note, what has infuriated the Banganivasi is not so much the article in the National Review, but the fact that it is written by a distinguished Bombay civilian, who only the other day was Acting Governor of Bombay, and may therefore be suspected of reflecting the opinions and the possible intentions of the English officials in India. There is the rub. I could send you fifty similar extracts from Hindoo newspapers and pamphlets on this vexed question of the "Age of Consent"; and they all are equally remarkable not only for their opposition to any legislation on the subject, but for the way in which they utterly ignore the old Acts of the Indian Legislature in suppressing sati (widow-immolation), and legalizing the marriage of widows. These Acts simply do not exist for the orthodox Hindoo, and those who avail themselves of the latter are, ipso facto, no longer Hindoos, but reprobate outcasts.

All this should be very instructive to stay-at-home English people who take an honest interest in India. It should bring home to them, in a very practical manner, the great difficulty of our position in India, standing, as the paramount Power, between the ancient co-operative civilization of the country itself and the modern competitive civilization introduced from Europe, and responsible for the peaceful regulation of the friction that must of necessity everywhere arise between them. This friction is found at every point of contact between the two systems, and is based on the inherent antagonism that has always existed between the "excessive individualism that has been the noisy glory of the West and the self-denying communism which, where it has not been overthrown by foreign conquerors, has made the quiet stability of 'the immemorial East.'" Augurium ratio est, et conjectura futuri; and if we self-governing English people fail to rightly apprehend the cardinal facts that should determine the policy of our rule in India, then not all the warnings of "the astrologers, the star-gazers, the monthly prognosticators," and the apocryphal Hindoo shastras can save us from the things they are said to declare shall come upon us.

I have the honour to be, Sir, your most obedient servant,

GEORGE BIRDWOOD.

THE SIMLA INSANITY.

As the time approaches for the annual flight of the Viceroy and Heads of Departments to the Hills, the press of Calcutta returns to its annual custom of denouncing the "Simla Exodus." Under the heading of "The Simla Insanity," the Statesman this year leads the way of protest. The late editor of the Calcutta Journal, Mr. Robert Knight, was the staunch and uncompromising opponent of the official movement, and the 27th of January being the anniversary of Mr. Knight's death, his successor in the editorial chair follows an "In Memoriam" leader with another, recalling how long and how strongly his predecessor endeavoured to stop the departure of the lords of the Council from the plains where heat and dullness reigned to the mountain where cool breezes and all manner of delectable delights waited the coming of the weary Indian official. The present editor of the Statesman, whilst regretting that the task of protest which has fallen to his lot cannot be carried out with that fulness of knowledge, keenness of insight, and clearness, and force of diction which were so markedly conspicuous in all his predecessor's writings, does not, however, shirk the duty which has devolved upon him—the duty which is a sacred one with all journalists—of instructing Governments. Here is how the Calcutta monitor of Viceroys commences his note of warning:—"With Sir Frederick Roberts now in Calcutta, and the Viceroy and the Government also in our midst for a few short weeks, preparatory to another flight to their summer retreat in the hills for a further nine months of the year, we should be wanting in our duty if we did not avail ourselves of the brief opportunity thus afforded of saying a few words pointedly on the subject, here in the metropolis of India, where public opinion can in some degree make itself felt. We shall have much to say that will be very unpleasant reading to Sir Frederick Roberts, but we advise him for his own sake to stay in Calcutta and hear it, for the sake of the safety of the Empire which is so largely in his keeping."

What, under these circumstances has been the action of Sir Frederick Roberts we can only surmise. The Wedding Guest in Coleridge's immortal ballad did not go to seek counsel of the Ancient Mariner, but once "buttonholed" by that grandest of "bores," he could do nothing but listen "like a three years' child." The Mariner had his will with him, and so doubtless had the editor with Sir Frederick Roberts.

The editor devotes four lengthy columns to denounce the wickedness of the exodus to Simla. It is not the cost of the annual migration which chiefly affects him. That has ever been subordinate, he says, in his eyes, to the political mischief of which it has been the parent. Quoting Sir John Kaye, as having affirmed that Simla "had produced more political insanity than any other place in the world," he goes on to reproduce the old charges brought against it by Calcutta. Not only does the Government lose all "touch" during the eight months of its residence on the mountain with what little public opinion there is in the Presidency towns, but it finds itself in an atmosphere which insensibly affects its vision until it is able to see nothing in its true light. This has been spoken and written in Calcutta over and over again since the day on which Sir John Lawrence took his first departure for Simla and allowed the Heads of Departments to follow him. Calcutta has never ceased to denounce the "exodus" as a wicked and insane thing, and such denunciation is likely to continue. But the editor of the Statesman goes further. He looks upon Simla as having caused every trouble and difficulty which the Government of India has had to meet since Simla became an official seat of residence. He instances many such troubles and difficulties; but here are two which he commences with:—

"It was at Simla, as we shall presently show, that, in 1838, Sir William Macnaghten succeeded in persuading Lord Auckland that we could secure the perpetual alliance of the Afghan people by forcing the half-imbecile Shah Soojah upon them as their Amir. It was at Simla, again, that the late Sir Charles Macgregor, in 1884, persuaded Sir Frederick Roberts and Sir Frederick Haines to consider seriously his mad project of 1876-77 for embarkng a force of 65,000 men at Bombay for Baghdad, to march thence up the Euphrates and Tigris to attack Russia in the Caucasus, or Armenia! So ashamed of the project had he himself become four years before, that he sent a letter to the London Statesman from Cabul, in which he denied that he had ever suggested such a project at all. When writing thus, he was not aware that the fact of the scheme had been elicited from Mr. Stanhope in the House of Commons, by an interpellation of Mr. Grant Duff, while Lady Macgregor has told us that the scheme was conceived by her husband in concert with Lord Salisbury, who also had become so utterly ashamed of the insanity in 1880, that he excised with his own hand, every line in her husband's diary that connected his lordship's name with the project. Ashamed of the scheme, Colonel Macgregor at first denied that he had ever projected it, while we now learn from his Life, published by Lady Macgregor, that he brought it forward a second time, in consultation with Sir Frederick Roberts and Sir Frederick Haines at Simla, in June 1884. The scheme was rejected by them in favour of an almost equally wild one for marching 30,000 men to Herat. And this scheme was Sir Frederick Roberts's own."

Without pretending to offer a syllable in defence of the above "insanities," one might fairly ask if the writer is aware that there is a power in England superior to all "Authorities" in India? Why blame Simla for evil done which the British Government was as responsible for as the Indian one? We are not of the Russophobist school to which the late Sir Charles Macgregor and his friends belonged; but we do not think that even Lord Lytton would have gone into the Afghan War that he did had it not been for promptings from home. It was not "Simla insanity," but a madness which arose much nearer Downing Street.

We shall return to this matter.

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

LIEUTENANT GRIMSTON, 6th Bengal Cavalry, will probably succeed to the Adjutancy of the Viceroy's Bodyguard when Captain Turner has completed his five years' tenure of the post in April next.

THE troops for the Black Mountain Expedition were to begin moving on the 15th instant.

THE 4th Sikhs will arrive at Darban on the 19th; the No. 4 Company Sappers and a squadron of the 11th Bengal Lancers on the 22nd; the Mountain Batteries, on the 25th; the Welsh Fusiliers, 2nd Battalion 5th Gurkhas, on the 27th; Dogras and Khyber Rifles on the 26th; the 11th Bengal Infantry and Guides Infantry on the 27th, when a concentration of troops for the river column and the Filli Spur will be complete. One squadron of the 11th Bengal Lancers, half of the Derajat Mountain Battery, the 28th Punjab Infantry, forming the Oghi Column, will reach their destination on the 26th instant. No. 1 British Mountain Battery and three guns march for Abbotabad on the 19th instant.

THE Lahore paper says that natives who have come across the border to Mardan report that large numbers of Bonerwals are flocking across to join the Black Mountain Hassanzais against our troops. If the report is true, the expedition will be anything but a "promenade." It is, however, not considered likely that the Bonerwals will really try conclusions with us, although a few are sure to join the Hassanzais, as they did last time. Reports which come across the border in this way are invariably full of exaggeration, wherever exaggeration is possible.

A POLK telegram of 29th January states that a column of 200 rifles of the 28th M. I. under Captain Hastings, D. S. O., Lieutenants Dominechetti and Quinn, accompanied by Lieutenant M. J. Tighe, D. S. O., as Political Officer, and Surgeon Dewes, leaves Yawdwin shortly for the Chinbok hills to punish the Panchoung and Mon Chins for their daring attack on the Yawdwin post on January 5th, on which occasion they rushed into the post and succeeded in completely looting the police officer's house, Mr. Barber having a narrow escape. They also wounded a military police sepoy and one follower severely. The same tribes have also to account for the raids committed in the valley since the last expedition. They have collected a number of guns, and report says they intend to make themselves objectionable. The Yawdwin post is to be held by the 28th M. I.

QUITE a gloom has been caused in Umballa by the death of Captain H. P. S. Estridge, Adjutant of the Queen's West Surrey Regiment, writes the Pioneer. Captain Estridge was playing in the station polo game, and, when some distance from the ball, came in collision with another player. Both were violently thrown to the ground, and Captain Estridge's pony rolled over him. He was carried to the Officers' Hospital, but never rallied, or regained consciousness, and passed away without pain on Wednesday evening. The mishap appears to have been purely accidental, and no blame is attached to the officer with whom he came in collision. Captain Estridge was thirty-two years of age and had only lately been promoted to the rank of captain. He succeeded to the adjutancy a few months ago. He was an officer of great promise, and by his kind and genial disposition, and the interest he took in the regiment and in his profession, had endeared himself to all ranks.

THE Bombay Gazette says:—It has been rumoured for some time that after the close of the present season the troopers will be no more known to Bombay harbour, and that Karachi is to be the landing and embarking station for India. Bnt we are glad to learn that the statement is, to say the least, premature, the matter not yet being settled. The question was first brought up last season, and Karachi harbour having been inspected was reported to be quite suitable for trooping purposes. There are, however, many other considerations to be taken into account besides the suitability or otherwise of the Karachi harbour. Such an increase of strength and arrangements in the Commissariat Department would be necessary, that it is doubted if it will not be cheaper to let things remain as they are. Economy, therefore, is the point which, we are told, is now occupying the attention of the authorities Without doubt in time of emergency Karachi as a landing place would be invaluable. Troops could reach the frontier in a couple of days less time than by the Bombay route. But for ordinary purposes in time of peace the advantages of Bombay cannot be gainsaid. The facilities for embarking and disembarking, for docking and repairs, are so great, and the central situation of Bombay renders it so pre-eminently superior for distributing troops to all parts of the country, that we can but imagine, if any change at all be decided upon, that it will not be carried out in the near future, and if Karachi be used as a landing station at all, it will be for the north-west frontier troops only, Bengal, Madras, and Bombay being served precisely as they are to-day.

NATIVE PRESS.

THE AGE OF CONSENT BILL.

The Liberal thinks the Age of Consent Bill a mistake. It does not satisfy the Hindoo community, and it is not in accordance with the dictates of science. If it be passed in its present shape, it will lead to many abuses which did not exist. We need not enumerate them all, but shall mention one: it may lead to cases of abortion. Of course it is not pleasant to discuss the subject in the columns of a newspaper; but that there is such danger we have not the least doubt. And if the law be passed as it stands, it will legalise and license outrages on girls above twelve who have not yet attained their maturity. Thus both on the grounds of religious neutrality and the laws of nature the Bill stands condemned in its present form.

The Hindoo is of opinion that "those who entertain the belief that English education alone will regenerate the Hindoo nation will read with disappointment and pain the speech of Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, an ex-Judge and some time officiating Chief Justice of the High Court of Calcutta. This gentleman opposed the Bill on the ground of its being, in his opinion, an outrage on the orthodox susceptibilities of the Hindoos and an infringement of the Proclamation of the Queen. That the orthodox Hindoos are opposed to the measure now before the public is well known; his colleagues as well as himself know it. But that a person of his culture and experience should think that this amendment of the Penal Code is opposed to the spirit of that memorable document suggests sad comments on the moral weakness of even our best educated countrymen." After disputing the opinions of Sir Romesh Chunder Mitter, our contemporary says:—"The very justification of the absolute supremacy of England in this country is the superior morality and civilization of the English nation, and the opinions of the Government representing such a nation should be as a rule in advance of those of the Indian people. And it is the duty of those Indian gentlemen who have been educated by the literature and example of that nation to help it in giving effect to those advanced opinions as far as may be compatible with their individual convictions."

The Indian Nation says:—"We have stated over and over again that there is little chance of the law affecting practice to any great extent. A class of crimes will be created, the detection of which will be impossible except by parties who have no interest in enforcing the law. We do not therefore support the measure on the grounds ordinarily assigned, namely, the grounds of social reform. Nor do we oppose it on the ground ordinarily assigned. There is proposed no greater encroachment on Hindoo practice than what was created by the Indian Penal Code. The extent of the encroachment may be greater; but there is no alteration in principle. In the second place, interference with criminal practices has already happened more than once, and its legitimacy has been recognised. Witness the abolition of suttee and infanticide. Therefore, let no false alarm be raised. Our position is a middle one. We stand by our amendment. If it has to be explained, in a very short compass it amounts to this: Raise the age of consent as between husband and wife to the attainment of puberty; lay down a definite physical test of puberty; do not lessen the protection which girls already enjoy, and raise the age of consent as between a girl and a stranger to twelve; we might even say thirteen or fourteen."

The Bangabasi says:—"It is an egregious error on the part of our legislators to introduce this Bill into the Council. Of all the ten sanskars (essential and purificatory rites) that of garbadhan is the principal one. It is the ceremony which must be observed as soon as a certain physical event takes place in the wife, and which is indissolubly connected with the Hindoo religion. If, on the occurrence of such event before the age of twelve, the observance of the garbadhan ceremony is prohibited by the force of law, it will certainly interfere with the religious rites of the Hindoos."

The Dainik declares that the Shastras say that it is at the age of ten years that a certain physical event takes place in the girl; it may take place later on. The Shastras enjoin that on the attainment of certain physical conditions there must be the consummation of marriage. If the garbadhan ceremony is not then observed, the progeny of the girl will not be entitled to perform religious rites for to give offerings to the manes. As instances are not rare of girls becoming mothers at the age of thirteen, the provisions of the Bill are looked upon as most dangerous to Hindooism. To limit the age of consummation of marriage is wholly opposed to the Shastras. On the other hand, it would not be irreligious if the limit were fixed at the age when a certain physical event takes place in the wife.

The Sahachar thinks that the majority of the people are opposed to the Bill. Though no one doubts the sincerity of the intentions of the Government, still a general consternation pervades the country. It is the opinion of the public that a council in which the people are not represented is not competent to consider these questions, and that it is not desirable that the Legislature should interfere in a matter which is being considered by the people themselves.

CHOLERA IN CHINA.—A native newspaper in Shanghai lately published an article by a Chinese medical practitioner on the proper treatment of cholera, a disease specially fatal to Chinese. The writer notices seven symptoms of cholera—vomiting, diarrhœa, low pulse, cold limbs, perspiration, spasms, and exhaustion. His practice is at once to order a prepared dose to be heated and taken warm to the extent of a good-sized teacupful. In this dose the main things are ginger, ginseng, Chinese cardamoms, and a sort of caraway seed. After this the patient receives atractylodes alba, called peshu by the apothecaries, a medicine of which the Chinese think a great deal as an aromatic tonic and stimulant. They use it in cases of profuse sweating and apoplexy, chronic dysentery, and rheumatism. It belongs to the cynaraceæ, among the species of which are found many plants known in Europe as furnishing useful stomachic and febrifuge medicines. If the disease progresses still into the spasmodic state with numbness of the limbs he would use pæonia albiflora with boyma rutæcarpa, and a pepper wort, known to druggists by the name of xanthoxylum piperitum. It is one of the commoner aromatic stimulants in China and Japan. To this he adds a cinnamon bark. To soothe the extraordinary derangement of the system he gives pig's liver mixed with brick dust from the inside of a furnace—a mixture known as "liver of the hiding dragon." To this are added two or three ounces of ginger. He notices as curious that the name of the disease does not occur in Chinese literature before the middle of the 17th century, and says that it came with the present dynasty from Manchuria, spreading from the north southward. He remarks the use of the name "Manchurian sickness" and of "the foreign cholera." Chinese doctors appear, from what is here said, to be fond of using mild remedies, while they avoid those which are very powerful in their operation; as to the nature of the medicines, they appear, on the whole, much the same as our own.

LAST month the Government decided to raise the status of the Kapurthalla Raja in the matter of complimentary khillats, which will in future be of the value of Rs. 6,000 instead of Rs. 4,500 as heretofore. This honour is granted in consideration of the State's loyal services in the Afghan War, and of the good administration of the State during the minority of the present Raja.

A TELEGRAM from the Miranzai Expedition, dated Camp Ghandasam, through Koha, 30th January, says:—A reconnaissance of two companies of the 5th Punjab Infantry with some of the head-quarters staff, left here at 11 A.M. yesterday, to reconnoitre up the Dar-a-dar Valley, leading into the Momozai country. They found the large village of Dar-a-dar on the right bank of the stream, protected by six towers, occupying a very commanding position. In the valley they reached the Kharah, or Dar-a-dar kotal, at about 4 P.M., and saw lying beneath them the Lakardarah valley in the Shaikhan country, and in the distance Kachai and Mari, both in British territory. This pass is the easiest and most important of any which leads into the Shaikhan country. The snow on the kotal was three feet deep and frozen hard. A few stray shots were fired at the reconnaissance, and we heard that Makhmaddin's son had only recently vacated the village at the foot of the kotal. The reconnaissance returned to camp after a weary day at 8 P.M. The third column arrived at 2 P.M. yesterday, and are encamped near the first column on the right bank.—A later message of Sunday's date says:—It was decided yesterday that the first column, consisting of the 1st, 4th, and 29th Punjab Infantry, with No. 4 Mountain Battery, should return to Darband; that the second column, consisting of No. 3 Mountain Battery, No. 5 Company Sappers and Miners, the 3rd Sikhs, the 2nd Punjab Infantry, and the 23rd Pioneers, should proceed via the Darada pass through the Mammazai country into the Shaikhan country and thence to Shahu Khel; and that the third column, consisting of three troops of the 5th Punjab Cavalry and the 5th Punjab Infantry should return to Hangu. It is supposed that the first and third columns will watch the Sarman range while the passes are being improved and posts built. The ration convoy arrived safely from Hangu this morning without being fired at. Foraging parties are out daily, but little has been found. The third column has just started en route for Hangu. The first column starts to-morrow, and the second column on the 2nd February.

A TELEGRAM from the Miranzai Expedition, dated, Camp, Jhandasam, through Kohat, 1st February, says:—The demolition of towers and villages still continues. Yesterday the following villages were destroyed: Inzawar, Aiam Khan, Mela, and Lagarromila, and various nameless towers and water-mills belonging to Makhmaddin. It has been decided to build posts on the crest of the Samana Range, and sites have been selected. The Darband road is also to be repaired and otherwise improved. The enemy has been very passive, and so far, we have had no shooting into Camp. It is thought that the second column may meet with some opposition through the Mammazai and Shaikhan country. A reconnaissance party left here this morning to explore a pass, near Kacha, said to lead into the Shaikhan country and believed to be a fairly good road. It is rumoured that we are to go against the Sturi Khels, a second division of the Alzai, after the arrival of the second column at Shahu Khel. The 1st Punjab Infantry and two guns of the No. 4 Mountain Battery remain here for the present in an entrenched camp. Sir William Lockhart and Major Leigh accompany the second column. Terms will be made with the Mishtis on our arrival in their country, provided no opposition is offered to the troops. The health of the troops is good, but there are a few cases in hospital, consequent on the severe exposure. Communication was established yesterday with Kohat by means of heliograph, the central station being at Lakha near Hangu. Rain commenced to fall early this morning and still continues. There are heavy clouds all round. The 23rd Pioneers and the Sappers arrived here to-day from Salphalmela, from whence they have been repairing the Darband road. Makhmaddin's famous tower of Jhandasam has been blown up. The sight was a grand one, as the tower stood some fifty feet high and was the strongest one we have yet come across. The spot is now marked by a few loose stones and some debris.

W. H. ALLEN & CO.'S LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

Demy 8vo. With Illustrations and Maps. 12s. 6d.

REPORT ON THE OLD RECORDS OF THE INDIA OFFICE.

WITH SUPPLEMENTARY NOTES AND APPENDICES.

By SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD, M.D., K.C.I.E., C.S.I., LL.D. SECOND REPRINT.

Medium 8vo. With numerous full page and other Illustrations by J. E. ROGERS. 12s 6d.

IN TROUBADOUR LAND: a Ramble in Provence and Languedoc. By S. BARING-GOULD, M.A., Author of "Mehalah," "John Herring," &c.

"The title of Mr. Baring-Gould's book only indicates one of the many points of interest which will attract the intelligent traveller during a tour in Provence and Languedoc. Besides troubadours, there are reminiscences of Greek colonization and Roman Empire, of the Middle Ages, and of the Revolution. . . . The illustrations which adorn the pages of this very readable volume are decidedly above the average. The arm-chair traveller will not easily find a pleasanter compagnon de voyage."—St. James's Gazette.

"A most charming book, brightly written, and profusely illustrated with exquisite engravings."—Glasgow Herald.

"Mr. Baring-Gould is a genuine humourist, a keen observer, and an acute reader of character. The book he has produced has much of the 'Mark Twain' spirit, and more than a touch of Thackerayan satire. . . . There is hardly a dull page in the book, and Mr. Rogers's pictures will make the places described very real to those who have not yet visited them."—Manchester Examiner.

"A charming book, full of wit and fancy and information, and worthy of its subject."—Scotsman.

Two vols. Crown 8vo. With Portrait. 12s.

MEMOIRS OF ALEXANDRE DUMAS (Pere). Being Selections from the First Five Volumes of "Mes Memoires." Selected and Translated by A. F. DAVIDSON.

"The reader turns over page after page, as if he were perusing for the first time 'The Three Musketeers' or 'Monte Cristo.'"—Globe.

"No one could write 'about it and about it' better than the author of 'Monte Cristo' and 'Le Vicomte Bragelonne'; and he has perhaps never done it so well as in 'Mes Memoires.' There was no great difficulty, then, in making such judicious selections from these two volumes as would have all the seeming of a continuous narrative. This Mr. Davidson has done, and done very skilfully, and his translation is fluent and natural."—World.

"Nobody taking up these volumes will have a single dull page to skip from beginning to end."—Glasgow Herald.

"A book of decided charm."—Guardian.

"Absorbingly interesting, full of Dumas' ebullient enjoyment of life. . . Mr. Davidson has made his extracts with skill and judgment, and he has translated them fluently and idiomatically."—St. James's Gazette.

Medium 8vo. With numerous Illustrations from Sketches by the Author. 18s.

BY TRACK AND TRAIL: a Journey through Canada. By EDWARD ROPER, F.R.G.S.

"Unassumingly instructive, written in a cheerful spirit, and uniformly readable. There is a sprinkling of sport, a good deal of interesting information about Indian aborigines and Chinese colonists."—Daily Telegraph.

"The book is written in a light picturesque style, and is one of the most entertaining records of travel recently published."—Glasgow Herald.

Demy 8vo. With Portrait and Preface by Sir Monier Monier-Williams. 15s.

FIFTY YEARS IN CEYLON: an Autobiography. By Major THOMAS SKINNER, C.M.G., Commissioner of Public Works, Ceylon. Edited by his Daughter, ANNIE SKINNER.

"The colony of Ceylon never had a more faithful servant than Major Skinner. The memory of his sterling character and of the benefits which he conferred upon the colony is still green among both natives and Europeans. On the road, in barracks, or at the dinner-table, camping on Adam's Peak, or hunting wild elephants in the Ceylon forests, he is a capital companion, and full of good feeling and information. . . . The most expressive memorial of the man, however, is this autobiography, written with refreshing vigour, candour, and geniality."—Scotsman.

"To all lovers of genuine manhood, to all who delight in the record of how work worth doing was ably done, to the many who are true sportsmen, and to those who take pleasure in reading the records of a life lived to a noble end, we can recommend this book."—Dublin Evening Mail.

"We can confidently recommend this book, not only to those who are acquainted with our lovely Indian island, but also to the general reader, as an interesting record of an honourable life."—Broad Arrow.

Demy 8vo. With Illustrations drawn and engraved by Japanese Artists. 5s.

JAPANESE PLAYS (Versified). By the late THOMAS R. H. MCCLATCHIE. Edited by his Brother, ERNEST S. MCCLATCHIE.

"There is certainly freshness and novelty in these Japanese plays. The text is amusingly illustrated with drawings by Japanese artists."—Graphic.

"The illustrations, with which the letterpress is relieved, are by native draughtsmen, and add largely to the undoubted attractions of the book, which, from the first page to the last, has a delightfully Oriental flavour, and is full of vivacity and freshness."—Pictorial World.

"Praise without stint can be bestowed upon the printing, paper, pictures, and general 'get-up' of the dainty volume which Messrs. Allen have laid before the public; and it may be added that the late Mr. McClatchie, in showing to the benighted Western world the kind of dramatic work which wrings 'tears, cheers, and laughter' from Japanese audiences, has performed a meritorious act."—Vanity Fair.

One vol. Demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. SECOND EDITION.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE

IS THE GREAT SPECIFIC FOR CHOLERA, DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE (late Army Medical Staff) DISCOVERED a REMEDY to denote which he coined the word CHLORODYNE. Dr. Browne is the SOLE INVENTOR, and, as the composition of Chlorodyne cannot possibly be discovered by Analysis (organic substances defying elimination), and since the formula has never been published, it is evident that any statement to the effect that a compound is identical with Dr. Browne's Chlorodyne must be false.

This Caution is necessary, as many persons deceive purchasers by false representations.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.—Vice Chancellor Sir W. PAGE WOOD stated publicly in Court that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was UNDOUBTEDLY the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE, that the whole story of the defendant Freeman was deliberately untrue, and he regretted to say it had been sworn to.—See The Times, July 13th, 1864.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is the TRUE PALLIATIVE in NEURALGIA, GOUT, CANCER, TOOTHACHE, RHEUMATISM.

DIARRHŒA, DYSENTERY. GENERAL BOARD of HEALTH, London, REPORT that it ACTS as a CHARM, one dose generally sufficient. Dr. GIBBON, Army Medical Staff, Calcutta, states: "2 DOSES COMPLETELY CURED ME of DIARRHŒA."

From SYMES & Co., Pharmaceutical Chemists, Simla. Jan. 5, 1880.

To J. T. DAVENPORT, London.

DEAR SIR,—We congratulate you upon the widespread reputation this justly-esteemed medicine has earned for itself all over the East. As a remedy of general utility, we much question whether a better is imported, and we shall be glad to hear of its finding a place in every Anglo-Indian home. The other brands, we are happy to say, are now relegated to the native bazaars, and, judging from their sale, we fancy their sojourn there will be but evanescent. We could multiply instances ad infinitum of the extraordinary efficacy of DR. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE in Diarrhœa and Dysentery, Spasms, Cramps, Neuralgia, the Vomiting of Pregnancy, and as a general sedative, that have occurred under our personal observation during many years. In Choleraic Diarrhœa, and even in the more terrible forms of Cholera itself, we have witnessed its surprisingly controlling power.

We have never used any other form of this medicine than Collis Browne's, from a firm conviction that it is decidedly the best, and also from a sense of duty we owe to the profession and the public, as we are of opinion that the substitution of any other than Collis Browne's is a deliberate breach of faith on the part of the chemist to prescriber and patient alike.—We are, Sir, faithfully yours, SYMES & CO., Members of the Pharm. Society of Great Britain, His Excellency the Viceroy's Chemists.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE is a liquid medicine which assuages PAIN of EVERY KIND, affords a calm, refreshing sleep WITHOUT HEADACHE, and INVIGORATES the nervous system when exhausted.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE rapidly cuts short all attacks of EPILEPSY, SPASMS, COLIC, PALPITATION, HYSTERIA.

IMPORTANT CAUTION.—The IMMENSE SALE of this REMEDY has given rise to many UNSCRUPULOUS IMITATIONS. Be careful to observe Trade Mark. Of all Chemists, 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d., and 4s. 6d.

NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.

LIGHT versus DARKNESS.

"SHAKESPEARE, the Greatest Genius who has ever yet lived," taught the Divineness of Forgiveness, of Perpetual Mercy, of Constant Patience, of Endless Peace, of Perpetual Gentleness. If you can show me one who knew things better than this man, show him!! I know him not!! If he had appeared as a Divine, they would have Burned him; as a Politician, they would have Beheaded him; but God made him a Player.

"He taught that kindness is nobler than Revenge!!"—The Rev. GEORGE DAWSON, M.A.

" Earthly power doth then show likest God's
When mercy seasons justice,
And that same prayer doth teach us all to render
The Deeds of Mercy."—Shakespeare.

What higher aim can man attain, than conquest over human pain.

Jeopardy of Life, the Great Danger of Delay.

You can change the Trickling Stream, but not the Raging Torrent.

WHAT EVERYBODY SHOULD READ.—How important it is to have at hand some simple, effective, and palatable remedy, such as ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," to check disease at the onset!!! With little trouble you can change the course of the trickling mountain stream, but not the rolling river. It will defy all your tiny efforts. I feel I cannot sufficiently impress this important information upon everybody. Let ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" be your companion; under any circumstances its use is beneficial, and never can do harm. When out of sorts, Restless, Sleepless, yet unable to say why, then your whole body is out of order, but you do not know where it may end; it is a real necessity to have a simple remedy at hand. The Pilot can so steer and direct as to bring the ship into safety, but he cannot quell the raging storm. The common idea when not feeling well is: "I will wait and see; perhaps I shall be better to-morrow;" whereas, had a supply of ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" been at hand, and use made of it at the onset, all calamitous results might have been avoided. What dashes to the earth so many hopes, breaks so many sweet alliances, blasts so many auspicious enterprises, as untimely Death?

HEADACHE AND DISORDERED STOMACH.—"After suffering nearly two and a half years from severe Headache and Disordered Stomach, and after trying almost everything, and spending much money without finding any benefit, I was recommended to try your 'FRUIT SALT,' and before I had finished one bottle I found it doing me a great deal of good, and now I am restored to my usual health; and others I know that have tried it have not enjoyed such good health for years.—Yours truly, ROBERT HUMPHREYS, Post Office, Barrasford."

SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHER SALINES.—"Dear Sir,—Having been in the habit of taking your 'FRUIT SALT' for many years, I think it only right to tell you I consider it a most invaluable medicine, and far superior to all other saline mixtures I have ever tried. I am never without it, as I find it possesses three most desirable qualities—pleasant to the taste, promptly efficacious, and leaves no unpleasant after-effects. I do not wish my name to appear, but you are welcome to make use of this testimonial if it is of service.—A DEVONSHIRE LADY. Jan. 25, 1889."

The Secret of Success.—Sterling Honesty of Purpose. Without it Life is a Sham!—A new invention is brought before the public, and commands success. A score of abominable imitations are immediately introduced by the unscrupulous, who, in copying the original closely enough to deceive the public, and yet not so exactly as to infringe upon legal rights, exercise an ingenuity that, employed in an original channel, could not fail to secure reputation and profit."—ADAMS.

"I used my 'FRUIT SALT' freely in my last severe attack of Fever, and I have every reason to say I believe it saved my life."—J. C. ENO.

Caution.—Examine each Bottle, and see that the Capsule is marked Eno's "Fruit Salt." Without it you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation.

SOLD BY ALL CHEMISTS. PREPARED ONLY AT

ENO'S "FRUIT SALT" WORKS, POMEROY STREET, NEW CROSS ROAD, LONDON, S.E. (BY J. ENO'S PATENT.)

NATURE RULES ALL THINGS.

In every form of Weakness use Scalded Milk.

ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO," occasionally a desirable adjunct to ENO'S "FRUIT SALT," as a simple and Natural Laxative, Stomachic, Blood, Brain, Nerve, Bile, or Liver Tonic; or, in other words, when taken as directed, their action is as simple as a tomato, whole meal bread or porridge (with scalded milk); you cannot overstate their great value in causing a natural, slow, and gentle action of the Liver; by that means you keep the blood pure and prevent disease. In advanced Life they are everything you could wish. Read Practical Hints on Constipation, Indigestion, Liver Diseases, Impure Blood, Sleeplessness Nervous Headache, Treatment of Gout and Rheumatism, how to Prevent Consumption, Jaundice, and other disastrous diseases by Rules for Health and Longevity, &c., in a pamphlet given with each Bottle of ENO'S "VEGETABLE MOTO." They can be used for any length of time without fear or harm.

The Calcutta Review for October reached us a day or two ago, and a glance at its contents shows that the number more than sustains the reputation which this old and favourite publication is again achieving. The Review is rapidly regaining the position which it . . . there is no fear of the Indian Review, or the Asiatic Quarterly rivalling it in public favour.—Statesman, October 1886.

. . . The best service which I ever rendered in India, or, indeed, for India, was the establishment, single-handed, of the Calcutta Review, which has done far more for Indian literature than anything I have written under my own name.—J. W. KAYE, Athenæum Club, June 23, 1872.

The Calcutta Review has given us valuable articles on the army. Some from the pen of Sir Henry Lawrence, who wrote with the spirit of prophesy, of the coming storms of which he was one of the noblest victims.—Address of the C.-in-C. at the U.S. Inst. of India.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL.

TUESDAY, MARCH 3, 1891.

General Intelligence.

[BY OVERLAND MAIL.]

THE Overland Mail brings us letters and advices from Bombay to the 14th February; from N.W.P. and Punjab to the 12th February; and from Bengal to the 11th February.

THE VICEROY was to leave Calcutta on the 2nd of March to open the Bengal-Nagpore Railway. His Excellency leaves Calcutta for Simla about the end of March.

LADY LANSDOWNE proceeds to Calcutta on March 12, breaking her journey at Lucknow, where she will make a short stay.

THE Budget statement to be submitted March 30 will show the financial affairs of Government to be more satisfactory than was anticipated; but there will be no remission on taxes, Government having lost very heavily on opium during the past year.

MR. J. L. MACKAY, President of the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, has been appointed to succeed Sir Alexander Wilson as additional Member of the Legislative Council. Mr. H. B. Turner was unable to accept the appointment, as he leaves shortly for England.

MR. MACKAY, the Chairman of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, speaking at the annual meeting of that body on Monday, declared that, so far at any rate as Bengal was concerned, there was no necessity for fresh factory legislation.

A SPECIAL grant of some ten lakhs is likely to be made this year to the Commissariat Department to complete the arrangements for mobilisation. This sum will allow a full reserve of clothing to be formed.

GENERAL SIR GEORGE CHESNEY is about to pay a short visit to Rangoon with a view to inspecting the harbour defences there, which are now approaching completion. This will be the Military Member's last chance of seeing these works, with the progress of which, and those of Indian ports generally, he has been so much concerned during his term of office.

ONE effect of the new warrant for the amalgamation of the three Indian Staff Corps will be that officers of the Madras and Bombay armies serving in Bengal will henceforth be eligible for district commands in that Presidency, as well as for staff appointments at Army Head-Quarters. The new Warrant has effect from the 28th January.

LATEST news from Kabul reports the Amir to be making steady progress towards recovery, and that he is able once more to attend to public business.

CAPTAIN YOUNGHUSBAND, whose arrival at Kashgar was recently reported through Russia in the European telegrams, has sent a report of his explorations to the Government of India.

No confirmation has yet been received of the reported gathering of a Chinese filibustering expedition against Mogaung on the Northern Burma frontier; but precautionary measures are being rapidly carried out to reinforce the garrison with regular troops.

MR. R. G. MACDONALD, Deputy Accountant-General and Under Secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department, has been granted furlough for seven months.

MR. A. B. PATTERSON will, it is understood, succeed Mr. Carey as Commissioner of Northern India Salt Revenue. Mr. Carey retires from the post on the 7th of next month.

MR. A. MARTINDALE, Political Agent at Bhopal, probably goes on leave in April.

THE comments of the different Local Governments on the Factory Commission's Report are now coming in to the Government of India. But until they are all received the question of legislation remains in abeyance.

THE salary of each Judicial Commissioner in Oudh will be fixed at Rs. 3,500 monthly.

THE late heavy rain in Baluchistan has not only wrecked nearly all the native infantry barracks at Quetta, but has caused much damage to the fort and quarters at New Chaman.

The Shipping Commission have returned to Calcutta, having completed the taking of evidence at the other Indian ports.

OWING to the difficulties encountered in getting rolling-stock across the Irrawaddy from Mandalay to Sagain, the Mu Valley Railway will probably not be ready for opening to Shwebo until June.

MR. J. L. O'CALLAGHAN having returned from Burma to Calcutta, the Committee on the Kidderpore Docks, of which he is President, will shortly assemble. Mr. Mackay has been nominated by the Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Horace Bell by the Port Commission. Mr. Ormiston, the Dock Engineer at Bombay, will join the Committee as an expert. The question is mainly an engineering one, but Mr. Mackay will represent the landing and shipping interest, as affected by proposals of Mr. Apjohn, the Engineer in charge of the docks.

THE Government of India have decided to make an annual grant of Rs. 15,000 for Volunteer Camps of Exercise.

IN connection with the decision of the Government of India to invest an additional crore of rupees in Government Paper, the Englishman announces that the purchase has already been nearly completed.

THE Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay Army is at present on a tour of inspection in Sind and Quetta.

DR. NIELD COOK has been appointed Health Officer, Madras Municipality.

MAJOR BROMHEAD, V.C., South Wales Borderers, and of Zulu Campaign renown, died at Allahabad, Feb. 7, from enteric fever.

SIR THARIA TOPAN, a well-known Khoja merchant of Bombay and Zanzibar, died at his Bombay residence, Feb. 9.

NOTES.

THE news from Burma telegraphed by the Times correspondents and by Reuter is still of raiding, fighting, and burning. It is altogether very unsatisfactory and very unpleasant reading, for it would seem to indicate that "pacification" is still a very far way off.

From India proper the news is quiet enough, notwithstanding the reports of monster meetings being held to protest against Sir A. Scoble's Bill being finally passed.

The Bombay Gazette says that people in Calcutta who are likely to know say that Sir Andrew Scoble's Bill is certain to be passed during the present session of the Legislative Council, and that it is highly improbable that Government will consent to any material change being made in its provisions. While the Viceroy and his advisers are paying respectful attention to every manifestation of hostile opinion concerning the measure, they are believed to have found nothing in the opposition to the Bill which would warrant them in staying their hands, and the agitation in Bengal, coinciding as it has done with revelations of the wide prevalence of the evil in question in that province, is, it is said, likely rather to help than to hinder the Bill.

The correspondence on the subject has become more lengthy than edifying. Letters anent the protected age controversy have become unutterably vile, writes the Indian Witness. Shastric texts are quoted that fairly reek with filth. An expurgated edition of the Laws of Manu is certainly demanded if it is intended that Indian women shall ever wade through their pages. "Surely the battle could have been fought without such revelations of Shastric nastiness."

FROM the Annual Report of the Committee of the Lady Dufferin Fund it appears that over twelve lakhs have been already spent in the erection of buildings especially adapted for affording medical relief to native women. The number of women who had received medical aid during the year comes to 411,000, and by far the greater part of this relief has been afforded by thirty-eight hospitals of various sizes, all directly governed by or affiliated to or connected with the Association. The total income of the Central Committee up to date has been Rs. 8,83,735. The amount now invested by the Central Committee and provincial branches is nearly eleven lakhs, producing an annual income of Rs. 50,000; besides which the local associations and committees possess independent invested funds of Rs. 3,39,000. There is a sum in hand amounting to Rs. 35,000, and donations have been promised to the extent of Rs. 1,70,000.

AT the annual meeting of the Fund, the Viceroy delivered an interesting and important speech, dwelling upon the want of support in Bengal, and expressing a hope that this "reproach" would be removed during the year. His Excellency also remarked that the official work of the Fund was practically carried on free of charge, and stated that the duties of the Secretaryship, so ably performed by Captain Streatfeild, would in future be undertaken by Mr. J. P. Hewett. Sir Charles Elliott announced that he had received an offer of Rs. 15,000 for the Children's Ward of the Dufferin Hospital, Calcutta, on condition that before the building was opened next month a further sum of Rs. 20,000 was subscribed, this amount being required to complete the dispensary out-houses.

The Bombay Gazette takes the same view as we have done regarding the Statesman's lengthy diatribe against Simla upon which we have commented editorially. Our Bombay contemporary says:—"If Calcutta journalists would look around and see what precise kind of public opinion is asserting itself in their city at this moment, they would be rather thankful that there is a Simla where Government can shape their course with a certain resolute independence of the reactionary movement in Bengali society. The argument assumes, as nearly all the arguments against the exodus have assumed, that Calcutta opinion is necessarily enlightening and wholesomely restraining. The latest sample of this opinion rudely rebukes the assumption. As regards the particular instance of Sir Charles Macgregor's plans for checkmating a Russian advance upon India, we should be sorry to think that the presence of the Government in one locality or another had any influence upon the productive capacity of earnest strategists. Sir Charles Macgregor would have been busy devising plans of campaign of the offensive-defensive kind, no matter where the office of the Quarter-master-General might have been located. If the contents of every pigeon-hole in the Intelligence Branch of that Department could be strewn upon the streets of Calcutta—which, apparently, is the Statesman's patent device for saving us from rash adventures across the frontier—a good many schemes as daring as those in question would be brought to the view of friends and enemies. But we believe it is sound theology that temptation, when it is not acted upon, is not sinful, and the Government of India may be forgiven their annual journey to Simla if the chief sin in their sojourn there were their being tempted of Sir Charles Macgregor and the strategists."

THE Englishman contradicts the rumours that the Viceroy intends spending the hot weather either at Ootacamund or Darjeeling, and positively asserts that Lord and Lady Lansdowne will spend the season at Simla.

WE find, then, in the Indian Army List the following interesting information regarding the number of combatant officers in the three Staff Corps. Bengal has 203 lieutenant-colonels, 131 majors, 335 captains, and 462 lieutenants, besides 114 probationers—altogether a very satisfactory complement of officers as regards numbers, though the distribution of rank does not bear very close inspection. For instance, there are many more colonels than majors, and the total of colonels and majors together comes to 334, while the captains only number 335, and only under the Staff Corps system has it ever been dreamt of to have as many field officers as captains. But then the brain of man never conceived a more costly, foolish, and illogical scheme of officering an army than that which, under the name of the Staff Corps, has wrought so much harm to the Indian service.

THE natives throughout India are showing considerable sympathy and generous feeling towards the late Mr. Bradlaugh's family on their recent bereavement. Meetings have been held in several places to consider what steps should be taken to perpetuate in some enduring form the memory of Mr. Bradlaugh's services to India. Resolutions have been passed for this object, and committees have been formed to collect subscriptions, while letters of condolence have been sent to Mr. Bradlaugh's daughters.

THAT is what the "heathen" have done. The following is what the "Christian" Bombay Guardian has done. It has written:

Charles Bradlaugh is dead. On Friday, the 30th ult., his soul passed into the presence of his Maker, there to receive the reward of the deeds done in the body. For many years an open blasphemer, since his Parliamentary career opened he has sought to throw a veil, as it were, over his previous career, and to pose as a champion of the right and good, while still avowing himself an atheist. The necessity for paying this outward regard to decency was doubtless enforced upon his mind by the opposition shown to his admission to the House of Commons in 1880, which was renewed yearly till 1885 Telegrams give but little detail, but there is no hint that any repentance toward God took place. Indeed, one would gather that on his death-bed there was no room for repentance. His state was reported as 'comatose' for some days previously.

The "heathen" must have been somewhat puzzled to detect the meek and loving spirit of Christianity in the above. Does the Bombay Guardian go in much for "converting" the "heathen" we wonder?

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 23.

Brigadier-General Wolseley, C.B., leaves Mandalay to-day to take command of the operations in Wuntho. There has been further sharp fighting in Wuntho. The column from Shwebo attacked the rebels near Okpho, killing over 50 and wounding many more, and capturing a quantity of rifles and ammunition. Our loss was three Europeans killed and ten wounded.

Our force now at Kawlin numbers 600, including 200 Europeans. It advances immediately on the town of Wuntho, which is said to be held by 700 men. The Tsawbwa is reported to be stockaded with another strong body of men four miles from Wuntho. Another column marches to attack the Tsawbwa to-day. Many of the villagers from across the Wuntho border, who were ordered by the Tsawbwa to stockade their villages, have asked leave to come in to Kawlin.

Captain Hastings, of the 4th Burma Regiment, has inflicted a severe punishment on the Panchaung Chins, who recently committed numerous raids and attacked the Yawdwin post. Several villages were captured, and 22 Chins were killed and many were wounded. Our casualties were one Sepoy killed and two Sepoys and two coolies injured by the Chins, who rolled down boulders and fired the grass.

FEB. 24.

The proclamation by Sir A. Mackenzie deposing Moungoungmyat, the Tsawbwa of Wuntho, declares that he has committed a series of unprovoked attacks on posts and villages in our territory. The Chief Commissioner announces that he has no wish to punish the people for the misdoings of their ruler, and offers a free pardon to the inhabitants who lay down their arms and surrender within fourteen days. He adds that the Tsawbwa will not be restored, and those who surrender need have no fear of injury from any quarter.

The British infantry who took part in the fight at Okpho belonged to the Devonshire and Duke of Cornwall's Regiments. The names of those killed are—Arthur Brent, Joseph Batchelor, and John Brown. It has been ascertained that the Tsawbwa commanded in person. His horse has been captured. The British infantry behaved with great spirit, rushing a strongly stockaded position. The force engaged consisted of 100 British infantry, 40 mounted British infantry, 40 military police and 100 Madras Sepoys.

During the past few days the insurgents have made several attacks on small posts in our territory further north. These attacks were pluckily resisted by the police and sub-divisional officers.

Captain O'Donnell reached Thama without fighting. The Thama chief joined him, and accompanied the troops northward. A small column leaves Bhamo to-morrow for Tonhon to operate against Kanlaing, who is giving trouble.

FEB. 25.

Wuntho has been occupied by Major Smyth's mounted infantry without opposition. Major Smyth reports that when the troops arrived there the Tsawbwa's Palace was being strongly blockaded. It has since been set on fire and destroyed. The villagers are now returning in large numbers and laying down their arms. The Tswabwa is believed to have fled to Pinlebu, whither the column is now proceeding. Captain Hutchinson, advancing to Kawlin from Yeu, found himself confronted by a strong blockade, held by the rebels, near Okham. An assault was ordered, and the position was captured after five hours' fighting. The enemy lost 27 killed. Captain Hutchinson was severely wounded in the thigh.

Dacoits have attacked a village six miles south of Bhamo, inflicting considerable damage and carrying off four women.

FEB. 26.

The Tsawbwa's palace at Wuntho has been burned, in order to convince the people that his rule is terminated.

The palace was being strongly stockaded when the troops arrived at Wuntho. The Tsawbwa has retreated to Pinlaing, and the column is proceeding thither. Brigadier-General Wolseley rode from Tigyaing to Wuntho at night with a small escort, through a disturbed country, in order to assume the command.

INDIA.

CALCUTTA, FEB. 27.

The census was taken throughout India last night.

It is expected that the report of the Select Committee on the Factory Act Amendment Bill will be presented to the Legislative Council on March 6.

The number of persons attending the mass meeting protesting against the Age of Consent Bill on Wednesday is variously estimated at from 10,000 to 100,000. Probably the former is somewhat under and the latter considerably over the truth. The promoters of the meeting assert that Mahomedans, Sikhs, and Jains were largely represented, as well as Hindoos.

A meeting of Mahomedans, held in Bombay, has declared against the Bill, while a large meeting of Hindoos in Poonah has expressed its approval of the measure.

Mr. Tata, a Parsee citizen of Bombay, has announced his intention of presenting a large sum of money to enable the poorer Parsees to prosecute their studies in the liberal arts and sciences, either in India or in Europe.

A Lushailand telegram in the Calcutta Englishman states that a handful of police were recently attacked at the village of Jacopas, and made a most gallant fight. These men, about 20 in number, under Jemadar Singh Gurung, were in the village as guests in a house, when they were suddenly surrounded and attacked by 100 armed Lushais. After a sharp fight, the Jemadar, although badly wounded, withdrew his men in good order, carrying the wounded, and brought the party safely, after four days' march, to the Koladain stockade. Our loss was one naik, two Sepoys, and one servant killed; one Jemadar and two Sepoys severely wounded.

The committee which the Bengal Government appointed last August to inquire into the condition of the police, and the reasons why so large a proportion of serious crime escapes detection, has now presented its report. An exhaustive inquiry has been made under the three following heads—village police, regular police, and criminal courts. Several witnesses have been examined, and opinions have been collected from public associations as well as from district and police officers. It is understood that the committee has submitted a large number of recommendations, one of the most important being that appointments to the grade of sub-inspector, instead of being filled, as now, by promotion from the ranks, should be made direct from candidates who have passed the first University examination. This suggestion, if adopted, ought greatly to raise the status of the police, by throwing open the higher grades to educated natives. The committee also, it is understood, suggests the appointment in every district of one or more public prosecutors selected from the local Bar.

The agitation against the Age of Consent Bill continues unabated. It is asserted that the large attendance at the open-air meeting on Wednesday was due to the fact that advertisements had been circulated stating that the Viceroy would be present, and that the proceedings would conclude with a display of fireworks. There has been, undoubtedly, much wire-pulling, not always of the most scrupulous kind, by some of the leaders of the opposition, and it may be conceded that a large proportion of the crowd was attracted by idle curiosity, but it is no less clear that a strong and genuine dislike of the measure pervades the vast majority of the upper and middle classes in Bengal and, though perhaps not to the same extent, those in the upper provinces also.

The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal proposes to hold a conference shortly to discuss the best means of increasing the number of Volunteers, and several prominent officials and Volunteer officers have been invited to attend.

The latest reports show that the loss in crops and the consequent distress in North Arcot are less than have been previously represented.

BURMA.

RANGOON, FEB. 27.

The Tsawbwa of Wuntho's letter soliciting pardon is believed to be intended only to gain time. Pinlaing will now be attacked.

Lieutenant Holman, of the Devonshire Regiment, who was wounded in the recent fight near Okpho, had a narrow escape; two bullets went through his helmet, only grazing his head.

The column sent against the Baungshe Chins has obtained the submission of eight villages and recovered 13 captives. One village was shelled before it surrendered.

RANGOON, MARCH 1.

Sir A. Mackenzie has returned to Rangoon. A column from Wuntho is moving against Pinlaing or Pinlebu, the capital occupied by the Tsawbwa. Brigadier-General Wolseley arrived yesterday at Pintha, 15 miles west of the town of Wuntho. The troops are in excellent health and spirits. The Tsawbwa has written to General Wolseley begging him not to advance, offering to pay a large fine, and declaring that he joined his father's rebellion unwillingly. He also asks for time to try and talk his father over. General Wolseley refused to make any terms, except that, if he surrendered promptly, his life would be spared.

The insurgents appear to be demoralized, and large numbers of peasantry are coming in and surrendering their arms. At Kawlin 350 guns have been given up. A noticeable feature in the Wuntho rebellion is the abundance of arms and ammunition possessed by the rebels. The peasantry of the cultivated portions of Wuntho will welcome British protection, but further resistance in the mountainous northern district is considered probable.

The vigorous and decisive action of Sir A. Mackenzie has crushed what might have become a very dangerous movement, which, if allowed to make head for even a few days, would certainly have spread far beyond the borders of Wuntho. The policy pursued under Sir C. Crosthwaite towards Wuntho resulted in the Tsawbwa being enabled to accumulate large supplies of arms and ammunition, and to convert his territory into a sort of fortified camp. Sir A. Mackenzie has decided to break up the Wuntho territory, distributing it between the neighbouring districts. The greater portion will be attached to the Katha district.

Captain Hutchinson, the commandant of the Yeu battalion of military police, has died from the wounds he received at Okkan.

The Mandalay Herald states that the Mingoon Prince has left Saigon for the Shan States, presumably to stir up a rebellion there, and adds that a report is current amongst the Burmese in Mandalay that the Mingoon Prince would attack the town on March 7. It mentions, as proving that the Mingoon Prince has left Saigon, that he is a regular subscriber to the Mandalay Herald, but that the copies sent to him at Saigon for some weeks past have been returned. The Mandalay Herald protests against any reduction being made in the garrison in Upper Burmah, characterising Sir C. Crosthwaite's representations about universal peace prevailing there as fiction.

The news from the Chin country is satisfactory. All the captives taken in the Penthwa raid on January 7 have been recovered, and the Kanhow tribe has paid part of the fine imposed. The column under Captain Rundall has reached the village of Sheelmong, 80 miles north of Fort White.

The Chinese evidently intend insisting fully on their rights on the Yunnan frontier. It is reported from Bhamo that a body of about 400 Chinese troops from Yunnan have occupied and stockaded some half-dozen small villages just over the frontier.

Brigadier-General Stedman, who has been for the past four years Inspector-General of the Burmah police, left for England yesterday. He has rendered great services to the province, and has created what is really an army. In May 1887, when General Stedman assumed the command, the military police numbered 90 officers and 4,700 men. The numbers were increased in 1889 to 500 officers, including natives, and 20,000 men, besides 15,000 civil police. The military police now numbers 430 officers and 15,500 men, all of good fighting stamp. Four regiments from the military police have been made over to the native army. General Stedman enjoyed extraordinary popularity with the force he commanded. Captain Peile, Deputy-Inspector of the General Military Police, succeeds General Stedman.

Thirteen prisoners who were confined in the Kyaukpyaw police guard-house, in the Bassein district in Lower Burmah, have escaped. Assisted by four men from outside, they overpowered the police, killing two and wounding two, and carrying off 15 rifles and 1,600 rounds of ammunition. A large force of police has gone in pursuit of them.

The census returns in Rangoon, though not quite completed, roughly show that the population within the municipal boundaries and cantonments is 180,000, or an increase of 47,000 over the returns of the last census. There are probably 10,000 more people in the adjoining villages and districts outside the municipal limits, practically forming part of the town.

Much satisfaction is felt in Rangoon at the definite news that Mr. Guinness has safely reached Maule, a fortified village held by the military police on the north frontier of Wuntho. Mr. Guinness had a narrow escape of losing his camp equipage.

(Reuter.)

RANGOON, FEB. 23.

The Shwebo column has had a sharp action with the followers of the Tsawbwa of Wuntho, at Okpho. The enemy were routed with a loss of fifty killed. A number of guns and a quantity of ammunition also fell into the hands of the British.

The casualties of the British were three European soldiers killed and ten wounded.

Wuntho is held by 600 of the Tsawbwa's men, and will be attacked to-morrow.

FEB. 25TH.

Wuntho has been occupied by Major Smyth's Mounted Infantry without opposition.

Major Smyth reports that when the troops arrived there the Tsawbwa's Palace was being strongly stockaded. It has since been set on fire and destroyed.

The villagers are now returning in large numbers, and laying down their arms. The Tsawbwa is believed to have fled to Pinlebu, whither the column is now proceeding.

Captain Hutchinson, advancing to Kawlin from Yeu, found himself confronted by a strong stockade held by the rebels near Okham. An assault was ordered, and the position was captured after five hours' fighting. The enemy lost twenty-seven killed. Captain Hutchinson was severely wounded in the thigh.

Dacoits have attacked a village six miles south of Bhamo, inflicting considerable damage, and carrying off four women.

FORT WHITE, FEB. 23.

The Kanhow chiefs, against whom operations were undertaken for having raided British territory and carried off captives, have now submitted.

RANGOON, FEB. 28.

Mr. Ross has returned to Haka after travelling 19 miles along the Haka-Tashun road, and reports that that part of the country was quiet.

FORT WHITE, FEB. 27.

On the 24th inst. the Kanhow column attacked and captured Tungzang. There were no casualties amongst the British troops. Twelve of the enemy were killed and 21 taken prisoners, among the latter being the principal chief and two others.

RANGOON, FEB. 28.

Captain Rundall reports that all the survivors of the twelve captives carried off by the Kanhow Chins in the raid made by them on the village of Penthawa on Jan. 7 have now been recovered. The Kanhow Chins have delivered seven elephants' tusks and thirteen mythun as part payment of the fine inflicted upon them. Captain Rundall has surveyed the Kanhow country for fifteen miles beyond Kanhow, as far as the village of Shielmong, which lies eighty miles north of Fort White.

Mr. Ross has returned to Haka, after travelling nineteen miles along the Haka-Tashu road, and reports that that part of the country was quiet. Intelligence received here from Wuntho states that several of the Tsawbwa's officials have surrendered, and that the villagers are freely surrendering their arms. The Northern Column, under Colonel Macgregor, is to proceed to Kattra against the old Tsawbwa of Mogoung Wun, while the Southern Column, under Colonel Clarke, will continue the operations in the district of Kawlin and Wuntho.

RANGOON, MAR. 1.

Brigadier-General Wolseley, who is now in supreme command of the operations in the Wuntho district, has started for Pinlebu, where the Tsawbwa is supposed to be taking refuge. The Katha Column has arrived at Kyurgan, after meeting with slight resistance. The column moved on yesterday to Banonauh, which is said to be fortified.

Messrs. Guinness and Bagley are reported to be safe, the former at Maule and the latter at Kawlin.

BELOOCHISTAN.

BOMBAY, FEB. 28.

An attempt has been made upon the life of Major Muir, Political Agent in Southern Beloochistan.

He was holding a Court at Khenj, when he was attacked by natives and severely wounded, losing two fingers. The wounds are, however, not dangerous.

The would-be assassins succeeded in effecting their escape.—Reuter.

EXCESSIVELY severe weather in Baluchistan during the past two months has greatly impeded the progress of the Kojak Tunnel, and it is feared the opening will not take place as soon as had been anticipated.

Mr. Frank Agabeg, of the Charanpore Collieries near Asansole on the East Indian Railway, is the clever inventor of a portable punkah, which is bound to be largely used in tropical climates as soon as it becomes sufficiently advertised and known. The fan is attached to a small ornamental machine not much bigger than an ordinary table lamp, and can be raised or lowered to any height, or placed in any angle desired. It is simple in its movements, having no springs to get out of order; and by simply turning on or off a switch, the fan works or is stopped. The battery, consisting of four small cells, is contained in a box at the base of the pedestal. The machine works for about 16 hours without needing re-charging, which can be done easily in five minutes by any ordinarily intelligent servant. For the office desk, easy chair, couch, or piano, it will be found most useful; it gives a steady current of air instead of the jerky and unequal pull of the gentle punkahwallah, and much loss of tissue and temper is saved; moreover, no bad language is necessary, so that it is bound to be a boon to, and be largely patronized by, the clergy, as well as other dwellers in the tropics. It is a really handsome addition to one's household furniture, for it is made of beautifully polished teakwood, having a plush-covered table on top, which hides the mechanism, and is quite noiseless in its action. The cost of the chemicals for a whole day is about three annas, no dearer than the oleaginous, indecently-clad, sleepy-headed punkah coolie. The initial cost of the machine is perhaps against its being brought into universal use; but still it is certain eventually to find a sufficiently large sale to amply reward the patentee.

INDIA AND SILVER.

How the Fluctuations affect Eastern Trade.

(Financial Times.)

The American silver gamble has had considerable effect on the trade of India. During the latter six months of the year 1890, exchange was the leading factor in the commerce of our Eastern dependency, and some of the traders who adopted decided views as to its probable course where unfortunate enough to come to grief in consequence. The extraordinary fluctuations in the price of silver, the metal on which all business in India depends, undoubtedly exercised an exceedingly adverse influence on Indian trade, and therefore all who are interested in the legitimate commerce of that country will rejoice at the collapse of the American gamble.

At the commencement of last year Bank Bills on London were quoted in Bombay at 1s. 5d., and for the first three months the quotation remained at about that rate. At the end of April, however, it had risen to 1s. 6d., and, although it fell away temporarily, it reached that figure again by the middle of May, the highest point being touched towards the end of August, when the quotation was 1s. 8$\frac{7}{32}$d. A reaction followed, and the quotation gradually slipped away until business was done below 1s. 5$\frac{5}{16}$d. Our contemporary, the Times of India, states that when the market was at its height, a very large business was done for delivery from November to February at 1s. 9d. and over. Some idea of the rapidity of the fluctuations may be gathered from the fact that three months' credits in September were placed one day at 1s. 6$\frac{13}{16}$d. for October delivery, the next morning the quotation for ready credits was 1s. 7d., and by mid-day business was done at 1s. 8d., an advance of one penny per rupee in a few hours. This state of affairs was most demoralising. The native traders plunged into the gamble, many of them failed and were unable to pay their differences, and, altogether, the wildness of the speculation caused grave anxiety to the banking community. The import trade was considerably disturbed by the efforts of America to force up the price of silver; the fluctuations in exchange ranging to the extent of 4$\frac{1}{16}$d. in 1890 as against only $\frac{3}{32}$d. in the previous year. There is a pretty general feeling in the best-informed circles that the decision to ignore New York in the matter of silver quotations will have a steadying effect on Indian trade. We have continued our inquiries as to the probable course of the Silver Market, and we give below the views of several gentlemen engaged in financial transactions with India on the subject. We may state that considerable gratification is expressed by bankers doing business with the East at the decision of the bullion brokers to fix the price of silver at a reasonable hour. Ever since America has taken the lead in the matter the bank managers and others have been compelled to do their business after business hours, instead of during the day. This was an eminently unsatisfactory state of affairs, and one which caused much annoyance and trouble.

An Indian banker on whom our representative called expressed the hope that now silver legislation in America was out of the question for nine or ten months things would go on the old lines. The danger lay, however, in silver being a Wall Street investment, and who could say what the Americans' course of action would be? So far as figures were concerned, the trade of India was in a very unfavourable position for any rise in exchange. The balance of trade was less favourable to that country than it had ever been in the experience of the speaker. This was due to the large import of goods while exchange ruled high last year, and to the falling off in exports. That was a factor against a high exchange, but, on the other hand, the wheat harvest, which promised well, would tell in the opposite direction, since not only was there a good demand for Indian wheat, but the quotation was exceptionally high. As to the price of silver, well, that was a question surrounded with great difficulty.

"I do not know," continued the speaker, "that we shall have silver lower for two or three months. Of course, after anything has fallen there is a tendency for it to rebound, but the future is full of uncertainty."

In another instance, the authority of whom our representative inquired, said: "Now that American silver legislation is shelved for the time being, Indian exchange looks like ruling the market, but of course there are those heavy stocks of silver hanging over us like a menace. The bullion brokers here will necessarily have to be very careful in fixing their price so as to prevent the Americans coming in and upsetting their arrangements. The element of uncertainty seems to have been removed so far as the question of a rise in price coming from America is concerned; but, on the other hand, there may be a fall if their stocks are put on the market."

Another Indian authority said: "It will be an advantage to Indian trade generally if silver keeps steady. I do not think there is any rise in the price to be expected, owing to the heavy stocks which are held in the United States. India has been gulled by America a good deal, but they have learnt a lesson now, and will have no more of it. The fact that there is no chance of anything being done for silver until the new Congress will, I think, have the effect of steadying prices."

"It is really most difficult to say anything on the silver outlook," was the reply of another authority whose views our representative sought. "There are large stocks both here and in America to be absorbed, and these render the course of the market uncertain. However, the absorption seems to be going steadily on, and that is all that can be said at the moment."

Wild speculation invariably has a prejudicial effect on regular commerce, and in India the silver gamble has effected considerable disorganization. Reference has already been made to the reckless plunging of native traders, but, unfortunately, other well-to-do men in Bombay have come to grief through taking too sanguine a view of the course of exchange. If New York can be permanently ignored in this matter for the future, Indian traders will have every reason for satisfaction.

THE "TIMES" ON THE AGE OF CONSENT.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

Yesterday we reprinted a leading article from the Times by this mail on the Age of Consent question. From an English writer, writing in England, no more discerning view could possibly have been expected. Long custom has with us, as with the Hindus, caused certain rules to be accepted as of universal application, because nothing has ever occurred to disturb our belief in the unalterable character of the facts on which those rules are based. The Times is evidently unconscious of the fact that the opponents of the age limit in the Bill appeal not only to their religion, but to alleged facts which are capable of scientific demonstration of refutation; and the article deals with the controversy as if it lay between those who wish to prevent offences and those who wish to commit them through criminal intent or to condone them through bigotry. Most of the writing on both sides has undoubtedly this complexion and obscures the real issue, which is, whether the proposed age limit will not in some cases interfere with the fulfilment of Hindu religious obligations without physiological justification, and, if so, whether some other limit cannot be substituted, which will both serve the end of Government and respect Hindu religious dogmas. This is the simple question which the present controversy tends to obscure; and it will only be after this has been definitely answered in the negative, that we shall be able to admit the wisdom of forcing reform in the proposed shape upon the Hindus of Bengal. To return, however, to the article in the Times, we will merely note how dimly it understands the case from its remarks on the subject of the restitution of conjugal rights. Our London contemporary says that, if this Bill is passed, such suits against wives under 12 will be impossible, because the wife's parents will be able to appeal to the Bill against their common enemy, the brutal husband. Evidently the Times is unaware that the women themselves are on the side of the husband; and, indeed, are the chief opponents of the proposed change; that the wife's mother would be the last person to invoke the law, and be left with a disgraced and outcast virgin-widow on her hands. It is difficult, after the outspoken remarks of the Viceroy and Sir A. Scoble, for any official to express dissent from the Bill, but we know that some thoughtful men are of opinion that the wisest plan would be to adopt any compromise which would seem to secure the immediate object of Government, while respecting Hindu scruples, and to leave the rest to time and education, especially female medical education.

NEGLECTED OPPORTUNITIES.

(Civil and Military Gazette.)

It is with unfeigned regret that the learned world has mourned the death of Dr. Schliemann, the archæologist, "A man," as the Vossiche Zeitung has it, "with a gift for discovery bordering on divination: a man of noble disinterestedness." We in the Punjab are in want of such a man. We have our buried cities and our numerous thehs or old mounds. Next to nothing has, as yet, been done in the way of archæological discovery in this country. The coins even have not been treated exhaustively, although a good deal of really good work has been done with them both by officials and private individuals. The results, however, so far as our museums are concerned, are not very satisfactory. There is much work yet to be done by Government. The old mounds are in the possession of Government, and consequently cannot be rifled by privateers. But every heavy rain discloses lots of treasures of one kind or another, which pass into the hands of villagers who, as a rule, make them over to the money-changers, who dispose of them as they best can to their own advantage. There is not an educated man in Europe but has gloried in the discoveries of Dr. Schliemann. We in the Punjab have rejoiced in the discoveries of Sir Alexander Cunningham. But we want his work to be taken up and carried on. Coins in the Punjab have been found with both Greek and Pali inscriptions on them: As yet, however, we have obtained no inscriptions on stone in Greek and Pali, though such must exist. We have not far to seek for the reason of this. Mounds have not been explored. The mound at Akra near Bunnu, and the large mound at Agoba have never been dug into, though it is known that these must contain many antiquities. The country beyond the Indus has only been partially explored archæologically. The same may be said about Manikyala and its neighbourhood. Old Jhajjar, Bhakulan, is positively untouched. Haphazard discoveries have now and then been made. Amateurs have done something, and in many cases have appropriated what they have found. We need now the work of the professional aided by Government, who will, of course, receive all that is found. Of course excavations cost money, but if our expensive museum buildings are to possess things worth study, Government will have to spend money on their purchase.

Digitized by Google

BENGAL RAILWAY SCHEMES.

(Englishman.)

It now appears certain that the efforts put forth by traders on this side of India to obtain a more direct line of railway communication between Calcutta and the North-West were made in vain. There is little, if any, probability of official sanction being given to any of the various projects submitted nearly two years ago for the consideration of the Secretary of State. The almost excited interest which the public then took in the matter was subdued by the seeming expedition with which surveys were undertaken by the Government, and it was generally believed that any official hesitation which might be apparent had regard only to the difficulty of deciding upon the route most likely to serve the purposes in view. Later on it began to be whispered that the Secretary of State's decision would favour the construction of the Grand Chord Line, and perpetuate the monopoly of the East Indian Railway. Unsatisfactory as such a decision would have been, it would assuredly have been less disappointing than the actual abandonment of the proposal to endow the province with the increased railway facilities it so badly needs. Practically, however, it is nothing less than abandonment with which the scheme is now threatened. It is well known, of course, that the Grand Chord Line was only put forward by the East Indian Directorate because other projects were coming before the public, and it was necessary to countermine speedily if the position of monopoly were to be secured. The great influence which the new Chairman of the East Indian Railway possesses at the India Office would no doubt have sufficed, in any case, to gain the preference for the Grand Chord scheme. Strengthened by the views which the Consulting Engineer to the East Indian Railway Company, Sir Alexander Rendel, seems to have formed during his visit to this country twelve months ago, it has, we understand, virtually secured the indefinite postponement of any decision by the Secretary of State. It is likely enough that a pretence will be made of carrying on the survey for the purpose of quieting public feeling, but no intention of sanctioning any of the competing schemes, or assisting in its practical inception, is really entertained. Such being the present state of the case, it remains to be seen what further steps, if any, will be taken by traders here and in the North-West. It is impossible to disguise the fact that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce, by its unwise preference for the Grand Chord scheme, materially strengthened the hands of those adverse to railway extension of the kind believed to be necessary for the further development of the trade of the province. We commented strongly at the time on the impolicy of the Chamber's attitude, and events have shown that we in no wise exaggerated the misfortune of its decision. Advantage has been taken of the conflict of opinion among the trading classes to put aside the question of railway extension in Bengal for some years to come. In the meantime, however, money will be lavished as freely as heretofore on military frontier lines, which are laid only to be swept away by floods, and for whose unsound construction no one, it seems, is to be held responsible. The steady persistence with which successive Governments hinder the construction of mercantile lines, unless there is proof that they will be immediately productive, is equalled only by the unvarying eagerness with which they lavish the public funds on so-called strategic railways, which, after all, are of doubtful value as aids to the efficient defence of the country.

BENGAL.

(Feb. 11.)

MR. J. L. MACKAY, President of the Calcutta Chamber of Commerce, has been appointed to succeed Sir Alexander Wilson as additional Member of the Legislative Council. Mr. H. B. Turner was unable to accept the appointment, as he leaves shortly for England.

THE new Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal commences touring work this month with a flying visit to the Orissa border. Leaving Calcutta he gets to Midnapore, and returns to Calcutta on the 9th. On the 13th he starts again for Chittagong, where he spends the 16th and 17th, going on to the old frontier at Rangamati, and eventually returning to Calcutta by way of Dacca and Chandpore on the 26th instant.

DURING the banquet in honour of the Czarewitch that was given in Calcutta by Sir Charles Elliott, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, conversation was at its height, when a loud report was heard, followed by a crash of falling glass. Silence reigned supreme in a moment, and people half rose from their chairs, only to be reassured when the khansamah brought news that some soda-water bottles had burst.

MR. J. L. O'CALLAGHAN, having returned from Burma to Calcutta, the Committee on the Kidderpore Docks, of which he is President, will shortly assemble. Mr. Mackay has been nominated by the Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Horace Bell by the Port Commission. Mr. Ormiston, the Dock Engineer at Bombay, will join the Committee as an expert. The question is mainly an engineering one, but Mr. Mackay will represent the landing and shipping interest, as affected by proposals of Mr. Apjohn, the Engineer in charge of the Docks.

A FAREWELL dinner to Sir Alexander Wilson was given at the Dalhousie Institute on Tuesday night. Mr. Mackay presided, and the gathering was a most representative one, some 120 persons being present, including Sir A. Scoble, Sir D. Barbour, Justices Prinsep, Tottenham, and Macpherson, Mr. Evans, Mr. Steel, Lord William Beresford, and Sir Edward Buck. The Chairman proposed the health of the guest of the evening, dwelling upon the loss Calcutta would sustain in the departure of one of its leading citizens, who had filled many public offices of trust, and who had won many friends by the generous discharge of his social duties. The toast was drunk with enthusiasm. Sir A. Wilson acknowledged the high compliment in a short but effective speech.

SOME surprise has been felt at the appointment of Mr. Izat, the Agent of the Bengal and North-Western Railway, as "commercial member" of the Provincial Legislative Council. This seems to be particularly the case at Cawnpore, and not, under the circumstances, unnaturally. It is true that Mr. Izat was one of the three nominees of the Upper India Chamber of Commerce; but as the other two happened to be the President and Vice-President of that body, the Lieutenant-Governor's choice must be taken to have annulled the compliment which he paid to the Chamber in the first instance by asking their opinion.

THE annual meeting of the Bengal Chamber of Commerce was held on Monday. The President, Mr. Mackay, in his address, said the papers connected with the surveys for railways between Benares and Calcutta had only recently reached the Chamber, and were still engaging the attention of the railway sub-committee. It would, therefore, be premature to express an opinion upon the various projects. It was to be earnestly hoped the consideration of this subject will result in something being decided upon which will bring the port of Calcutta nearer not only to the coal-fields in the Jheria district, and to the granaries of the North-Western Provinces, but will also give what is very much wanted, namely, another line, independent of the East Indian Railway. Referring to the difficulties of navigation in the Hooghly River which caused vessels to load and discharge at Diamond Harbour, he said he had been sometimes forced to doubt whether Kidderpore would, after all, turn out to be the best place that could have been selected for the new docks. Vessels which loaded at those docks might find it impossible to get down the river. This, it might be said, would simply hasten the construction of the Mutlah Ship Canal and the opening-out of that river to navigation; but if this were ever done, might not Calcutta be partially closed as a port? He did not say this would actually occur, but the contingency of Port Canning being extensively used had to be faced. He protested against any re-imposal of the port dues by the Bengal Government as an experiment. The abolition seven years ago had proved successful. After noticing the excessive charges for freight of coal by the East Indian Railway, the President touched upon, among other things, the Factory Commission's Report, which, he said, showed that no fresh legislation was needed in Bengal at least. The Chamber hoped to see the proposal of the Post Office for a special overland mail train from Bombay every week carried out, and also the reduction in telegraphic charges. He entertained a hope that before long four annas would be sufficient to carry a telegram all over India.

CAPTAIN AND LADY FLORENCE STREATFEILD and Lord F. Hamilton, who is at present touring through the North-West Provinces, and Mr. H. Hungerford, leave Calcutta to-day to join a shooting party given by the Maharaja of Kuch Behar. Lieutenant Ehlers, the German traveller, will also join the party.

A SAD accident occurred on the morning of the 6th at the rifle range of the European Infantry at Multan, the choukidar having been shot at the door of his hut by the ricochet of a Martini bullet at a distance of about 800 yards from the target, and to the right of the line of fire.

THE office of the Commissary-General at Meerut was completely burnt down on Tuesday, and only the unsafe walls remain standing. It is rumoured that owing to too large a fire being lit in one of the fire-places the thatch took fire. The fire-engine was quickly brought into use, but was unable to keep the flames under. An official commission of inquiry is sitting on the matter.

A REGRETTABLE feature of military life at Peshawar, writes the Lahore paper, has been for some time past the number of court-martials upon men of the 2nd Northumberland Fusiliers, all for offences of an insubordinate character, such as striking a superior, or offering violence to a superior. These must be taken, we fear, as confirmation of the accounts which had often reached us of the unsatisfactory condition of the regiment.

THE bombardier of the 8th division R. A. at Allahabad, who had sustained such severe injuries to his leg when out shooting in the district has had to suffer amputation. The operation was performed by Surgeon-Major R. Corbett, M.D., D.S.O., Medical Officer in charge of the Allahabad Station Hospital, in presence of the Deputy Surgeon-General and the whole of the medical staff of the station. The man is so far progressing favourably.

LORD WENLOCK'S first public breakfast at the Banqueting Hall, Government House, on Tuesday morning was a great success. The attendance was unusually numerous, and an extra table had to be laid for the accommodation of the guests. His lordship cordially shook hands with most of those present, granting interviews to several after breakfast.

COLOMBO, it appears, is to have a permanent horse-market. Mr. Gascard is about to open an establishment where horses can always be obtained, and he will add to it by importing fresh stock from time to time. He has not yet fixed upon the site for his establishment, nor have its form and dimensions been decided on yet. His scheme will handicap other importers of horse-flesh somewhat heavily.

IN a testamentary suit before the Madras High Court, counsel for the executors raised a question as to the construction of Section 50 of the Succession Act. The testator made a draft will which he signed, and the attesting witness only initialled it. The question was whether such initials were a good signature according to that section. Counsel pointed out it had been contended in the Bombay and Calcutta courts that a mere mark or initials was insufficient. Authorities being cited in support of the contention, Mr. Justice Wilkinson held that initials were sufficient.

FROM the 24th to the 30th ultimo, 8 East Indians, 18 Native Christians, 229 Hindus, and 39 Mahomedans died within municipal limits in Madras, making a total of 294 persons. The average of the corresponding week for the ten previous years was 348. The deaths are thus classified:—6 from cholera, 2 from small-pox, 10 from measles, 79 from fevers, 23 from dysentery, 8 from diarrhœa, and 166 from other diseases. The death-rate in the week under notice was 38·3 per 1,000 per annum. The mean of the ten previous years was 45·4 per 1,000 per annum.

(February 7.)

THE only violent crimes in Upper Burma for the week ending 17th January were one robbery at Mektila and one dacoity at the Ruby Mines. The other districts were absolutely free from violent crime. For the week ending the 24th January the return is as follows:—One dacoity, in which ten men were engaged and two villagers wounded; another from Sikaw, where some policemen were attacked by dacoits, and one of the former was killed and two wounded. The other violent crimes in Upper Burma were petty robberies or dacoities.

FURTHER news from Moneik says that Lieutenant Tighe and the Gurkhas successfully attacked Kyusa, killing thirteen men, seven of whom were followers of Nya Kyaw, and included Bo San Pan. One Gurkha was killed. The rest of the enemy are at Loikon.

MR. C. W. CHITTY, barrister-at-law, who has been appointed to act as the Chief Judge of the Bombay Court of Small Causes, took charge of his new appointment on Monday morning.

THE following appointments have been made on the return to duty of the Rev. G. Gothard, M.A.:—The Reverend G. H. Lewis, B.A., to be Chaplain of Dessa and Abu; and the Reverend G. Gothard, M.A., to be Chaplain of St. Paul's, Poona. The Reverend C. H. Badham, B.A., Chaplain of Deesa and Abu, has been granted privilege leave for three months from date of being relieved by the Reverend G. A. Lewis.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR IN COUNCIL has confirmed the following appointments made by the Honourable the Chief Justice of Her Majesty's High Court of Judicature during the absence of Mr. L. A. Watkins on privilege leave:—Mr. W. Lane to act as First Deputy Registrar, Commissioner for taking Affidavits, and Clerk to the Chief Justice; and Mr. H. Lester to act as Junior Judge's Clerk and Clerk to the Parsee Chief Matrimonial Court.

MR. COOPER, on Wednesday, at the Esplanade Police Court, in deciding the Turf Defamation Case, held that the Jockey, D. Greenhalgh, was justified in writing and publishing his letter regarding Major Elliott, which, considering all the circumstances of the case, was not calculated to harm the reputation of the complainant. His Worship, in alluding to the action of the stewards of the Western India Turf Club, in revoking the license, said that at their meeting they should bear in mind the maxim to the effect that "No man should be condemned unheard." The accused was discharged by his Worship.

THE case in which Abdul Mujeed Hajee Ismail, a pilgrim broker and a native of Kashgar, in Asiatic Turkey, was arraigned before the Hon. Mr. Justice Farran and a special jury for the murder of a woman named Iakan, was concluded on Wednesday. The victim, it will be remembered, was a woman of the same nationality as accused, and had come to Bombay only a few weeks before the occurrence of the tragedy, the cause of which primarily appears to have been jealousy on the part of the prisoner, and to some extent perhaps an attack made on him by the deceased woman, with whom Abdul is stated to have remonstrated for going about the streets with another man. His Lordship in the course of his remarks to the jury mentioned that the evidence taken at the Police Court by the magistrate was not in accordance with the directions of the Code, which prescribed that only such questions should be put as might afford any explanation by prisoners of the evidence against themselves, and not for the purpose of inculpation, as apparently had been the mode adopted in the present case. The jury, after retiring for ten minutes, returned an unanimous verdict of guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder by doing an act with intention to cause death. His Lordship. remarking that the jury had taken a very merciful view of the case, sentenced the prisoner to transportation for the term of his natural life.

BOMBAY may not always be happy in the choice of persons whom it makes up its mind to commemorate, but it usually adds the memorial to the talk of it. The case of the movement to commemorate the late Mr. Fawcett, however, is an exception, says the Pioneer. Mr. W. Lee-Warner wrote some months ago to inquire what had become of the funds contributed, and elicited a reply from one of the honorary secretaries that the money had been appropriated to the Jubilee Institute and the University at a meeting held about eighteen months ago. Mr. Lee-Warner tells us that this is the first intimation either he or the public received of the sum collected or the manner of its disposal. He adds that it is "a good practice to send to members of committee a brief statement of accounts when accounts are closed." To say that it is a distinctly mischievous practice to do anything else, would be nearer the measure of the occasion.

THE illness of the Amir of Kabul, observes the Pioneer, has given the native doctors about him an opportunity of showing his English physician, D. Gray, a new and startling remedy for gout. The practice of these hakims is to bleed their patients freely when the disease reaches an acute stage, and Abdur Rahman is said to have had eight pounds of blood taken from him in a few hours. He may well be described as suffering from extreme exhaustion. The wonder is that he did not die outright after blood-letting of this kind.

SUBADAR-MAJOR MAULADAD KHAN, C.I.E.—The death is announced from India of one of the most gallant and distinguished officers in the native army. Subadar-Major Mauladad Khan, C.I.E, who had seen more than 30 years' active service, died a few days before the last mail left India. He was a Pathan, or Afghan, being a member of the Kuki Khel branch of the Afridi tribe, and his own residence was at Gudar, a hamlet two miles distant from Jamrud. He entered the Indian army some time before the mutiny, throughout which he served with much distinction, gaining the medal with clasp, and the third class of the Order of Merit. He took part in all the frontier expeditions between 1860 and 1863, being wounded in that against the Mahsud Waziris. In the Umbeyla expedition of 1863 he also proved himself a brave and experienced soldier. His further frontier services included the Lundkhwar campaign of 1866, the Hazara of 1868, the Aimal Chabootra of 1876, the Jowaki of 1877–8, and the Waziri of 1881. He served throughout the whole of the Afghan war from 1878 to 1880, for which he obtained the second-class Order of British India, being raised to the first class for the last Waziri expedition. He also took part in the Indian expedition to Egypt, and for this he was made a Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire. Another reward which he greatly appreciated was that he was selected to accompany the Indian contingent to England. His active services did not end here, for he was appointed to the escort sent under Colonel, now Sir West Ridgeway, to the Heri Rud, for the purposes of the Afghan Boundary Commission. When he retired from active service he held the rank of Subadar-Major of the 20th Punjab Infantry, and he is described by those who knew him as being "gentle and retiring in private life, but brave as a lion on the battle-field." He was a good soldier; loved and respected by all who knew him, and a true friend.

HUGH LOUSADA BARROW, South Lancashire Regt., and a Major in the Egyptian Army, who was killed in action in the engagement with the Dervishes at Tokar, on the 19th inst., when acting as Brigade-Major, was the third son of Maj.-Gen. De S. Barrow, Madras Staff Corps, and was born 22nd February 1861. He was appointed to the Egyptian Army on 22nd January 1890.

CAPT. RICHARD HUDSON DYAS, late Bengal Army, son of the late Capt. J. H. Dyas, 51st King's Own L.I., died at Berne on the 12th inst.

INDIAN APPOINTMENTS AND THE STAFF CORPS.

A correspondent writes to a Home Service paper :—

"I cannot conceive why parents now-a-days consent to incur the expenses and risk of failure which attends competitions for the Army, with the notion of getting their sons into the Indian Staff Corps, when there are so many much better Indian appointments in the market, which are obtainable with less expense and with a mere tithe of the risk which attends military competitive examinations. I refer to appointments in the uncovenanted Services—viz. the Public Works, Forests, Telegraph, Railway, and Police Departments, in which higher pay is obtainable. I have just perused a re-organization scheme for the Police Department, which is by no means the pick of the basket, and is filled with failures for the Army. The rates of pay run as follows :—

Assistant Superintendents—

	Rupees.
On appointment ...	350
Of 3 years' service ...	400
Of 6 " " ...	450
Of 9 " " ...	500
Of 12 " " ...	550
Of 15 " " ...	600

District Superintendents—

	Rupees.
Of 18 years' service ...	700
Of 21 " " ...	800
Of 24 " " ...	900

1,000 and 1,200.

In addition, Deputy Inspectors-General receive 1,500, and Inspectors-General, 2,500.

Excluding travelling allowance.

Beside this, place the pay of the Staff Corps officers :—

	Rupees.
Lieutenant, say of 3 years' service on joining the Staff Corps	325
Lieutenant, up to 11 years' service	325
" if he obtains an adjutancy, one being allowed per regiment	425
Captain, after 11 years' service as regimental wing officer	474
" of between 16 and 17 years' service as wing commander	604
Major, after 20 years' service as wing commander ...	870
Lieut.-Col., after 26 years' service as second in command	1,057
" after 26 years' service as commandant, if he reaches the post	1,427

Such is the prospect of 80 per cent. of officers in the Staff Corps, the balance being composed of a mere handful of officers in higher military posts, and in the various military and civil departments, who are better paid for their services, and where appointments are matters of selection. Add to the above the charges incurred for a complete new uniform—say, four times in an officer's career, at 1,500 rupees per outfit, a charge at 600 rupees four times, and the total comes to 8,400 rupees. Place this on the top of the monthly contributions (compulsory) to messes, bands, funds, &c. the maintenance of a charge at 30 rupees per mensem, and it will give you a very good idea what the average Staff Corps officer has to live on. Is it surprising that he is discontented, and thinks it only right to warn off his friends and relations from allowing their sons to enter the Indian Army?"

A MESSAGE from the Miranzai expedition, dated "Camp Ghandasam, through Kohat, 29th January," says:—None of the first and second columns are halting here, as all the baggage mules have been sent to Hangu to bring up supplies, as Hangu has been made the sole base of operations. The enemy were seen yesterday on the cliffs over the last bank of the Ghorfin, and are there again this morning. A reconnaissance of three companies of the 4th Punjab Infantry and the 5th Punjab Cavalry went up the valley as far as Vazgor, and the results are believed to have been satisfactory. A reconnaissance of the 5th Punjab Infantry proceeds up to the valley to-day, towards the Shaishan country. The third column arrived at Saiphal Mela yesterday from Darband, after a difficult march, having sent 300 men to Hangu to assist in loading up supplies. A representative jirga of the Shaikhans came in yesterday. Nothing has been heard of Makhanddin, but he is believed to be in hiding not far from here. Stores of rice, ghee, and grain were discovered in Gwada yesterday. Yesterday and to-day have been splendid days, and there was a hard frost this morning. The health of the troops is good.

REVIEWS.

The Rulers of India. The Earl of Mayo, G.C.S.I. By Sir W. W. HUNTER. (Clarendon Press, Oxford.)

THE latest addition to the "Rulers of India" series yields to none of its predecessors in attractiveness, vigour, and artistic portraiture. Sir W. Hunter has been long recognised as a master of style. With the exception, perhaps, of Colonel Malleson, no Anglo-Indian writer of the present day—though literary giants are neither few nor far between—can be compared to him as regards lucidity of arrangement, clearness of thought, and power and variety of diction. He appears at his best in this thoroughly appreciative memoir of the truly good and great statesman whose useful and honourable career he has undertaken to illustrate. To him it was a task easy of accomplishment, for he had already presented the public with a full-length portrait of Lord Mayo in the two volumes he produced within a very few years after the assassination of that lamented Viceroy. We need not linger over the early years of Richard Bourke, afterwards Lord Naas, a title he made as popular in England as in Ireland by his manly bearing and intelligent discharge of difficult and unwelcome duties. Three times during the course of eighteen years he served as the Conservative Chief Secretary for Ireland, and won golden opinions from political opponents as well as from his own friends. It was this feeling of universal respect which secured for him the Whig ratification of his appointment to the Viceroyalty of India, after the resignation of the Conservative Ministry in 1868. The Press, it is true, was outrageously virulent, but Mr. Disraeli stood stoutly by his side, while the Whig leaders, especially the Duke of Argyll, never withheld their confidence from him until the day of his death.

On his arrival in Calcutta, Lord Mayo was confronted with two exceedingly serious questions. The Afghan outlook was gloomy, if not actually menacing. The Indian Government had been so fearful of compromising themselves with two antagonistic rulers that they had held aloof until Shere Ali had firmly established himself at Kabul as de facto master of Afghanistan. At the memorable durbar at Amballa in 1869 Lord Mayo succeeded in converting Shere Ali into a faithful ally, without making any unworthy concessions, but simply by his open and generous demeanour, which no Asiatic could fail to entirely trust and revere. Subsequently, Baluchistan and Khelat were induced to tender their voluntary submission and become feudatories of the great Anglo-Indian Empire. Lord Mayo, however, was no Conqueror. He had no ambition to extend the territories under his sway. He construed his mission as being of a conciliatory character, and in that capacity he was signally successful with respect alike to frontier tribes and to the semi-independent princes and potentates within the Imperial borders. By the latter he was implicitly trusted, and throughout his too brief viceroyalty was to them an object of respectful attachment. But Lord Mayo's greatest anxieties arose out of the entangled condition of the finances. In the three years previous to his accession to the viceregal throne the accumulated deficits amounted to the appalling sum of £5,774,281. At that time the Finance Minister happened to be Sir R. Temple, a clever man, but quite unfit to conduct that special department. Fortunately for India he fell ill at a critical moment, and was compelled to return to Europe on six months' sick leave. His absence was taken advantage of by Mr., now Sir John, Strachey, a somewhat "dour" personage, but of undoubted ability. Acting under Lord Mayo's instructions, Mr. Strachey converted the expected deficit of 2½ millions sterling into a small surplus of £108,779. This marked the turning of the tide. The surplus for 1870–71 amounted to £1,359,410; for 1871–72 to £2,863,836; and for 1872–73 to £1,616,888. The total surplus for those three years exceeded the deficit of the three years preceding Lord Mayo's arrival. The means by which this desirable result was attained were simple enough. The grant for Public Works was reduced by Colonel, now Lieut.-General, Sir Richard Strachey by £800,000, who thus magnanimously deprived himself of the opportunity of initiating or completing works of unquestionable utility. The spending departments were also cut down to the extent of £350,000, thus saving by economies £1,150,000 during the current year 1869–70. But even this considerable saving proved unequal to the end proposed. It was, therefore, deemed necessary to increase the taxation, always a dangerous proceeding in India, where the taxpayers suffer from chronic impecuniosity. Recourse was had to two measures almost equally unpopular. The Salt Duty was enhanced in Bombay and Madras for six months, producing only £180,000. For the same period the Income Tax was raised from 1 to 2½ per cent., but yielded no more than £320,000, the supposed measure of the prosperity of 200 millions of British subjects. It must be admitted that over this ridiculous grievance an unseemly and undignified turmoil was created by the Anglo-Indian Press, especially in Calcutta, where the Viceroy was subjected to personal abuse that did him no harm, but which was absolutely disgraceful to those who were guilty of such misconduct. The only excuse to be made for the offenders was that they knew not what they did. Notwithstanding the fuss that was made in official circles about taking the public into the confidence of the Government, nothing whatever was done to dispel the ignorance that prevailed throughout Anglo-Indian journalism, nor would any "able editor" have howled and torn his hair could he have had the slightest suspicion that he was exciting himself about a mere trifle, and that the enormous sum of money that was being squeezed out of the Indian population barely exceeded £300,000 for the half year. For all that it is now generally conceded that for many reasons an income-tax is quite out of place in India, and is certain to produce discontent quite incommensurate with the hardship really inflicted or with the proceeds of an unpopular collection. That was the only time that Lord Mayo was misunderstood. He entered upon a practical course of legislation that was thoroughly appreciated by all classes. Though almost his first step was to temporarily cripple the Public Works Department, he afterwards developed its operations as far as the funds at his command would permit. The extension of railways and of channels of irrigation provided ample employment for the industrious poor, while they staved off to an indefinite future the lamentable consequences of drought, and mitigated the evils they could not wholly avert. On the question of popular high-class education, Lord Mayo entertained perfectly sound opinions. While heartily sympathising with every man who strove to raise himself above his fellows by intellectual ability, the Viceroy was not slow in discovering that the real aim of the Bengali Babus was to render themselves so disagreeable that, in self-defence, the Government would be compelled to find them remunerative employment. The final chapter must either be copied verbally and literally—which the space at our disposal will not permit—or be left to the sorrowful perusal of the reader. The man is not to be envied who can read it with dry eyes. It is a piteous tale, and is told with a simplicity and earnestness that must go straight to any manly heart.

Report on the Old Records of the India Office. With Supplementary Note and Appendices. By Sir GEORGE BIRDWOOD, M.D., K.C.I.E., C.S.I., LL.D. (W. H. Allen & Co., Ltd.)

ORIGINALLY printed for official circulation in November 1878, and reprinted for the same purpose in November 1889, this exceedingly interesting and valuable report was necessarily confined to a limited circle of readers. Thanks, however, to the enlightened enterprise of Messrs. W. H. Allen & Co., the work can now be obtained by the general public, and at a reasonable price.

Sir George Birdwood has in a modest preface to this reprint explained its object and told what has been done and is doing with regard to the conservation and classifying of the varied records held in the India Office. Although he himself has taken a prominent part in this matter, he declares that the credit for the wonderful improvement that has been effected since 1879 in the order and condition of the India Office Records "is altogether due to Mr. F. C. Danvers, who in 1884 commenced the first effective attempt to systematically conserve and classify them and render them promptly and safely accessible to the public." What such a labour has been can only be understood by those who will peruse the present volume. Sir George Birdwood does not claim for it anything more than being "a curtly descriptive index" to the documents enumerated. "I thought at first," he writes, "of giving it a more attractive character by the addition of a series of particularly interesting extracts from the documents; but the Report having come into demand not as an interesting calendar but as a comprehensive working index, I resolved, on second thoughts, to reproduce it exactly as originally printed in 1879, and again in the autumn of last year." Sir George, however, does not do himself justice. The present work is no mere cut-and-dried index to documents. It is full of interesting explanations and criticisms from the author's facile and graceful pen. But the reader who peruses these will ask for more; and we hope that Sir George will give us, and before long, the series of those interesting extracts which he refers to, with his own bright and instructive comments. In the meantime we commend the present volume to all who are interested in the story of the beginning and growth of our Indian Empire. It is a handsomely got up book, contains views of the old East India House in 1638–85, 1714–26, 1726–96, and 1796–1858, when the "Great Company" ceased to exist as a separate independent body. There is also given two richly-coloured plates of the arms granted to the Old and New East India Companies, a plan of Bombay harbour in 1626, and two folding maps showing the early European discoveries and settlements in the Indian seas.

Sir George dedicates the book in a few touching sentences to the Venerable Sett Framjee Nusserwanjee Patel, J.P., the "Nestor of the Parsees," "in admiration of the virtues for which he has been held in the highest honour for three generations of contemporaries in Western India, and in affectionate remembrance of all the kindnesses I received from him and other dear Settia friends, our associates in the loyal civic life of Bombay."

THE Australian Irrigation Colonies (Chaffey Brothers) offer a pleasant occupation, a healthy life, a cheerful home, a soil of unequalled fertility—producing by irrigation results unparalleled in the annals of Horticulture—comfort, civilization, and material prosperity combined. They consist of half-a-million acres, in the sunny and salubrious climate of Victoria, and South Australia, on the great River Murray, which affords an abundant supply of fertilizing water for the Irrigation of Vineyards and Fruit Farms, and for the production, in assured quantity and excellence, of Grapes, Oranges, Lemons, Olives, Apricots, Figs, and other Fruits (already so successfully grown in Australia), by Cultivators with large and small Capital, holding from Ten to Eighty Acres and upwards. THE SIMLA INSANITY.—II.

THE tirade of the Calcutta Statesman, which we noticed in part last week, has not been allowed to pass without comment from its contemporaries in India. The Pioneer says rightly that the article is simply a rechauffé of the late Mr. Robert Knight's views on Sir Charles Macgregor's plans for attacking Russia, and on the danger of dealing with Afghan politics at Simla. But when the Statesman asserts (we quoted the paragraph last week) that Sir Charles persuaded Sir Frederick Haines and Sir Frederick Roberts in 1884, at Simla, to consider his project to attack Russia in the Caucasus, the simple facts seem to have been overlooked that Sir Frederick Haines was not in Simla in 1884, having left India for good in 1881, and that in 1884 Sir Frederick Roberts was Commander-in-Chief at Madras. But, as any stick is supposed to be good enough to beat a dog with, so any assertion made by the late Mr. Robert Knight is supposed by his successor to be an argument to demolish Simla. The views of the late Sir Charles Macgregor may have been as wild and mischievous as the late Mr. Robert Knight held they were, but it is nonsense to say that Simla is to be blamed for originating them, and that no such schemes could have been launched in any of the Presidency cities, because the atmosphere there would have been fatal to their very conception. Macgregor had formed his opinions about Russia's supposed menace to India years before he was at Simla, and, having the courage of his opinions, he had never hesitated to express them pretty freely by pen or tongue wherever he was. He certainly issued his very indiscreet pamphlet, entitled "The Defence of India," from Simla, when he was Quartermaster-General, but this pamphlet was only the embodiment of opinions formed long before by him. He was a Russo-phobist of the most extreme type, and, had his advice been followed by the Government of India, and supported by the Home Government, there is little doubt but that we might have had a war with Russia upon our hands long before he left India. But, because Sir Charles Macgregor held very extreme views, and penned some of them at Simla, surely the inference that Simla as a seat of Government during the hot weather is a danger to British stability of rule in India, is an inference ridiculous to draw. The Statesman, going back into ancient history, says that "it was at Simla, which has been the curse of British rule for nearly sixty years, that Sir William Macnaghten, under the influence of Arthur Conolly, succeeded in persuading the amiable but weak Auckland, in 1838, into the belief that we could secure the Afghan people as our allies for all time by forcing the half-imbecile and absolutely discarded Shah Sooja upon them as their Amir, in the room of the great and able Barukzye chief Dost Mahomed Khan, whom they had chosen almost by acclamation as their leader. The result of this criminal insanity was that we converted the whole Afghan people, who had been our almost passionate friends, into the bitterest enemies who now beset our frontier." Granted that the advice given was bad and disastrous in its consequences, would it not have been given and accepted just the same if the adviser and the Governor-General had been in Calcutta instead of at Simla? But it is not altogether correct to say that Lord Auckland allowed himself to be "persuaded" by Sir William Macnaghten. He had another adviser in the person of Sir John Hobhouse, President of the Board of Control; and he was led as much by his own obstinacy as by any outward pressure. Admitting that the course he took was impolitic and unjust, and that he committed India to a war, "whose ultimate fruits," to quote one of her latest historians, "were to be gathered amidst vain regrets for the loss of many lives, millions of money, and much of our national honour," how is the blame of the evil-doing to be laid against Simla? The Statesman and other Calcutta journals naturally hold that the true knowledge of all Indian and Central Asian affairs can only be found in that city—in which alone "independent public opinion" exists. But this dictum has been long ago discounted for what it is worth. When the Indian Mutiny broke out in 1857, there was no "Simla exodus" of officialdom to incite the indignation of the local editors. They had the Governor-General and his councillors in their midst. But where was the knowledge of the true state of affairs? Who in Calcutta officialdom recognized the gravity of the crisis? The brilliant historian of that Mutiny tells in no uncertain language the story of official ignorance and blindness until the "first awakening" of the Government. Although intelligence of the outbreak at Mírath had reached the Government, they had not, up to the end of May, apprehended the gravity of the situation. "Everything," wrote the Secretary in the Home Department, Mr. Cecil Beadon, on the 25th of May, "is quiet within 600 miles of the capital. The mischief caused by a passing and groundless panic has already been arrested, and there is every reason to hope that in the course of a few days tranquillity and consequence will be restored throughout the Presidency." Commenting on this, Colonel Malleson writes with calm but justified severity: "This 'reason to hope' had no solid foundation. The hope which existed was, in fact, without reason. The week that followed the 1st of June disclosed to the Government their error, to the world the short-sightedness of the Government."

It is no part of our purpose to excuse or defend any of the abuses which it is said have arisen owing to the wholesale exodus to Simla of so many Departmental Offices; but even the existence of such abuses does not prove the assertions of the Statesman, that Simla has been the curse of British rule for nearly sixty years, and that the policy of the Government of India should be moulded only at Calcutta. The one instance of the Mutiny time, which we have quoted, is sufficient to dispel that fallacy. But the real object of the Bengal Presidency press is not so much to do away with Simla, as to force the Government to remain at the capital for the greater part of the year. Rightly or wrongly, the summer seat of the Government of India has, with the approval of the Secretary of State for India, been fixed at Simla; a residence for the Viceroy has been built there, and offices have been erected at considerable cost. This is not likely to be all undone now by resuscitating, with the addition of fresh misstatements, the old Calcutta outcry against "The Simla Exodus."

MILITARY INTELLIGENCE.

CAPTAIN BLYTH, Warwickshire Regiment, has been appointed Adjutant of the Calcutta Volunteers. Lieutenant Cuppage, 5th Bengal Infantry, who was first nominated, had not the necessary musketry qualification.

THE 38th Bengal Infantry have just returned to India from Upper Burma after thirteen months' service in that country. The detachments in the Chindwin Valley and at Fort White suffered severely from malarious fever, their losses being exceptionally heavy. This was the more unfortunate, as the regiment is one of the Hindustani levies which is to be broken up. The best Jats will, however, have a chance of joining other regiments, and as they will be picked men their services will not be lost to the State.

IN place of the usual annual inspections at their different centres—Jamalpore, Howrah, Allahabad, Tundla—the East Indian Railway Volunteers are to have this year a general camp of exercise, the date for which has been fixed from the 15th to the 28th of this month. The locale is Jamalpore, which besides being the head-quarters, is comparatively accessible from all quarters, and the officers of the railway, from the Agent downwards, are determined to do all in their power by granting leave liberally to make the camp the success it should be. The meeting will wind up with an inspection of the whole corps on the 27th instant, at which an effort will be made to bring up every man who can be spared.

THE Lahore paper writes:—A case recently occurred in which certain comments were made by the civil authorities upon the inadequacy of the punishment inflicted by a court-martial upon two artillerymen, for disorderly conduct in the Central Provinces. This elicited the remark from the Commander-in-Chief that, before making such comments, the civil authorities might ascertain exactly what punishment had been inflicted, and why it was considered adequate by the military authorities concerned.

BY the new Warrant for the amalgamation of the three Indian Staff Corps, officers of the Madras and Bombay Armies serving in Bengal will, in future, be eligible for district commands in that Presidency; also staff appointments at Army Headquarters.

ON the strong recommendation of the Medical authorities, the Commander-in-Chief has moved the Madras Government to sanction Ramandroog being made a permanent sanitarium for young soldiers of British corps serving in Secunderabad and Bellary. Accordingly, in future, troops serving at these two stations needing a change of air will be sent to Ramandroog from 1st April to 30th September each year, unless any of them are specially recommended, when they will be sent to Wellington. Ramandroog is a high hill about forty miles west of Bellary town, and is situated in the petty State of Sandur. It is otherwise called Ramanmalai, and it is exactly 3,100 feet above the level of the sea. The climate is equable, while on account of its isolated position even in the hottest weather the air reaches it fresh, being rarified in its passage over a lofty table-land. The hill is blessed with several good carriage roads, and many excellent bridle roads and paths. Fruit-trees, shrubs, and flowers grow luxuriantly in this favoured spot, while various springs, streams, and tanks furnish a sufficiency of water for all ordinary domestic and irrigation purposes Mineral springs have also been discovered in several places. The principal chalybeate spring was discovered many years ago by Major Henderson of the Engineers, but what its ascertained effect on health is we do not know. Ramandroog is small, but it makes up in salubrity what it lacks in space.

IT has been decided by the officers of the Madras Railway Volunteer Corps, of which Mr. F. H. Trevithick has for many years been the popular Commandant, to present him on his retirement in April next with a piece of plate as a souvenir of his connection with the corps. Subscriptions are being raised, the maximum subscription of any one member being limited to one day's pay.

MAJOR-GENERAL F. R. SLLY-FLOOD, C.B., on vacating his divisional command in India, on relief by Major-General Hollinshead-Blundell, will return to England and be placed on the Retired List, under the inexorable ruling of age disqualification. He was born on February 19, 1829, and, having thus passed the limit laid down for officers of his rank, there is no help for him—he must go. General Flood joined the 53rd Foot as Ensign, August 21, 1849; and joining the 82nd Foot October 23, 1860, remained with it until October 31, 1877, when he went upon half-pay, after five years of command. He was Military Secretary, Bombay, 1862–65; Military Secretary, Bengal, 1865–70; Assistant Adjutant-General, Gibraltar, 1878–83; Commandant Royal Military College, Sandhurst, 1884–85; Chief of the Staff, Egypt, 1885–86; and went out to Bombay to take up a divisional command, April 1, 1886. All his war experience has been gained in India, where he came prominently to the front during the Mutiny, being twice mentioned and obtaining his brevet majority.

THE announcement of the death of Major H. J. Wilkin will have been read, says the Army and Navy Gazette, with deep regret by all who knew the deceased officer. The incident in his military career of which he was most proud was the recommendation which came spontaneously from the non-commissioned officers and men of his troop that he should be granted the Victoria Cross for gallantry in the field. Writing from Umballa, March 24, 1861, they said:—"Honoured Colonel,—We, the undersigned non-commissioned officers and men of the regiment, beg leave to suggest that Lieutenant H. J. Wilkin is entitled to a recommendation for the Victoria Cross, for bravery in the field, certified by survivors, as follows:—Sergeant George Peek states—'I was present on March 19, 1858, with a reconnoitring party, consisting of two guns, B.A., about 30 men and 3 officers, 7th Hussars, and a detachment of the 78th Highlanders. A fort was discovered filled with rebels, near Moosabagh; a description of the attack and capture of the fort is unnecessary, being already a matter of history; but the following incidents I beg leave to lay before the Colonel. In charging the rebels, Captain Slade, who commanded the party, was severely wounded; Mr. Bankes and charger were cut down; Mr. Wilkin charged to his side, and in warding off the attack from his wounded comrade, his charger reared, which caused him to miss his aim, and at the same time got severely wounded through the foot; wheeling again to the rescue, he cut down the rebel who was on the point of killing Mr. Bankes. Mr. Wilkin, although wounded, rallied his men, and with the assistance of Colonel J. M. Hagart, who came up at the time, cut down nearly every rebel remaining. The above account is fully corroborated.'" This document was given to Lieutenant Wilkin, quite unsolicited, by the non-commissioned officers and men, with the remark that they had often talked about and wondered how it was that he had never got any of the honours to which his gallantry had entitled him. The Victoria Cross Committee recommended the case for consideration, but the much-prized reward of valour never came.

THE "POOR WHITES."

(Rangoon Gazette.)

All over India the "poor white" difficulty is a serious one which every now and then rises to the surface, but in Calcutta it seems to have reached very much more formidable dimensions than anywhere else. There the submerged portion must be greatly more than one tenth; and, as the Archdeacon said, it is impossible in the case of very many to raise them to any higher level, because they are absolutely untrustworthy in any porsition. The evil seems to have arisen to a very large extent simply from the generous hand with which charitable help has been given in Calcutta. The same thing has happened elsewhere whenever charity has not been guided by discretion and some firmness and common sense. In Italy the multiplication of religious houses led to an enormous increase in the numbers of human drones infesting the towns; and we are told that in some cases half the population had become beggars simply because they found they could live in this way quite as well, if not better, than by honest toil. In London the laxity with which relief was afforded some thirty or forty years ago led to an enormous increase in the proportion of the population receiving such aid. At one time it had been only 40 per 1,000, but in 1867 it reached 170 per 1,000. When the public realised that their softness had in a few years more than quadrupled the proportion of the population thus preying as parasites on honest workers, a reform was demanded.

In India there are some special difficulties connected with pauperism among the European and Eurasian section of the community; but in the main the difficulty is the same as in communities of one race, and must be met in the same way. While every help is given to those who are really struggling to retain their self-respect and to keep their heads above water in trying circumstances, there must be no soft-heartedness in dealing with those who will not work but are not ashamed to beg. If help is given to every able-bodied man or woman who asks for it, the proportion of drones will steadily increase here as it has always done elsewhere under similar circumstances. The only right principle on which charity can safely be given is that of demanding work before granting any aid except in cases of real illness. It is not in accordance with Christian charity that any person should lack bread; but it is not in accordance with common sense, or consistent with the well-being of the community, that able-bodied men and women should be able to get a meal at any time by cringing and begging. What charity demands in their case is that they should be given an opportunity of earning it; and the earning of it in this way should be harder and more unpleasant than it would be to earn it in the ordinary way in the open labour market. If charity were systematically worked in this way, the "poor white" difficulty would disappear, or at least be kept within narrow limits; but so long as every idle and worthless fellow finds that he can get a meal at any time by going whining to the parson, so long will pauperism of this kind increase.

A NEW ARGUMENT AGAINST SIMLA.

(Bombay Gazette.)

The Statesman thinks that the presence of the Viceroy and of the members of the Supreme Government in Calcutta affords an opportunity for once more exhibiting the wrong-doings and "insanities," as it seems to take pleasure in calling them, of the forward frontier policy. A good case does not necessarily spoil by frequent statement, though it seems late in the day to go over the story of Lord Auckland's disastrous indiscretions, and narrative, studded with such names as those of Burnes and Macnaghten, of Stoddart and Conolly, can scarcely be deemed matter of contemporary interest. The main purpose of the Statesman's repetition of all this familiar history seems, however, to be less to convict the "forward" party of high crimes and misdemeanours and of insanities too numerous to mention, than to prove that it is all due to the wasteful and pernicious habit of moving the Government to Simla every hot weather. It is this habit, we are told, which has been the parent of all the political mischief which has been devised across the frontier. Sir John Kaye, who occasionally said things that were not wise, once affirmed, we are reminded, that Simla had produced more polit-

Digitized by Google

cal insanity than any other place in the world, by which we hope he cannot perchance have meant that more foolish things were written about it than were done in it, though that is an adaptation of the sentiment which not a few Calcutta writings on the subject go far to sanction. To the successor of the late Mr. Knight, who seems to have made more free than discreet use of that lamented journalist's memoranda, it would seem that it is a foolish thing to hold with the Latin Poet that men change only their sky and not their ideas when they pass from one part of the world to another. It was at Simla, we are told, that Sir William Macnaghten, fifty-three years ago, persuaded Lord Auckland to take up the cause of Shah Sooja; at Simla too, Sir Charles Macgregor in 1884 persuaded Sir Frederick Roberts and Sir Frederick Haines "to consider seriously his new project of 1876–77, for embarking a force of 65,000 men at Bombay for Baghdad, to march thence up the Euphrates and Tigris to attack Russia in the Caucasus or Armenia." The Pioneer makes havoc of this latter statement as a piece of history by pointing out that at the time mentioned Sir Frederick Haines had left India for good, and Sir Frederick Roberts was at Madras, while the Commander-in-Chief was Sir Donald Stewart, which this rechauffeur of old stories impolitely forgets. The argument, however, may be taken independently of the history, such as it is, from which it is derived. It is that if Government would only remain in the capital and the Presidency towns they would be kept from all vain thoughts by the play of public opinion. If Calcutta journalists would look around and see what precise kind of public opinion is asserting itself in their city at this moment, they would be rather thankful that there is a Simla where Government can shape their course with a certain resolute independence of the reactionary movement in Bengali Society. The argument assumes, as nearly all the arguments against the exodus have assumed, that Calcutta opinion is necessarily enlightening and wholesomely restraining. The latest sample of this opinion rudely rebukes the assumption. As regards the particular instance of Sir Charles Macgregor's plans for checkmating a Ruasian advance upon India, we should be sorry to think that the presence of the Government in one locality or another had any influence upon the productive capacity of earnest strategists. Sir Charles Macgregor would have been busy devising plans of campaign of the offensive-defensive kind, no matter where the office of the Quartermaster-General might have been located. If the contents of every pigeon-hole in the Intelligence Branch of that Department could be strewn upon the streets of Calcutta—which apparently is the Statesman's patent device for saving us from rash adventures across the frontier—a good many schemes as daring as those in question would be brought to the view of friends and enemies. But we believe it is sound theology that temptation, when it is not acted upon, is not sinful, and the Government of India may be forgiven their annual journey to Simla if the chief sin in their sojourn there were their being tempted of Sir Charles Macgregor and the strategists.

THE LATE SIR RICHARD BURTON.

Lady Burton has sent the following sad letter to the Editor of the Times. Surely there will be a response to such an appeal amongst old Anglo-Indians, many of whom must have known Richard Burton personally. But all know the good work he did for England, and how ill-requited that work was. Do not let the widow have again to pen such a reproachful story, but hasten to add a stone—if nothing more—to the cairn she would raise to her renowned husband's memory:—

Sir,—I arrived here from Liverpool on the 14th, after conveying the body of my husband to the crypt at Mortlake, and have been lying very ill ever since. Four months ago, after his death, I was left in comparative poverty, but by no fault of his. I determined I would not ask anything from the Government, but that there would be no shame in appealing to the British nation to help me to raise a small but characteristic monument to a man they so honoured, and who had devoted his life to the nation's interest in so many ways as Sir Richard Burton. I was induced to do so because I had over 1,000 cuttings from newspapers, all saying that the nation wished his memory to be honoured by a testimonial. Meantime her Majesty graciously gave me a pension of £150 per annum, which was a great surprise and gratification to me. This will give me bread, but it will not pay for the monument. There was only one hearty response to my appeal, but a personal friend of mine at Trieste—Baroness Paul Ralli—wrote to her relatives, Ralli Brothers, of London, and they to Sir Polydore de Keyser, and a subscription was opened at Coutts and Co.'s, 59, Strand. Feeling perfectly sure of the result, I ordered the monument, and to my dismay I find that, after four months, instead of the sum I hoped for, about £950, only twenty-four friends have subscribed, and the result is £139 15s. People say that it is not sufficiently advertised, but I do not know how to make it more known. My father, all my uncles and brothers, are dead, and I have not a man left to help me. Active and independent as my disposition is, after four months' anguish, hard work, and fear, nature is revenging herself, and I am not able to help myself. I think, if you are so kind as to insert this letter, that many who cared for my husband will help me still, and I shall never forget those who have. The sum I first asked for was smaller, but I had no idea then how enormous my expenses would be; the ground is dearer, and also the monument, than the rough estimate was. Of my husband's library and effects, I brought over fifty packages at my own expense, but 175 remain behind, which are beyond my means. The funeral will take place in April, when the monument will be completed. I shall issue as many invitations as I can remember, but I shall be much gratified if all who loved or admired him will come, with or without cards. It shall be duly announced. Mr. Edmonds, 67, Baker Street, Portman Square, will receive letters for me until I am settled.

Yours obediently,

London, Feb. 26. ISABEL BURTON.

India in Parliament.

MONDAY, FEB. 16.

In the House of Lords,

LORD CROSS moved the second reading of the East India Officers Bill, explaining that the object of the measure was to enable certain high officers in India, including the Governor-General and Commanders-in-Chief, to return to Europe for the purpose of consultation with the Home Government, or on other public grounds, without being deemed in law to have thereby vacated their appointments.

The Bill was read a second time.

TUESDAY, FEB. 17.

In the House of Commons,

MR. W. H. SMITH, in reply to M. MACLEAN, announced that legislation would be proposed immediately by the Government of India to amend the Indian Factory Act. The provisions of the Bill would follow, speaking generally, the recommendations of the International Labour Conference at Berlin, with this limitation, that it was proposed to raise the age for the employment of young children from seven, at which age they are now employed, to nine years.

SIR W. PLOWDEN raised a discussion, which was carried on in a comparatively thin House, on a motion to amend Standing Order No. 51, by adding Committee on the Indian financial statement to the exemptions of the rule, in order to secure an additional opportunity for the consideration of general topics of Indian administration by the House. The motion was seconded by SIR R. LETHBRIDGE.

SIR J. E. GORST, in reply, said the view of the Government was that the matter was entirely one for the House. The question was whether it was better to confine the discussion of the Indian Budget to the Budget itself, or to allow the discussion a wider scope, but he pointed out the danger that such a relaxation of the rule would open the door to unpractical and desultory conversation, whereas by the present plan an efficient discussion was at least secured of matters of first-rate importance to India.

SIR W. HARCOURT was not prepared with any definite opinion, but he thought the subject was one highly deserving the attention of the House, and he threw out the suggestion that it might be an improvement to give up two nights to India, one for the ventilation of grievances, and the other for the discussion of the finance of India.

SIR R. TEMPLE, as a practical man, was satisfied that the present system was the best, but SIR R. FOWLER, MR. BRYCE, MR. CONYBEARE, and MR. MACNEILL all spoke in general support of the motion. SIR G. CAMPBELL remarked that he was not anxious that great facilities should be given for the discussion of Indian affairs in this House to the exclusion of other subjects, for which too little time was now available.

MR. W. H. SMITH emphasized the declaration of the UNDER-SECRETARY for INDIA that the Government had no desire to oppose the feeling of the House generally on this question, and in view of the general opinion in favour of the motion they would offer no objection to it.

The motion was then agreed to.

MR. BUCHANAN called attention to the Presidential system of government in India, and moved that, in accordance with the recommendation of four successive Governments of India, the system of separate Presidential commands in Madras and Bombay should be abolished, and that the entire administration of all the Indian armies should be made over to the Commander-in-Chief in India, acting in direct communication with the commanders of the local armies and under the direct orders of the Government of India.

SIR J. GORST pointed out that the recommendation of the Commission of 1879 that the system of separate Presidential commands should be abolished, when it came to be carefully considered by LORD KIMBERLEY, the then Secretary of State, was rejected, not upon dilatory pleas, but upon its merits. There were great differences of military opinion on the subject; there were political objections to the changes proposed in the Madras and Bombay armies, and there were also financial considerations of great weight to be taken into account. Instead, therefore, of meddling with the Presidential armies, the SECRETARY of STATE commenced a policy, which had been carried out down to the present time, of dealing with numerous other practical suggestions and recommendations made by the Commission of 1879; and the result was that real dangers and disadvantages which formerly existed in the system of Indian military organization had one by one been removed or diminished. He went over the reforms so carried out by successive Secretaries of State, and including commissariat, transport, ordnance, clothing, military works, education, and other matters; and he insisted that there was no strong reason why the Government should proceed immediately to make any further change. In any case, the highly technical and difficult subject raised by the motion should be left in the hands of the SECRETARY of STATE, to be considered in conjunction with his technical advisers.

MR. CAMPBELL-BANNERMAN contended that the enormous weight of military and official authority was in favour of the reform advocated in the motion.

SIR R. TEMPLE thought on the whole it was good for the Indian army there should be these great Presidency commands instead of a commandant of an army corps.

MR MUNRO-FERGUSON submitted that it was dangerous to put off longer a reform which had been pressed upon the home Government by successive Governments of India.

SIR W. P. LOWDEN also supported the motion.

MR. E. STANHOPE doubted whether the House of Commons was competent to arrive at a conclusion on a matter on which four Viceroys had differed from as many Secretaries of State. He himself did not pretend that he was able at present to give any decided opinion on the question; and, while he objected to the passing of a drastic resolution which would bind the Government to legislate forthwith, he promised to watch the working of the changes already made with a view to see whether, and if so when, the further reform contemplated in the motion could be carried out.

SIR G. CAMPBELL was in favour of the motion on military grounds, but on political grounds he thought the Indian armies ought to be kept separate. The best solution, in his opinion, was to unite the European army and to retain the native armies under separate commanders.

MR. BUCHANAN, regarding the speech of the SECRETARY of STATE for WAR as more or less satisfactory, asked leave to withdraw his motion.

The motion was withdrawn

FEB. 23.

THE ASSAM-CHITTAGONG RAILWAY.

MR. ESSLEMONT: I beg to ask the Under-Secretary of State for India why, in the last two years' Indian railway reports, no mention has been made of the Assam-Chittagong project which was under negotiation, although other projects are described or spoken of, and the provisional route for the Assam line is duly marked on the map accompanying these reports; if, as is understood, a concession has now been granted by the Secretary of State for this Assam Railway, can a statement of the terms on which the grant is made be laid upon the table, and, as it is said that a three per cent. guarantee is to be given on £1,500,000 of the capital, from what source is the £4,500,000 required to make up the estimate of £6,000,000 to be supplied.

SIR J. GORST: The reason why no mention was made of the Assam-Chittagong Railway project in the reports referred to is that there was nothing fresh to report. Negotiations are now going on for the construction of the line, but nothing has yet been finally settled.

W. H. ALLEN & CO.'S LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY.

Demy 8vo. With Illustrations and Maps. 12s. 6d.

REPORT ON THE OLD RECORDS OF THE INDIA OFFICE.

WITH SUPPLEMENTARY NOTES AND APPENDICES.

By SIR GEORGE BIRDWOOD, M.D., K.C.I.E., C.S.I., LL.D. SECOND REPRINT.

Medium 8vo. With numerous full page and other Illustrations by J. E. ROGERS. 12s 6d.

IN TROUBADOUR LAND: a Ramble in Provence and Languedoc. By S. BARING-GOULD, M.A., Author of "Mehalah," "John Herring," &c.

"The title of Mr. Baring-Gould's book only indicates one of the many points of interest which will attract the intelligent traveller during a tour in Provence and Languedoc. Besides troubadours, there are reminiscences of Greek colonization and Roman Empire, of the Middle Ages, and of the Revolution. . . . The illustrations which adorn the pages of this very readable volume are decidedly above the average. The arm chair traveller will not easily find a pleasanter compagnon de voyage."—St. James's Gazette.

"A most charming book, brightly written, and profusely illustrated with exquisite engravings."—Glasgow Herald.

"Mr. Baring-Gould is a genuine humourist, a keen observer, and an acute reader of character. The book he has produced has much of the 'Mark Twain' spirit, and more than a touch of Thackerayan satire. . . . There is hardly a dull page in the book, and Mr. Rogers's pictures will make the places described very real to those who have not yet visited them."—Manchester Examiner.

"A charming book, full of wit and fancy and information, and worthy of its subject."—Scotsman.

Two vols. Crown 8vo. With Portrait. 12s.

MEMOIRS OF ALEXANDRE DUMAS (Pere). Being Selections from the First Five Volumes of "Mes Memoires." Selected and Translated by A. F. DAVIDSON.

"The reader turns over page after page, as if he were perusing for the first time 'The Three Musketeers' or 'Monte Cristo.'"—Globe.

"No one could write 'about it and about it' better than the author of 'Monte Cristo' and 'Le Vicomte Bragelonne'; and he has perhaps never done it so well as in 'Mes Memoires.' There was no great difficulty, then, in making such judicious selections from these two volumes as would have all the seeming of a continuous narrative. This Mr. Davidson has done, and done very skilfully, and his translation is fluent and natural."—World.

"Nobody taking up these volumes will have a single dull page to skip from beginning to end."—Glasgow Herald.

"A book of decided charm."—Guardian.

"Absorbingly interesting, full of Dumas' ebullient enjoyment of life. . . Mr. Davidson has made his extracts with skill and judgment, and he has translated them fluently and idiomatically."—St. James's Gazette.

Medium 8vo. With numerous Illustrations from Sketches by the Author. 18s.

BY TRACK AND TRAIL: a Journey through Canada. By EDWARD ROPER, F.R.G.S.

"Unassumingly instructive, written in a cheerful spirit, and uniformly readable. There is a sprinkling of sport, a good deal of interesting information about Indian aborigines and Chinese colonists."—Daily Telegraph.

"The book is written in a light picturesque style, and is one of the most entertaining records of travel recently published."—Glasgow Herald.

Demy 8vo. With Portrait and Preface by Sir Monier Monier-Williams. 15s.

FIFTY YEARS IN CEYLON: an Autobiography. By Major THOMAS SKINNER, C.M.G., Commissioner of Public Works, Ceylon. Edited by his Daughter, ANNIE SKINNER.

"The colony of Ceylon never had a more faithful servant than Major Skinner. The memory of his sterling character and of the benefits which he conferred upon the colony is still green among both natives and Europeans. On the road, in barracks, or at the dinner-table, camping on Adam's Peak, or hunting wild elephants in the Ceylon forests, he is a capital companion, and full of good feeling and information. . . . The most expressive memorial of the man, however, is this autobiography, written with refreshing vigour, candour, and geniality."—Scotsman.

"To all lovers of genuine manhood, to all who delight in the record of how work worth doing was ably done, to the many who are true sportsmen, and to those who take pleasure in reading the records of a life lived to a noble end, we can recommend this book."—Dublin Evening Mail.

"We can confidently recommend this book, not only to those who are acquainted with our lovely Indian island, but also to the general reader as an interesting record of an honourable life."—Broad Arrow.

Demy 8vo. With Illustrations drawn and engraved by Japanese Artists. 5s.

JAPANESE PLAYS (Versified). By the late THOMAS R. H. MCCLATCHIE. Edited by his Brother, ERNEST S. MCCLATCHIE.

"There is certainly freshness and novelty in these Japanese plays. The text is amusingly illustrated with drawings by Japanese artists."—Graphic.

"The illustrations, with which the letterpress is relieved, are by native draughtsmen, and add largely to the undoubted attractions of the book, which, from the first page to the last, has a delightfully Oriental flavour, and is full of vivacity and freshness."—Pictorial World.

"Praise without stint can be bestowed upon the printing, paper, pictures, and general 'get-up' of the dainty volume which Messrs. Allen have laid before the public; and it may be added that the late Mr. McClatchie, in showing to the benighted Western world the kind of dramatic work which wrings 'tears, cheers, and laughter' from Japanese audiences, has performed a meritorious act."—Vanity Fair.

AND
NAVAL AND MILITARY GAZETTE.

ESTABLISHED 1833.

EVERY SATURDAY. PRICE SIXPENCE.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" has acquired a reputation for early and exclusive intelligence as to Appointments and other Service News, for the high character of its articles, the independent course of its staff of writers, and for its earnest support of all measures for the good of the Services. Articles on specially interesting subjects appear from week to week, written for the most part by officers of rank and experience, or by men of note in literature who have made the Naval and Military affairs of the country their special study. A series of Illustrated Articles is appearing weekly on Regimental Badges and History. Illustrations with descriptions are also given of new Service Inventions.

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" freely opens its correspondence columns to all grades in the Services. By this means an opportunity for interchange of opinion is afforded, such as is offered by no other Service Journal. Its ordinary weekly issue contains fully one-fourth more matter than the other Service Journals, even with their frequent "supplements."

"The Broad Arrow and Naval and Military Gazette" circulates largely throughout India and the Colonies. It is supplied direct to the Army and Marine bureaux of the French, Russian, and other Governments, and it is read extensively by Officers of Foreign Services, especially of the German, French, and American armies, who desire to acquire a true impression of facts and public opinion in England regarding Military affairs.
